AWAKENING OF CHINA IS ABLY DESCRIBED

Rev. Fletcher S. Brockman Tells Interesting Story to Large Congregation.

Rev. Fletcher S. Brockman, who has spent many years as a missionary in China, held the attention of a large congregation in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, yesterday morning, when he described in an interesting manner the great strides toward Christianity which are being made in that country. He told how, prior to the boxer uprising, the work of the missionaries was difficult, because of the impossibility of getting the attention of the educated classes. In China birth and rank play little part in making leaders, the sole qualification upon which a man's strength depends being his education. Mr. Brockman said that of the 400,000,000 people in the Republic only 1,000,000 are in the educated class, and that as soon as that group are brought to Christianity the task will be easy, as it has been found that the lower classes have been easily reached.

The personal experiences related, and the way in which the missionaries have been received since the establishment of the Republic, have convinced Mr. Brockman that by persistent work it will only be a matter of a comparatively short time before all China is brought to a proper conception of religion. Hundreds of the men who are leaders in the Republic today have become Christians, and their influence is so great that new converts are being made by the thousands annually. The entire address teemed with facts regarding the awakening of China, which were new to scores of those in the congregation.

PARK CLUB INFORMAL DANCE LARGELY ATTENDED

Under the auspices of the entertainment committee of which Mrs. Hugh Jarvis is the chairman, an informal dance was given at the Park Club Saturday evening. The affair was largely attended by members and guests and all enjoyed the popular program of the latest dances. During an intermission later in the evening refreshments were served. The dancing was continued until nearly midnight. This was one of the series of similar affairs arranged for the winter.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR UNION PROTESTS AGAINST LICENSES

Clarence B. LaRue, chairman of the good citizenship committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, has sent a communication to the Common Council, a copy of which is as follows:

"As the traffic in intoxicating liquors is a recognized evil and impedes the material, mental, moral and spiritual growth of the people of every community, the Christian Endeavorers of the local union hereby protest against the granting of any licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors in Plainfield and we especially protest against the new license, which the recent action of the Common Council seems to call for, whether it be on North avenue or on Somerset street. We don't need it and we don't want it—that is the Christian citizens of Plainfield don't want it. Neither do we want the way made clear for the corner of Front and Somerset streets to be known as "booze' corner again. That corner has been comparatively clean for some time. Let us keep it so."

STATE PRINTERS' LEAGUE HOLDS QUARTERLY MEETING

The quarterly meeting of the New Jersey State Printers' League was held yesterday in Miller's Hotel, Union Hill, when delegates from nearly every jurisdiction in the State were present. No. 399, of this city, was represented by Harry Thomas and Edward Koechlein.

The session was a rather lengthy one, made so by the large amount of business that had accumulated during the past three months. The following officers were elected: President, Elmer E. Throssell, of Newark; vice-president, Walter Burke, of Elizabeth; secretary, Kenneth M. Forbes, of Jersey City; treasurer, H. W. Thomas, of Plainfield; sergeant-at-arms, H. Aschbach, of Hoboken.

Included in the business of more than ordinary importance was the passing of a resolution condemning the outrageous incident that occurred recently at Roosevelt, in which two men were fatally shot and twenty others injured by non-residents of the State hired by a private detective agency. The resolution will be forwarded to the New Jersey State Legislature.

After the close of business a supper fit for a king was given the delegates by the Union Hill union.

PICKED THE SCOTCH BRAND.

Wet to the skin by the heavy downpour of rain Saturday night, a vagrant passing the bottling company on East Second street noticed a bottle of Scotch rye in the window and determined to get a little interior wetting. He accomplished the feat by smashing one of the large windows, grabbing the liquor and beating a hasty retreat. The police are working on the case.

SHORT AND SHARP.

The fighting man of today has become a military mole.

You can't make a fool of any one without his assistance.

Poland is still an unhappy country, equally willing to be delivered from its enemies and its friends.

Almost any fellow can have a hot time spending his cold cash.

A wise man, like the moon, shows only his bright side to the world.

Predictions that it would be a long war are being unhappily fulfilled.

In Mexico's climate bullet wounds are not complicated by frostbites.

Some men turn over a new leaf and then do as poor writing as before.

Some men are pushed to the front and others get there through pull.

Many a man who is sure he's right goes ahead and finds he was wrong.

As a rule the self appointed censor of other people's morals has a busy time of it.

When a fellow starts out to make a fool of himself he generally finds plenty of capable assistance.

Pity the poor Laplander who has no stockings, but stuffs his boots with moss and never has cold feet.

The most trying thing about an alarm clock is that it always seems to be so pleasantly excited by its performance.

Titles of nobility will be in greater need than ever of support from American dowries after the present unpleasantness is settled.

Short Stories.

Attempts made in western Canada to domesticate the silver fox are meeting with success.

In Seattle harbor ships may lie in either salt or fresh water, with no extreme of heat or cold and no winds exceeding thirty-five miles an hour.

This country now owns 8,000 islands, supporting a population of 10,000,000. The commerce of these islands exceeds $300,000,000, or more than that of the United States in any year prior to 1850.

Hongkong, the financial center of the far east, now contains a population of 500,000, which includes the new territory, the Kowloon extension. The European population does not exceed 14,000. Its banks control to a great extent the trade of China and other portions of the orient.

Echoes of the War.

The war orphans are the wards of the world.—Baltimore American.

War is the one condition that seems to make navigation in a fog the safer way.—Detroit Free Press.

From Scarborough to Bagdad is some 3,000 miles, and there is powder burning all the way.—Boston Herald.

Just now the combatants in the European war are intrenching. After the war they will have to retrench.—St. Paul Dispatch.

In the midst of the turmoil thrifty Japan is managing to lay by a few pieces of territory for a rainy day.—Washington Star.

Laundry Lines.

Fruit stains on linen should be smeared with glycerin and left for about an hour. Then wash the stains in warm, soapy water. Repeat the process if necessary.

To wash discolored embroidery, place in a vessel with cold water, blued, but not too deep and with juice of a lemon. Boil for half an hour and afterward rinse in cold water and dry in fresh air.

Silk handkerchiefs should be washed in a warm lather made with pure soap. This should be blued, as should the rinsing water. Roll up tightly in a cloth and iron the handkerchiefs between linen or they will turn yellow.

Aviation Notes.

A specially strengthened wheel carrying a four inch pneumatic tire has been invented for aeroplanes, as many ordinary wheels are destroyed on landing.

An English aeroplane the wings of which form a ring, the idea being that it will right itself if capsized, has made numerous successful experimental flights.

Experience proves linen to be the best material for covering the wings of aeroplanes. It receives several coats of a solution of casein, which not only strengthens the linen, but makes it as tight as a drum and very smooth.

Wireless Whispers.

Much war news from Europe is flashed across the seas by wireless telegraphy.

A system has been developed whereby wireless messages may be received in safety at all times, even during thunderstorms.

Portable wireless apparatus adopted by the United States army and carried on an automobile of special design has a sending radius of 800 miles and has received messages from points 2,500 miles away.

CHAPTER XVII.

The Mistake of Creation.

"WHOA!" Smoke yelled at the dogs, throwing his weight back on the gee pole to to bring the sled to a halt.

"What's eatin' you now?" Shorty complained. "They ain't no water under that footin'."

"No, but look at that trail cutting out to the right," Smoke answered. "I thought nobody was wintering in this section."

"First I heard of anybody up the Nordbeska," Shorty said, staring at the all but obliterated track. "Mebbe they are hunters an' pulled their freight long ago."

"No," Smoke decided. "There's been travel both ways, but the last travel was up that creek. Whoever they are, they're there now. There's been no travel for weeks. Now what's been keeping them there all the time? Let's follow the track up the creek. There's plenty of dead timber. We can camp any time."

"Sure, we can camp any time, but we got to travel most of the time if we ain't goin' to starve, an' we got to travel in the right direction."

"It won't make the trip a day longer," Smoke urged. "Possibly no more than a mile longer."

"Men has died for as little as a mile," Shorty retorted. "Get up, you poor sorefoots, you—get up! Haw! You. Bright! Haw!"

The lead dog obeyed, and the whole team strained weakly into the soft snow.

"Whoa!" Shorty yelled. "It's pack trail."

Smoke pulled his snowshoes from under the sled lashings, bound them to his moccasined feet and went to the fore to press and pack the light surface for the dogs.

It was heavy work. Dogs and men had been for days on short rations, and few and limited were the reserves of energy they could call upon. The high rocky walls quickly drew near together, so that their way led up near the bottom of a narrow gorge.

"It's a trap," Shorty said. "The whole look of it is rotten. It's a hole in the ground. It's the stampin' ground of trouble."

Smoke made no reply, and for half an hour they toiled on in silence that was again broken by Shorty.

"She's a-workin'," he grumbled. "She's sure a-workin', an' I'll tell you if you're minded to hear an' listen."

"Go on," Smoke answered.

"Well, she tells me, plain an' simple, that we ain't never goin' to get out of this hole in the ground in days an' days. We're goin' to find trouble an' be stuck in here a long time an' then some."

"Does she say anything about grub? We haven't grub for days and days and days, and then some. There's the beginning of your trouble," Smoke said, halting on his snowshoes and staring at an object that lay on one side of the old trail.

Shorty left the gee pole and joined him, and together they gazed down on the body of a man beside the trail.

"Well fed," said Smoke.

"Look at them lips," said Shorty.

"Stiff as a poker," said Smoke, lifting an arm that without moving moved the whole body.

The man lay on his side, solidly frozen. From the fact that no snow powdered him it was patent that he had lain there but a short time.

"There was a general fall of snow three days back," said Shorty.

Smoke nodded, bending over the corpse, twisting it half up to face them and pointing to a bullet wound in the temple. He glanced to the side and tilted his head at a revolver that lay on top of the snow.

A hundred yards farther on they came upon a second body that lay face downward in the trail. "Two things are pretty clear," Smoke said. "They're fat. That means no famine. They've not struck it rich, else they wouldn't have committed suicide."

"If they did," Shorty objected.

"They certainly did. There are no tracks besides their own, and each is powder burned." Smoke dragged the corpse to one side and with the toe of his moccasin nosed a revolver out of the snow into which it had been pressed by the body. "That's what did the work. I told you we'd find something."

"From the looks of it we ain't started yet. Now, what'd two fat geezers want to kill theirselves for?"

"When we find that out we'll have found the rest of your trouble," Smoke answered. "Come on. It's blowing dark."

Quite dark it was when Smoke's snowshoe tripped him over a body. He fell across a sled on which lay another body, and when he had dug the snow out of his neck and struck a match he and Shorty glimpsed a third body, wrapped in blankets, lying beside a partially dug grave; also, ere the match flickered out, they caught sight of half a dozen additional graves.

"B-r-r-r!" Shorty shivered. "Suicide Camp. All fed up. I reckon they're all dead."

"No. Peep at that," Smoke was looking farther along at a dim glimmer of light. "And there's another light—and a third one there. Come on. Let's hike."

No more corpses delayed them, and in several minutes, over a hard packed trail, they were in camp.

"It's a city," Shorty whispered. "There must be twenty cabins. An' not a dog. Ain't that funny?"

"And that explains it," Smoke whispered back excitedly. "It's the Laura Sibley outfit. Don't you remember? Came up the Yukon last fall on the Port Townsend No. 6. Went right by Dawson without stopping. The steamer must have landed them at the mouth of the creek."

"Sure, I remember. They was Mormons."

"No—vegetarians." Smoke grinned in the darkness. They won't eat meat, and they won't work dogs."

"It's all the same. I knowed they was somethin' funny about 'em. Had the all wise steer to the yellow. That Laura Sibley was goin' to take 'em right to the spot where they'd all be millionaires."

"Yes; she was their seeress—had visions and that sort of stuff. I thought they went up the Nordenskjold."

"Huh! Listen to that!"

Shorty's hand in the darkness went out warningly to Smoke's chest, and together they listened to a groan, deep and long drawn, that came from one of the cabins. Ere it could die away it was taken up by another cabin and another—a vast suspiration of human misery. The effect was monstrous and nightmarish.

"B-r-r-r!" Shorty shivered. "It's gettin' me goin'. Let's break in an' find what's eatin' 'em."

Smoke knocked at a lighted cabin and was followed in by Shorty in answer to the "Come in!" of the voice they heard groaning.

"What's the matter?" Smoke demanded of one whose blankets could not hide his broad shoulders and massively muscled body, but whose eyes were pain racked and whose cheeks were hollow. "Smallpox? What is it?"

In reply the man pointed at his mouth, spreading black and swollen lips in the effort, and Smoke recoiled at the sight.

"Scurvy," he muttered to Shorty, and the man confirmed the diagnosis with a nod of the head.

"Plenty of grub?" Shorty asked.

"Yep," was the answer from a man in another bunk. "Help yourself. There's slathers of it. The cabin next on the other side is empty. Cache is right alongside. Wade into it."

In every cabin they visited that night they found a similar situation. Scurvy had smitten the whole camp. Originally there had been ninety-three men and women. But ten had died, and two had recently disappeared. Smoke told of finding the two and expressed surprise that none had gone that short distance down the trail to find out for themselves. What particularly struck him and Shorty was the helplessness of these people. Their cabins were littered and dirty. A cabin's troubles were its own troubles, and already they had ceased from the exertion of burying their dead.

"It's almost weird," Smoke confided to Shorty. "I've met shirkers and loafers, but I never met so many all at one time. You heard what they said. They've never done a tap. I'll bet they haven't washed their own faces. No wonder they got scurvy."

"But vegetarians hadn't ought to get scurvy," Shorty contended. "It's the salt meat eaters that's supposed to fall for it. And they don't eat meat, salt or fresh, raw or cooked, or any other way."

Smoke shook his head. "I know. And it's vegetable diet that cures scurvy. No drugs will do it. Vegetables, especially potatoes, are the only dope. But don't forget one thing, Shorty; we are not up against a theory, but a condition. The fact is these grass eaters have all got scurvy."

"Must be contagious."

"No. That the doctors do know. Scurvy is not a germ disease. It can't be caught. It's generated. As near as I can get it, it's due to an impoverished condition of the blood. Its cause is not something they've got, but something they haven't got. A man gets scurvy for lack of certain chemicals in his blood, and those chemicals don't come out of powders and bottles, but do come out of vegetables."

"An' these people eats nothin' but grass," Shorty groaned. "An' they've got it up to their ears. That proves you're all wrong, Smoke. You're spielin' a theory, but this condition sure knocks the spots out o' your theory. Scurvy's catchin', an' that's why they've all got it, an' rotten bad at that. You an' me'll get it too if we hang around this diggin'."

Smoke laughed skeptically and knocked on a cabin door.

"What do you want?" came a woman's sharp voice.

"We want to see you," Smoke answered.

"Who are you?"

"Two doctors from Dawson," Shorty blurted in, with a levity that brought a punch in the short ribs from Smoke's elbow.

"Don't want to see any doctors," the woman said in tones crisp and staccato. "Go away. Good night. We don't believe in doctors."

Smoke pulled the latch, shoved the door open and entered, turning up the low flamed kerosene lamp so that he could see. In four bunks four women ceased from groaning and sighing to stare at the intruders. Two were young, thin faced creatures; the third was an elderly and very stout woman, and the fourth, the one whom Smoke identified by her voice, was the thinnest, frailest specimen of the human race he had ever seen.

As he quickly learned, she was Laura Sibley, the seeress and professional clairvoyant, who had organized the expedition in Los Angeles and led it to this death camp on the Nordbeska. The conversation that ensued was acrimonious. Laura Sibley did not believe in doctors; also, to add to her purgatory, she had well nigh ceased to believe in herself.

"Why didn't you send out for help?" Smoke asked when she paused, breathless and exhausted from her initial tirade. "There's a camp at Stewart river, and eighteen days' travel would fetch Dawson from here."

"Why didn't Amos Wentworth go?" she demanded, with a wrath that bordered on hysteria.

"Don't know the gentleman," Smoke countered. "What's he been doing?"

"Nothing, except that he's the only one that hasn't caught the scurvy. And why hasn't he caught the scurvy? I'll tell you. No, I won't. And what would have been the use? Don't I know? I'm not a fool. Our caches are filled with every kind of fruit juice and preserved vegetables. We are better situated than any other camp in Alaska to fight scurvy. There is no prepared vegetable, fruit and nut food we haven't, and in plenty."

"She's got you there, Smoke," Shorty exulted. "An' it's a condition, not a theory. You say vegetables cure. Here's the vegetables, an' where's the cure?"

"There's no explanation I can see," Smoke acknowledged. "Yet there is no camp in Alaska like this. I've seen scurvy—a sprinkling of cases here and there—but I never saw a whole camp with it, nor did I ever see such terrible cases, which is neither here nor there, Shorty. We've got to do what we can for these people, but first we've got to make camp and take care of the dogs. We'll see you in the morning—er—Mrs. Sibley."

"Miss Sibley," she bridled. "And now, young man, if you 'come fooling' around this cabin with any doctor stuff I'll fill you full of bird shot."

Next morning, after daylight, Smoke encountered a man carrying a heavy sled load of firewood. He was a little man, clean looking and spry, who walked briskly despite the load. Smoke experienced an immediate dislike.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked.

"Nothing," the little man answered.

"I know that," Smoke said. "That's why I asked you. You're Amos Wentworth. Now, why under the sun haven't you the scurvy like all the rest?"

"Because I've exercised," came the quick reply. "There wasn't any need for any of them to get it if they'd only got out and done something. What did they do? Growled and kicked and grouched at the cold, the long nights, the hardships, the aches and pains and everything else. They loafed in their beds until they swelled up and couldn't leave them, that's all. Look at me. I've worked. Come into my cabin."

Smoke followed him in.

"Squint around. Clean as a whistle, eh? You bet. Everything shipshape. I wouldn't keep those chips and shavings on the floor except for the warmth, but they're clean chips and shavings. You ought to see the floor in some of the shacks. Pigpens. As for me, I haven't eaten a meal off an unwashed dish. No, sir. It meant work, and I've worked, and I haven't the scurvy."

"You've hit the nail on the head," Smoke admitted. "But I see you've only one bunk. Why so unsociable?"

"Because I like to be. It's easier to clean up for one than two, that's why. The lazy blanket loafers! Do you think that I could have stood one around? No wonder they got scurvy."

It was very convincing, but Smoke could not rid himself of his dislike of the man.

"What's Laura Sibley got it in for you for?" he asked abruptly.

Amos Wentworth shot a quick look at him. "She's a crank," was the reply. "So are we all cranks, for that matter. But heaven save me from the crank that won't wash the dishes that he eats off of, and that's what this crowd of cranks are like."

A few minutes later Smoke was talking with Laura Sibley. Supported by a stick in either hand, she had paused in hobbling by his cabin.

"What have you got it in for Wentworth for?" he asked with a suddenness that caught her off her guard.

Her green eyes flashed bitterly and her sore lips writhed on the verge of unconsidered speech. But only a splutter of gasping, unintelligible sounds issued forth, and then, by a terrible effort, she controlled herself.

"Because he's healthy," she panted; "because he hasn't the scurvy; because he is supremely selfish; because he won't lift a hand to help anybody else; because he is letting us rot and die without lifting a finger to fetch us a pail of water or a load of firewood. That's the kind of a brute he is."

Still panting and gasping, she hobbled on her way, and five minutes afterward, coming out of the cabin to feed the dogs, Smoke saw her entering Amos Wentworth's cabin.

"Something rotten here, Shorty, something rotten," he said, shaking his head. "We've got to make them hustle. First thing they'll have to bury their dead. The strongest for the burial squad, then the next strongest on the firewood squad (they've been lying in their blankets to save wood), and so on down the line. And spruce tea. Mustn't forget that. All the sour doughs swear by it. These people have never even heard of it."

"We sure got burn cut out for us," Shorty grinned. "First thing we know we'll be full of lead."

"And that's our first job," Smoke said.

In the next hour each of the twenty odd cabins was raided. All ammunition and every rifle, shotgun and revolver was confiscated.

"Come on, you invalids," was Shorty's method. "Shootin' irons—fork 'em over. We need 'em."

"Who says so?" was the query at the first cabin.

"Two doctors from Dawson," was Shorty's answer. "An' what they say goes. Come on. Shell out ammunition too."

"What do you want them for?"

"To stand off a war party of canned beef comin' down the canyon. And I'm givin' you fair warnin' of a spruce tea invasion. Come across."

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

More than ordinary interest is attached to the announcement from the Plainfield Theatre that George Ade's remarkable comedy-drama success, "The County Chairman," will be shown in motion pictures at the playhouse this afternoon and tonight, as well as tomorrow afternoon and night. It was this great production that opened the Plainfield Theatre when it began its career August 24, 1905. The city had been without a playhouse for four years, and when the "County Chairman" was presented by W. J. Counihan, a capacity audience laughed and cried by turn as the heart-throbbing story of love and politics was unfolded. Henry W. Savage produced "The County Chairman" more than ten years ago, and it is he who presents the same play in picture form. Maclyn Arbuckle and Willis P. Sweatman are seen in their original roles of "Jim Hackler" and "Sassafrass Livingston" and it goes without saying that hundreds of Plainfield people who saw these men act in 1905 will view the pictures in 1915. Two other moving picture treats are promised for Plainfield Theatre patrons this week. On Wednesday and Thursday there will be shown the magnificent spectacle, "Cabiria," which cost $250,000 and required fourteen months to produce. Although this offering has always been shown at advanced prices, there will be no change in prices during this engagement. Another big feature at the Plainfield will be seen Friday and Saturday, when Mary Pickford, the highest priced motion picture star in the business, will be seen in her latest production, "Behind the Scenes," a play of theatrical life in five parts. In the role of the little actress, about whom the story revolves, Miss Pickford renders one of the best characterizations of her brilliant career.

The Daily Press will be glad o have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement, if such should appear at any time in an advertisement in its columns.

Animal Jingles
FOR LITTLE FOLKS
By ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Oliver Owl

A long time ago when the whole world was new,
A kindly old fairy named Mother McGrew
Looked after the animals both great and small;
Without her they could have done nothing at all.

She helped them play games, she looked after their food,
Corrected their manners whene'er they were rude;
And the animals loved her, because they all knew
That their very good friend was old Mother McGrew.

Now Oliver Owl, who lived up in a tree,
Was in most ways as good as could possibly be,
But Mother McGrew used to shake her old head,
For Oliver simply would not go to bed.

When the others at night were asleep safe and sound,
Young Oliver Owl could nowhere be found,
And Mother McGrew had to get out and prowl
Around in the dark for that sleepless young fowl.

Sometimes she would find him perched up in a tree,
Or flying about as gay as could be.
She'd scold him right soundly and when she was through Young Oliver Owl only answered "Whoo! Whoo!"

At last she got clear out of patience and said,
"Well, Oliver Owl, if you won't go to bed,
I'll just have to punish you soundly; I'll make
You sleep in the day, and at night stay awake."

Then Oliver saw that in her right hand
Was a stick, which he knew was a magical wand,
And before he had time so much as to speak,
She reached out and touched him three times on the beak.

And from that very minute the Owls, so they say,
Stay awake all night long, and sleep through the day.
I really don't think I would like that, do you?
He'd better have minded old Mother McGrew.

Adventures in Matrimony
By MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Miss White, I have a favor to ask of you," said Bailey, the youthful telegraph editor, coming up to my desk one afternoon when my assistant had been sent on an errand. I looked up, expectant.

"I want to know if I can move my table a little nearer. You see it's this way," he hastened to explain, as he saw the look of astonishment on my face, "I am very much interested in Miss Mason, your assistant."

He was fussed a little at my comprehending smile.

"Now, it's not the 'I would I were a glove upon that hand' sort of thing, but I have a theory that if a man wants to get in right with a girl he's got to bring himself to her attention in a natural sort of way. He's got to be in evidence. I can do that without seeming fresh if I can work near by, and I thought perhaps——"

"Certainly, come along, I should enjoy being an overruling providence in such an affair," and I wiped out my smile.

"Thank you, Miss White," and Bailey extended his paw.

The next morning Bailey was installed in his new quarters and with his nose glued to his copy was faithfully sawing wood. I watched Miss Mason out of the tail of my eye. It was evident that she was taking in all his attractions, and he is a good looking chap.

Going home that night I sprained my ankle and was confined to the house for two months, sending copy down by the office boy and directing affairs over the phone.

One evening Bailey dropped in "to see how I was coming on." I laughed after he went away, for I remembered he had never asked after my ankle, but the poor fellow had other things to think of.

"I wish you'd hurry up and get well, Miss White. We miss you," he began. I smiled. "Honest! You see Lacy, the new court reporter, had the nerve to ask to use your desk till you came back."

"I see," I said, looking intelligent. "He is a convert to your theory. How does your affair prosper?"

"Well, the presence of another man is most distracting to the attention. However, she's going to the theater with me tomorrow night," he replied.

The next day the office boy said, while I tied up my copy: "Oh, Miss White, get a move on ye and get back to the office. You're losin' out, believe me, not seein' the antics of Bailey in love. Honest, it would bring tears to the eyes of a brass monkey. He's moved his table round so as to face her; says the light's better there. The boys are all betting on who'll win. You see, Lacy's in the race, too. Gee whiz!" and he was gone.

That afternoon Miss Mason called. We had become good friends before I twisted my ankle. The girl looked drooping and I suspected she had been crying.

"You look tired," I began, to give her an excuse to unbosom herself. "Are they working you too hard because I am not there to see after you?"

"It's not that," she said weakly, "but we are in trouble at home. Mother's got to go to the hospital, and father's lost his job. I am the only breadwinner and I don't earn much, you know."

Before she left she told me she was going to the theater Friday night with Lacy, if her mother was no worse.

This was Wednesday. After she left I called up the office and asked for Bailey. When he answered I said:

"Mr. Bailey, I have private information on a subject we know about. My advice is, speak at once. The hour has struck. Do you get me?"

"You get it over all right. Thank you," he answered.

I heard nothing more till Saturday evening when the pair presented themselves in my parlor. Bailey rushed up to me and wrung his hand, "Let me introduce the future Mrs. Bailey!" and he beamed down on the blushing girl. As she gave me her hand she bent over and whispered, "Mr. Bailey has got a job for my father." She was so full of the joyful tidings that she could contain them no longer.

"'Tisn't every girl who gets a proposal twice in one week," said Bailey, bulgy with pride, "but Lacy didn't have Miss White to tip him the word at the right moment."

We all laughed at that.

They are nice children. I'm going to do something handsome for them when they are married.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Do you like hot bread for dinner? Place a pie tin in your steamer, then put a loaf of bread on it, close tight and put over potato kettle when you put potatoes on to boil. When dinner is ready, you have nice, fresh hot bread right from the—steamer! This is just as nice as when wrapped in a wet cloth and placed in hot oven and saves gas.

To melt ice on doorstep, sprinkle salt on ice and in a little while ice will be melted.

For apple pie, singe apple over a flame, turning it from side to side; the peeling comes off like a scalded tomato; apples taste fine.

By soaking oatmeal over night it can be cooked in 15 minutes and have the flavor of cooking many hours.

To make brooms last longer, dip the brush part half way to where it is tied in the brush in hot suds once in a while; dry well. It toughens the straw.

To make old wooden sink look like white enamel, take white oilcloth, fit it over sink perfectly and tack down underneath. Unless you see it close by you will think it white enamel.

Filling for Sofa Pillows—Get a dime's worth of cotton batting, cut it in small squares and heat in oven in a baking pan, leaving it there for half an hour. Do not let the cotton scorch. Every little square will be twice its size and will be as light as feathers and as fluffy. Will not mash down if laid on.

HOMEMADE BAKING POWDER

Recipe No. 1—Mix well and sift together one pound of cream of tartar and one-half pound cornstarch. Add one-half pound baking soda and sift again several times.

Keep in tin cans, and after two weeks, during which time it is undergoing the sweating process, sift again. But it is ready for use immediately after first mixing if you care to use it.

Recipe No. 2—Mix together one-half pound tartaric acid 1½ pounds cornstarch and 1½ pounds cream tartar. Sift several times, add 1¼ pounds baking soda. Sift again. Put in closed cans for two weeks, sift again; will not lump again.

FOR SORE THROAT OR QUINSY

Take bowl, put boiling water in it, and add a few drops of essence of peppermint. Put a funnel over bowl and inhale vapor. It is cooling and in case of quinsy it will help gather. It is also good when you have a cough.

THE TABLE.

Apricot Fromage—Take one pound dried apricots, wash clean and soak over night in cold water. Boil in same water until perfectly tender, then put in sugar to suit taste. While still hot put them in a bowl with only half cup of the juice mash up fine, then add one cup sugar and half box gelatine dissolved, mixing all together thoroughly. When it begins to cool, stir in beaten whites of four eggs. Put in mold that has been dipped in cold water, and put in cool place. For dressing, take a quart of milk and put on to boil in double boiler. Beat yolks of the eggs with half cup sugar until they are white, then put in one tablespoon cornstarch and a little vanilla. When milk boils, mix it all and let come to boiling point. When cool, serve with the apricot fromage. You can use whipped cream for dressing if preferred.

Fruit Pudding—One orange, one banana, half can pineapple; prepare fruit by cutting in smal cubes (do not use juice from pineapple) and carefully remove all white skin from orange. Place fruit in pretty glass dish. Put one pint milk in double boiler. Separate whites and yolks of two eggs, add one tablespoon cornstarch to yolks, stir in milk and cook well. Remove from fire, flavor with almond. Beat whites to stiff froth, flavor with rose, fold very lightly in custard, pour over fruit; serve cold. A dainty dessert for six people.

"Orange Toast"—A recipe which is very tasty and also a fine way of getting rid of stale bread which otherwise would probably be thrown out. Take stale bread, cut in slices, dip each piece separately in following mixture: One egg (beaten well) to one-half pint milk. When bread is softened in the mixture, put the frying pan on, have it very hot, and put slices on pan. Fry until brown. Then remove from pan, slice oranges on them and sprinkle with powdered sugar (for the granulated). This makes a delicious dish and also a very inexpensive one.

SECOND EPISODE.

In Pursuit of the Runaway Bride

CHAPTER I.

THE runaway bride, who led the chase, seemed to be lucky, for the traffic opened before her like magic and closed behind her like a wall. As she turned into Central park at Fifty-ninth street, safe from immediate pursuit, the black Vandyked man's car was in a snarl at Fifth-sixth. As he came out of that pocket he leaned forward, after a look ahead, and spoke crisply to his driver. They stopped at the Plaza hotel, and the man, hurrying up the steps, suddenly paused. With a smile he drew from his pocket a tiny gold watch and opened it. Inside the lid was the picture of a beautiful young girl with a handsome collie. The black Vandyked man gazed at the picture for a moment in frowning meditation. It was the runaway bride.

As he entered the hotel Ned's taxi, with the fluttering white ribbons, passed and turned into the park just as June Warner turned out of it at Seventy-second street, heading for Riverside drive.

At that hour Iris Blethering sat pouring her voluble sadness into the ears of Bobbie in the Blethering home on Riverside drive. She had been school day chum and the bosom friend of June Moore, but now there was no June Moore, only a June Warner, and June Warner might become a stranger.

"Rot," observed Bobbie. "How long are they going to be gone?"

"Three weeks. It's an eternity, Bobbie!"

"Rot," said Bobbie. "Why doesn't somebody answer that doorbell?"

It had only just rung, and immediately the hollow Blethering butler came through. He did not return to announce any one, however. Instead the caller rushed straight in and threw herself into the arms of Iris.

"June!"

Bobbie Blethering stood by and watched the tableau for a moment; then he went to the door and looked out.

"Where's Ned?" he quite naturally inquired.

"Junie," pleaded Iris, "where's Ned?"

"I—I—I left Ned!" June wailed. "I ran away!"

"Aw, I say!" protested Bobbie.

"What did he do, dear?" This from Iris.

"He—he gave me money!"

"He gave you money!" Iris repeated this numbly after awhile. "Did you say he gave you money?"

The Black Vandyked Man.

"Yes." June straightened up as she recognized the difficulty which lay before her. Iris, while a warm and loyal friend, was not exactly a thoughtful person nor a sensitive one and might perhaps not understand the deep ethical significance of what had happened. Bobbie didn't count.

"Just after the wedding breakfast mother gave me a purse, and if I had not left that on the library table at home I might not have known my predicament until it was too late. When Ned and I were on the train, however, I missed the purse. While I was telling Ned about it he tipped the porter a dollar in his nice, cheery way; then he turned around and gave me $30—in just the same way! Don't you see?" And she shuddered with the recollection of her humiliation. "Then I had a dream," went on June, with more vigor, bound now to make them understand. "I saw myself being paid for being a wife, as mummy pays the servants and Ned pays his stenographer. I saw Ned giving me money as he gives it to beggars! I saw myself always holding out my hand for charity!" And she was a most pathetic little figure as she upturned her palm. "I couldn't stand it. So I threw down the $30 and slipped off the train and came back."

"But you had no money!" said Iris.

"I got on the train anyhow and sold my watch to a funny old lady," June explained. She paused to remember something—the black Vandyked man who now had her watch. He had bought it from the old lady on the train, so that June could some day redeem it. That was very nice of him.

He Caught Up the Portrait and Pressed It to His Lips.

She had his card and was reaching for it when she noticed that Iris had gone to the telephone.

"You mustn't telephone anybody!" the runaway bride insisted. "You would be betraying my confidence."

"But what do you intend to do?"

"What about Ned?" Bobbie suddenly blurted, the thought of young Warner, alone on the train with the honeymoon luggage, flashing on his mind.

"Ned's a darling!" And June's lip quivered. "He's an angel! But I cannot be a burden to be carried on Ned's back. I shall stay away from Ned until I achieve my own independence. Then we can walk together hand in hand—in mutual self respect and accepting from each other nothing but love!

"It is for his happiness as well as for mine," June insisted firmly. "The world will not be happy until women walk in strict equality with men, Iris, dear." She saw by the face of her friend that cold logic was wasted. The two girls walked upstairs, and Iris ushered her still bosom friend into a cozy little guest room.

Meanwhile Ned Warner began to be familiar with the bronze panther on the overhanging rock in the park and, casting back in his memory, reflected that he must have passed it about five times.

But why had June married him? Why had she walked down the aisle of the Brynport chapel with him that morning? Perhaps the black Vandyked man was married, and marriage was the only road to June's freedom.

He could stand this train of thoughts no longer. He whirled up Riverside drive, past the very house where June was then talking to Iris and turned his key in the lock of the place which was to have been home. Home! And this was his return! Here were all the furnishings which they had bought together. Here had clustered all his dreams of happiness.

It must be his task to find that man!

June was still June—and his June! He caught up the portrait and pressed it to his lips and held it in his arms and sank down by the bed sobbing.

At that moment June and Iris were sitting in the big walnut paneled library, and Bobbie wandered in. When he saw the girls he started back.

"Don't go, Bobbie!" called Iris. She walked straight up to him and held out her hand. "Produce!"

"What's the price?" he asked.

"Oh, a hundred."

"How did you guess my roll?" inquired the cheerful Bobbie, dragging up a handful of bills with nonchalant ease, at which June smiled in spite of her embarrassment. She had always been amused at the matter of fact and open way in which these two discussed finances. Bobbie counted his money and held back a fragment of it. "Here's your hundred, and I'm seven to the good."

"Oh!" gasped June as the significance of the tableau suddenly dawned upon her. Why, they were almost in the same position in which she had seen herself when she was Ned's piteous little beggar.

"Thanks, Bobbie," said Iris and turned to June. "If you want more, honey, in your struggle for independence, come right back, and I'll make Bobbie give it to us."

June shrank away. "Oh, I can't possibly take it! I didn't know you were going to ask Bobbie!"

"Where else do I get it?" blurted the bosom friend. "Bobbie's the easiest way."

"That's just it," June pointed out. "Can't you see what a beggar a dependent woman is? Don't you see that if I can't accept a gift of money from my husband I can't possibly let you accept for me a gift of money from your husband? Don't be angry, Iris, please. I'm fighting for a principle."

"Oh, Mr. Thomas Rot!" exploded Bobbie.

"That attitude is at the bottom of the whole thing, Bobbie," argued June, with spirit. "Because the man has supported the woman for ages he has made himself the master. That destroys the woman's self respect, and love dies."

"She's a fine kid," said Bobbie heartily, "but if she's going to draw the line on money which has been handed from a man to a woman she'll have to get it fresh from the mint."

"What will you do, June?" fretted Iris.

"If I only had that purse mummy gave me," mused June.

"She got that from your father," Bobbie was unkind enough to remind her.

"Oh, that was daddy's money," she brightly replied, no trace of concern on her brow, "and it's the last I can take from them now that I'm married. Iris, couldn't you go out to the house and say you'll send it to me?"

"Just the thing!" Iris was bubbling immediately with enthusiasm. "We'll go right out now. Bobbie, call the car."

"You mustn't let them know I'm here," warned June. "You mustn't let any one know!"

Within five minutes Iris and Bobbie in the swift little runabout were headed for Brynport. In the library June had found a picture of Ned among some other intimate photographs, and it was with constant reference to this and amid constant talking to it and constant caressing of it that she penned her important message:

My Poor, Dear Boy—I cannot explain in a letter what happened today. When I am free, dear Ned, I will make you understand and forgive. You must not try to find your unhappy bride. JUNE.

CHAPTER II.

AUNT DEBBY came around the corner of the Moore house in all her glory—stiff lavender dress with the red posies on it, yellow hat with the green feather, tan shoes and blue stockings.

"Howdy, Aunt Debby!" Bobbie Blethering, with his chattel beside him, swung up the drive in his fast little runabout.

June's parents came to the door, John J. Moore in the blue and tan smoking jacket which he had refused to wear until tenderness at June's approaching departure had brought him to it, and Charlotte Moore in the gray silk dress embroidered by June's own hands.

"Come right in," heartily invited Father Moore, and Mother Moore, with soft eyes, shook Bobbie by one hand and Iris by both.

"We have only a minute to stay," began Iris, starting to talk as they went into the library. "I heard from June," Iris rattled on. Father Moore, in the parlor, came straight over.

"She missed her purse," glibly went on Iris, while Bobbie eyed her with admiration. "She's afraid she lost it. Did she leave it here?"

"Right on that table." And Mrs Moore's eyes sparkled. She took it from a drawer in a desk.

"That girl always was careless about money," laughed Mr. Moore as if it were a virtue.

Bobbie glanced at Iris. She was as serene as a plate of ice cream.

"I'll send it to her," offered Iris, and Mrs. Moore smilingly put it in her hand.

"Why didn't June wire us?" puzzled father, his fists bulging in the pockets of his gay smoking jacket.

"Yes, why didn't she?" Mother's voice was full of anxiety, but as she saw the unruffled expression of Iris Blethering's face she began to bridle. If Junie could wire her friend, why couldn't she wire her mother?

"You have such slow delivery out here," promptly explained Iris.

"Just what did she say?"

Iris cast her eyes to the ceiling and began telling off the words on her fingers.

"Phone mother I can't find my purse. Did I forget it? Extremely happy. Bushels of love to all. June."

Twenty minutes were all the callers could spare. They drove down the boulevard. A taxicab flashed by them, but they did not notice it. Ned Warner was in the taxi, and he was out and up on the porch before the machine had come to a full stop. John Moore answered the bell, and he stood as if petrified when he saw his son-in-law's expression.

"Have you heard from June?" husked Ned.

"Isn't she with you?" The voice of Moore was strained and tense.

Mrs. Moore came hurrying out, her face ashen.

"Junie!" she cried. She ran down to the taxi and peered in through the open window. She came running back and caught Ned by the arm. "Where is my girl?"

"Then she isn't here?" gasped Ned.

"Come inside." John Moore's voice had lost all its color. He led the way into the library. "Now, what is all this about? Why are you here alone?"

"I don't know. June is somewhere in New York. I was in hopes you had heard from her."

"We did! She telegraphed to Iris that she had lost her purse. Iris left here with it to mail it to June."

"Then that's where she is!" There was relief in Ned's voice.

"Sit down," said Moore. "Why are you not with her?"

"I don't know." There was a choke in Ned's voice. "She left me on the train—slipped away at Farnville."

"She wouldn't do such a thing without good cause!" declared Mrs. Moore with firm conviction.

"What happened?" This sharply from Moore.

"I don't understand. She told me she lost her purse. I gave her some money, and she went to sleep with her head on my shoulder. I pillowed her more comfortably on the seat by and by and went into the smoker. I dropped in to look at her about every five minutes, and when I came back after we had passed Farnville she was gone. She left the money on the seat. Here it is." And he showed them the three crumpled bills, one partly torn.

"How do you know she returned to New York?" demanded Moore.

"I saw her. I got off at the next station and telephoned. The station master at Farnville reported that he saw her getting on a down train. I took an express and overhauled her as we came into the Grand Central station. I saw her leave the station and get into a taxi."

"You are holding something back!" Moore charged. "I want to know the truth!"

"You have all I can tell you," declared Ned. He would not tell them about the black Vandyked man, and June was Mrs. Warner now.

"Will you get your wraps, please Charlotte?" June's father finally said and rose. "We are going to Iris. I'll order the car."

They were grim and silent as they sped away.

While they rode the black Vandyked man, in Sherry's, sat at the end of a long table between a jovial host with a gray mustache and a ponderous man with heavily lidded eyes and short hair.

There were a dozen placed at the table, and wine hissed at every plate but the others of the party, which included a half dozen vivacious and gayly gowned young women, were dancing. The three men talked in low tones, their heads bent together, and the black Vandyked man was the most silent. Finally he began to talk and grew enthusiastic, and presently he drew forth June's little gold watch. Then he flashed open the lid. All three men bent eagerly over it. They gazed upon the lovely features of the runaway bride, their faces bent close together. They clapped the black Vandyked man on the shoulder.

It was during this time that June Warner, sitting quietly in a corner of the library with Bobbie and Iris and with her mother's purse still in her hand, heard a familiar voice in the vestibule.

"Daddy!" She dashed from her chair in a flash and went upstairs to her room.

"Where's Junie?" Mrs. Moore had pushed through ahead of the men.

John Moore walked straight to Bobbie Blethering and shook an awe inspiring finger at that young man.

"Where's my girl?" he demanded.

Bobbie slowly straightened.

"Well, she's here," he said. "What of it?"

"I'll tell you what of it!" said Iris "June has decided not to see any of you just yet, and she won't!"

"Iris," begged Mrs. Moore, "what does it all mean?"

Iris took two letters from the mantel She gave one to Ned and one to Mrs

"Why are you here alone?"

Moore. Her husband looked over her shoulder. The letter was addressed to—

Dear Daddy and Mummy—I cannot explain in a letter why I was compelled to leave Ned. Some day I will make you understand and forgive. Please be good to dear Ned and love

YOUR LITTLE JUNIE.

"Here's the man!" shouted Ned, his voice full of sudden fury. He held a pair of gloves in one hand and a card in the other. "These are June's gloves. They were lying on the table, and this card was in them!"

"They're my gloves!" called Iris, but Ned laughed at her. There was no mistaking those dainty, blue embroidered bits of white kid.

"Now, I'll tell you," went on Ned. "This man, Gilbert Blye, whose name I now know for the first time, was with her from the moment she left me until she came here. He is a tall, black Vandyked man, and at Farnville he was seen assisting June on the down train. I saw them myself through the car window talking together. I want to find Gilbert Blye! Are you hiding him too?" And he turned savagely on Iris.

Bobbie lounged forward. "That'll do, Ned," he warned. "Iris, call June."

"Junie!" They heard Iris throwing doors open and running through the house, calling June. Ned dared up the stairs, but in the hall Iris met him with a frightened face. "She is gone!"

They all searched for her then, but there was no trace of her.

CHAPTER III.

MRS. GILBERT BLYE was in shrill voiced converse with a big green parrot, which, from length and sharpness of nose and height of eye arches, might have been a sister to her. A maid announced that some one had wanted to see Mr. Blye, and, since he was not at home, would Mrs. Blye care to say where he was? He came to New York on an early train.

Mrs. Blye rose instantly. She sailed straight into the hall and confronted the five earnest visitors. "Did you say Mr. Blye returned on an early train?"

"Yes." Ned tried not to speak curtly. "I saw him."

"I am Mrs. Blye. Is there anything I can do for you?" The lady was studying the group with a shrewlike penetration. Mrs. Blye began to worry herself. Also she began to suspect. That last was her specialty. "If you will tell me the nature of your business with Mr. Blye I may be able to locate him."

"I want my daughter!" blurted out John Moore, his lips squaring.

"Oh!" And Mrs. Blye's voice rose. "Your daughter!" She glared at them for a moment. "Will you please wait?" she asked and sailed back through the hall. They could hear her sharp voice telephoning. She had called her husband's club, and they heard her exclaim indignantly, "Where, Sherry's?" She was back, blazing. She had her hat in her hand. "He's at Sherry's!" she shrilled.

An electric coupe stood at the door. She slammed into that, turned on the lights and rolled away with as much vigor as was in the capacity of her machine. Bobbie's runabout darted after her and passed her and then came the limousine with Mr. and Mrs. Moore and Ned.

Poor June! It had been hard for her to leave those beloved voices down there in the library, but she had made up her mind very firmly that neither she nor Ned could be happy if she was always to feel that she was a chattel. She ran back to the desk for Ned's photograph, then stepped lightly out on the tiny side porch, jumped down to the little embankment and fled, as light as thistledown, along the side of the house and out at the little grocer's gate.

Where now should she go? The apartments, their home, hers and Ned's! She hurried up in that direction, but at the first corner she stopped for an instant and darted over toward Broadway. She had realized three things almost simultaneously—first, that they might come out of the Blethering house at any instant and see her; second, that she had no key and, third, that Ned might come there. It would be the most likely place for him to go in his loneliness.

In fond memory, stopping at the first dark corner, she went over each of the dear rooms, furnished just to fit her and delight her—the white and gold reception room, the white and rose drawing room, the white and black library, the white and blue bedroom, the all white kitchen. She saw Ned in every room and herself there. Now flushed and happy she was experimenting with the toy range, now they were dining together all alone. She was playfully feeding Ned, and he was seasoning the meal with stolen kisses, walking clear around the table to get them. They were spending an evening of blissful companionship in the library.

She suddenly held her handkerchief to her mouth to choke back a sob. On Broadway she hailed a passing taxi.

* * * * * * *

All was sparkling at Sherry's, but Gilbert Blye had taken small share in the hilarity. He had risen to go when a black eyed young woman, the most vivacious of the party, called him to task for his evening of secret scheming. "You're up to some devilment," she charged, playfully tweaking his beard. "Come and dance with me."

"Sorry, Tommy," he told her, with that queer smile on his lips, "but I've a previous engagement."

"She can wait," pouted the girl. She dragged Blye away from the table.

"Take my car, Gil!" called the gray mustached host.

"Certainly," replied Blye, and the three men exchanged a smile. "I'll dance one round with Tommy; then I'll go."

Before that round was over, however, Gilbert Blye saw an apparition in the doorway, and his face turned cold. The apparition was a tall, angular woman with a long, high nose and high arched brows, who was trying to bore Gilbert Blye through and through with a double eyed glare of burning ferocity. He hurried over to his wife. She had shrilled:

"Who is that woman?" One lean, long finger pointed accusingly at the vivacious black eyed girl with whom Gil had been dancing.

"I shall explain nothing," said Gilbert. "I'm through."

He left her contemptuously, leaving her stunned by this unexpected revolt. As he went down the steps he heard her shrieking something after him, and he hurried. As he dashed out of the door he ran into a group who were coming in. They were the Moores, the Bletherings and Ned Warner, and he was upon them and past them and jumping into the luxuriously furnished racing limousine, with the little watch in his hand, before they realized that this was the man they were seeking.

"There he goes!" cried Ned. "The scoundrel!"

Blye, moving rapidly away, saw the confusion and blamed his wife for the scene, for now she was in the lead of the excited group, which was rushing toward him.

* * * * * * *

The house of the Moores at Brynport was dark when June arrived, the dear old house. It stood back amid the dim trees, with a dignity and beauty which she had never before thoroughly appreciated, and at the gate she hesitated as if, with no one to welcome her, she had no right here.

There was a welcome, though, and a joyous one, a loud, hearty one, a series of delighted barks from her dog Bouncer.

The hole through which he usually emerged had been found and closed, but he wasted no time on that. He merely came through the window, bringing a part of the sash with him, and here he was running circles around her, leaping at her, crouching, barking at the top of his voice, doing everything in his power to show her that she was a welcome visitor at this place and in his heart at any hour of the night or day.

He had known her very presence from far back in the shed.

It was the work of a minute for June to clamber through an unlocked kitchen window and to rush upstairs, get her maid, Marie, seize several garments and drag with her the astounded servant.

"Miss June! Miss June!" cried Aunt Debby, out of breath from running, but June only waved a hand at her as the taxi swept out of the drive.

A limousine had stopped in front of the house, and a black Vandyked man had alighted.

"Miss Moore!" he called, but June's taxi rattled on. He jumped in his own car and gave the word and started in swift pursuit.

The two machines were still in sight when the runabout of Bobbie and Iris dashed around the circle.

"Is June here?" called Iris.

"Lawdy, no!" puffed Aunt Debby. "Dat's her goin' yonder!"

The runabout was gone with a whiz, and immediately after came the family limousine.

"Is June here?" called all three of the occupants at once.

"She's just done gone! The gentleman with black whiskers has just done gone! Mr. Bobbie and Miss Iris has just done gone! Whooh!"

Around the corner there rolled an electric coupe. It was brilliantly lighted, and in it sat an angular woman with a high, long nose and high arched brows, beneath which glittered two sharp eyes.

"Say!" shrilled the occupant of the electric.

Aunt Debby, her broad hand on her stomach, pointed down the road.

BRILLIANT FINISH GAVE P. H. S. FIRST BLOOD IN LEAGUE RACE

North Plainfield High School Quintet Succumbed to Flashy Rally in Final Minutes, the Score Being 17 to 16—Boroughites Had Chance to Tie up Matters After the Game Was Over—Crowd of 600 Saw Game—Enthusiasm Unchecked—Great Exhibition of the Court Pastime by Two Evenly Matched Teams.

One of the most thrilling athletic engagements ever participated in by rival forces of North Plainfield and Plainfield High Schools Saturday afternoon resulted in a 17 to 16 triumph for the local schoolboys, the contest being the first between these two factions in the Interscholastic League race. Plainfield won the contest by a flashy burst of speed in the final three minutes of play, coming up from a four-point disadvantage to a 16-16, which "Bennie" Rosenson disrupted with a one point penalty throw in the final minute. Several seconds before the timers' whistles signalled the culmination of the encounter, a foul for holding was levied on P. H. S. but because of the incessant din the referee's whistle was not heard until the end of the contest had been announced. North Plainfield was given an opportunity to tie up matters after the final whistle had chirped and if "Ronnie" Conroy had been successful in caging the ball there is no telling how the meeting would have ended. One point would have meant an extra session.

The ten combatants waged a battle for blood for twenty minute periods and there was not the slightest semblance of a let-up in either team's battling from the beginning to the end. While those actually in the fight were scrimmaging in a tooth and nail fashion 600 rabid followers, with sentiment about evenly distributed, gave one of the greatest demonstrations of vocal possibilities ever heard here. The crowd was without a doubt the largest and most enthusiastic in the history of the league and those who visited Saengerbund Hall for the purpose of giving vent to their feelings certainly got sufficient opportunity to dispell all surplus energy.

Plainfield won the game by the narrowest of narrow margins. Apparently contented to let the boroughites set the pace for three-quarters of the encounter the Plainfielders rose to the final effort in the last few minutes, and summoning every bit of reserve strength, swept to the fore with a superhuman burst of speed. That gave the Queen Cityites the victory but it did not serve to detract from the home five's brilliancy.

It is hard enough for an interscholastic athlete to bear the sting of defeat administered by a bitter rival when the score is lop-sided, but it is harder to endure when it becomes necessary to "split hairs" in order to gain a verdict. North Plainfield's display of true sportsmanship and grace in accepting defeat never loomed up brighter than in Saturday's engagement. The boroughites were high in the praise of the conquering quintet and resigned themselves to the beating, feeling that they had done their best and that the visitors had won on merit alone.

One regrettable feature of the encounter was the inability of both teams to shoot fouls, North Plainfield missing on sixteen attempts from the stripe foot mark and Plainfield missing seventeen. A total of forty-three penalties was inflicted, not one of which was of an intentional nature. Plainfield scored six field goals to their rivals' five, therein lying the secret of victory.

Two more evenly matched quintets have never faced each other before on a city or borough court. At the outset it could be readily seen that the battle was anybody's and the prediction that the race would be nip and tuck was fully justified. In the initial period N. P. H. S. outscored the opposition by a margin of eleven to six, and matters were completely reversed in the final session, P. H. S. out-tallying the boroughites by eleven points to five.

Both teams exhibited rare cleverness in manipulating the sphere and time and again a spasm of passing was launched that took the spectators completely off their feet. The team-work was smooth, the guarding close and what little shooting was attempted proved accurate.

In holding the tally card down to a high water mark of seventeen points, the guards displayed some of the best goal preventative work seen in a league struggle. To Captain Abrams, and Hebert, of North Plainfield, and to Wheelan and Peacock, of Plainfield, goes a large portion of the credit for the closeness of the score. It was a case of captain against captain, both being in the game every second of play, putting up a stubborn, scrappy fight. Rosenson and Hebert played a game the exact replica of that put up by the captains, these four players being conspicuous because of their tooth and nail fighting.

From his position at guard Wheelan, a new man on the red and blue outfit this year, tallied three double deckers, the best collection of the afternoon. Little "Wren" Townley bagged a pair of beauties for North Plainfield and Hebert also collected twice from difficult angles.

SIDELINE GLEANINGS

Anyone not acquainted with the fact that a basketball game of great importance had been decided in Saengerbund Hall, Saturday afternoon, might think that the Roosevelt strikers had broken loose in Plainfield if he happened to stray down Somerset street at about 5 o'clock. The burst of exuberance on the part of the schoolboys caused a miniature riot on that thoroughfare for a short time, one woman fainting and several others becoming hysterical. It was a veritable I. W. W. demonstration with all the "fixin's."

Plainfield High School cohorts, boiling over with the heat of victory, carried their hilarity to the central portion of the town and selected The Ritz confectionary store for the scene of their merry-making. At this point the captain, manager and other members of the teams were hoisted to tables while yells for a speech rent the air. This was followed by a dance and further celebrity in the High School Auditorium in the evening.

Two weeks from Friday is the date for the second P. H. S.-N. P. H. S. meeting. The result may be different on the Ninth street court.

Those in North Plainfield High School who really amount to anything are satisfied and it's only the "small fry" that's engineering the kick.

A little hastiness on the part of Principal Earley caused a ripple of comment in the "bleachers" prior to the game. Mr. Earley, contrary to precedent, sought to relegate all those on the ground floor of Saengerbund Hall to the stronghold of Jupiter Pluvius on Somerset street. It's always bad policy to meddle with something that will do no good and only leads to a little bad feeling among the spectators. The crowd was orderly and included several Plainfield and North Plainfield High School teachers and everyone was satisfied to allow them to remain, except Mr. Earley.

While laurels are being handed around someone ought to place a couple of crowns on the reads of Coaches Paul H. Collier and Ralph S. Patch. To these two pilots goes a large share of the credit for the calibre of basketball displayed. Both have worked untiringly to whip their forces into shape and should glean their shore of the glory that goes with the result.

It was a veritable victory for both teams. Some think North Plainfield outplayed Plainfield and others have a different opinion. Anyway you take it, it was "some game" and the next will be "some more game."

FANS GATHERED TWO HOURS BEFORE GAME

Women Had Sewing but Men Were Less Fortunate, Having to Listen to Gossip.

Manager Duclos VanMater, of the North Plainfield High School basketball team, reports that the largest crowd of spectators that has ever witnessed a basketball game in Saengerbund Hall, was present last Saturday afternoon at the interscholastic match. The game was a great financial success and the treasury of the borough Athletic Association was reimbursed to the extent of $137, minus the small expenses of the game. This means that there was a total of 550 paid admissions and fully fifty more, including officials, coaches and the like.

In past years the finances have always been divided up between the two schools, but this time the boroughites will reap the full benefit of the funds, according to the settlement made at one of the meetings previous to the match. The February 12 game receipts will go to the Plainfield school as this game is to be played on their court. The first persons to enter the hall Saturday were borough supporters who went in at 1:30 to get their favorite seats.

MAY BE TRIPLE TIE FOR THE TOP RUNG

Much Depends on the Outcome of Leals-P. H. S. Game Wednesday.

INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE.

Standing of the Teams.

	W.	L.	P. C.
Plainfield H. S.	1	0	1,000
North Plainfield H. S.	1	1	.500
Leal School	0	1	.000

Hostilities in the Interscholastic Basketball League will be continued in the Y. M. C. A. gym, Wednesday afternoon, when the Plainfield High School and Leal Preparatory School meet for the first time this season. A victory for the private schoolboys would mean a triple deadlock in the league standing, with each quintet holding one victory and one defeat chalked up to its credit.

If the High School boys should be successful in disposing of the private school athletes the locals would gain a notable lead for the championship.

Although in recent years the Leal quintet has not been recognized as a particularly formidable opponent many of those who witnessed the stiff fight the Front street youths put up against North Plainfield predict a beating for the red and blue. The advantage of playing on the Y. M. C. A. court is a big one for Leal's and the P. H. S. squad will have to flash some good playing in order to pull out on top of the heap.

The issue will probably attract a record-breaking crowd to the association gym and it has been announced that the game will get under way at 4 o'clock.

NO GAME FOR HOPE.

The Hope Chapel basketball team was disappointed for the second time this season, Saturday night, when the Progressive Five, of Elizabeth, failed to keep its date with the Fourth street aggregation. Manager Snyder received no word about a cancellation and the Hope warriors were on the floor ready to play.

JACK DESERTS P. H. S., WILL COACH N. P. H. S.

Philadelphia National Leaguer to Handle Boro Nine This Year.

The management of the North Plainfield High School baseball team has secured the services of Jack Martin, the local ball player who is connected with the Philadelphia Nationals, to assist in the coaching of the team this spring until he is called to report for training. Martin voluntarily offered his services and said that the boroughites could have all that he knew regarding the national pastime. This will give him from about the first of March until the twenty-sixth of the same month to work out.

Jack will work in co-operation with Tommy Mullin, who has again been signed to help the boroughites cop another championship, and with the aid of these two players, the North Plainfield team will be better fixed in the coaching department than ever before. The outlook for the team is exceedingly bright and Captain Ralph Smalley has hopes of attaining an honor that no other borough captain has ever attained, that of winning two titles in successive years. The team will probably start practice early in order to get all the help possible from Martin.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team walloped the St. John's five, of New Brunswick, on the association court, Saturday night, by the score of 52 to 27. In the first half the home team gathered an even dozen field goals and was seven points ahead of its opponents at the end of the initial period. The score was 25 to 18.

In the second period Gavett and Ricketts did the bulk of the scoring while Burner and Newkirk each dropped in pretty field goals. Moulton also scored one in this half and had three to his credit in the first. For the visitors, Manley and Polinsky were the main scorers.

BRUGGY AND CLINTON STAR.

Frank Bruggy, who played with the Gloversville basketball team, of the New York State League, until that organization disbanded, was the individual star of the Paterson Crescents in a game against the Yonkers' five, Saturday. He played guard and scored eight baskets, which was the highest tally of the night. Jimmy Clinton, who is also well known in this city, played forward for the same team and made three field goals and a foul. The Crescents won by a score of 49 to 25.

TWO FOR BOROUGHITES.

Two games are on the list for the North Plainfield team this week, the first being at Summit. This game will probably be played Thursday and the most popular trip of the season is on for Saturday night, when the team goes to Bernardsville.

COLLEGE OF ST. ELIZABETH AROUSED OVER CAMPAIGN

Convent, Jan. 25—The faculty and graduates of the College of St. Elizabeth, are considerably agitated over the recent campaign in the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs to establish the "first woman's college" in New Jersey.

The authorities at St. Elizabeth point out that their charter was received from the State Legislature in 1899 and their first class graduated in 1903. In addition to the regular courses leading to the degrees of B. A., B. S., and B. M., the college offers a secretarial course and normal course in household arts and in music. The school of pedagogy is registered by the New Jersey and Pennsylvania State Boards of Education and by the University of the State of New York.

It is further noted at the College of St. Elizabeth that the members of the faculty all hold university degrees.

A SLAVE TO CUSTOM

It is the most natural thing in the world for a man of property to name his friend or a business associate executor of his will and even trustee of his estate. This has been done for generations, in the absence of better facilities. The habit still continues after the need for it has completely disappeared.

PLANS ACCEPTED FOR BORO SCHOOL

North Plainfield Education Board Advertises for Construction Bids.

DUNNING TAKES OATH

Succeeds N. B. Smalley as Trustee—One Boy Expelled—Reports Made by Supervising Principal—New Equipment Ordered.

The North Plainfield Board of Education, at its monthly meeting held last night in the Somerset School, acted upon a recommendation for expulsion of Russell Story, of Somerset place, who has been a member of the eighth grade and was alleged to be incorrigible. The recommendation came from Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst and by the unanimous vote of the Board, which was taken after all the charges preferred against the boy by the teachers, had been read, he was unconditionally expelled. This is the first case of its kind that has come before the borough body in a number of years and there was a great amount of discussion before the final action was taken. For the first time this year, all of the members of the Board were present, and F. O. Dunning, who was elected to succeed N. B. Smalley as a trustee, was given the oath of office. President Justus H. Cooley presided.

Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst read his monthly report and showed that there is an increase of nine pupils in the schools over last year. He reported on the conventions which he attended in Atlantic City and New Brunswick recently. He said that the majority of the Boards of Education of the State have become federated under the laws of the State and also spoke of the speech of President Taylor, of the State Board, who commented on the tenure of office act, the retirement and pension funds.

The resignation of Miss Bertha E. Spencer was formally accepted and upon recommendation, Miss Marion Armstrong, of Rutherford, was appointed to fill the vacant position. Miss Armstrong began her work yesterday. Warrants were ordered drawn for a total amount of $4,879.51 for teachers' salaries and other bills. The district clerk reported that last year's bills, amounting to $1,069.64, had been paid, and the custodian reported a balance of funds at $11,229.85. On a motion made by Judd Stewart, chairman of the finance committee, it was voted to transfer $10,000 from the Orange bank to the State Trust Company, of this city.

It was voted to furnish the domestic department with another gas stove and this matter was referred to the building and grounds committee. State Inspector of Buildings C. H. McDermitt, of Trenton, inspected the buildings during the past month and made a favorable report, with several recommendations. Two pupils were refused transportation from within the borough limits. Clerk Frank Rowley read the formal approval of the State Department of the plans submitted for the new Harrison Avenue School. There was some discussion as to the naming of the structure, but it was finally voted to call it the "Harrison School."

The detailed plans and specifications of the new school were then gone over and after a long discussion between the members of the Board and Mr. Pierson, the architect, they were signed and advertisements for bids will be found in another column. The bids will be opened on February 15 at the school.

On recommendation of D. Fred Aunst, a number of copies of Boynton and Knowlton's Civics, for use in the High School, were ordered purchased.

ELECTED MEMBER OF BLACK HORSE TROOP

Godfried G. Clay, son of President George S. Clay, of the Common Council, who is a student at Culver Military Academy, Culver, Indiana, has just been elected a member of the Black Horse Troop, which is considered a high honor among the student body. It was this troop that acted as a special escort for Vice-President Marshall and it has also served in similar capacity on other important occasions.

SUFFRAGE AND ANTI DEBATERS IN CLASH

Strong Arguments Mark Hearing on "Votes for Women" Resolution in Trenton.

Men and women, particularly the latter, prominent in suffrage and anti-suffrage causes, engaged in stirring and bitter debates at the third public hearing on the amendment to the constitution permitting women to vote, given at the State House yesterday by the judiciary committee of the House and Senate. The antis were there for the purpose of giving their views on the measure passed by the session of 1914, rather than to oppose it. The resolution in question was passed by the Legislature proir to 1914, but its effect was nullified because of the failure to advertise it.

Among the women at the capitol were the following "antis" from Plainfield: Mrs. William W. Coriell, Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, Mrs. Constable Moore, Miss R. V. Lawrence, Miss Laura Osgood and Mrs. C. L. Sykes. Mrs. Edward L. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Women's Suffrage Association, and Mrs. C. L. Riley were also present.

In opening the hearing Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, warned the constituents of the different branches against personalities, and stated that he thought the issue was whether or not the issue should be propounded to the voters.

Mrs. Feickert read a lengthy statement from the work of her organization showing that not a single man in the legislature had opposed "votes for women" in their campaign. They have the men on record from the time they were nominated until they were elected. They are ready to prove statements by practically everybody in the legislature that they favored "votes for women" and were going to vote for them when the proposed constitutional amendment comes out of the committee.

Mrs. Frank Goodwin, of Westfield, awoke the ire of the suffragettes when she declared that writers had said that "a suffragette is one who has ceased to be a lady and has not become a gentleman." Hisses followed this assertion, the first demonstration of the session. All along in Mrs. Goodwin's remarks the galleries were talking or sending out little digs at her. She stood for them but later got in a little dig herself declaring that those women opposed to women's suffrage had remained silent and had not criticized when the other side presented its case. Mrs. Goodwin said that the first suffragettes were the Mormons, and she declared that it had swept east from that source and was the outward sign of those who were craftily seeking political power. They could not get it one way, so they were going after the women.

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Suffrage Association, was also a speaker. She said:

"Woman's place is in the field, in the workshop, and on the battlefield, if need be. Her place is where duty calls her. Look into our history. Did the women stay home during the Revolution? On that grand battlefield of Monmouth in your own State, did a woman stay at home when her husband was in danger, or did she take his place when he fell? Let us have a cessation of this talk that woman's place is in the home. Her place is at the ballot box to save the men from fighting and killing each other and then debauching womanhood that, through polygamy, the earth may be replenished with other men to kill each other."

Anthony Spair, head of the Central Labor Union of this county, followed. He said that, with the "Gyps the Bloods" and the "Lefty Louies," who were in the borough of Roosevelt, where two strikers were killed, having the right to vote, he had said to his friends when investigating the riots in that place that the only solution for the labor troubles is to give the women the right to vote.

No decision was announced when the committee adjourned.

HAD SUDDEN ATTACK.

Mrs. Leonce Texier, of the New Madison apartments, is confined to her home from the effects of an almost fatal attack of acute indigestion with which she was seized while in bed early yesterday morning. She was conscious when discovered by her husband. She rallied after nearly a half hour of "first aid" methods. She was fully revived later by Dr. M. L. Clawson, who arrived in response to a telephone call. The attack was the first Mrs. Texier had ever experienced and it left her in a severely weakened condition.

DEDICATION EXERCISES

Elaborate Program Marks Turning Over of New High School to the City—Many Attended Affair—W. S. Tyler Presides.

Exercises of an appropriate and impressive nature featured the dedication of the Plainfield High School, last night, the formalities being attended by one of the largest gatherings of representative Plainfielders that has yet visited the structure. Every one of the hundreds of electric light bulbs in the building were lighted from 7:30 to midnight and before and after the dedication exercises in the auditorium all of the visitors availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the monster institution, students of the upper classes acting as escorts. All of the various departments, including the gymnasiums, locker rooms, swimming pool, lunch rooms, manual training and shop rooms, chemistry and biology laboratories, cooking kitchens and other features were thrown open to the inspectors, the teachers in the different lines of scholastic work being present to personally explain the various phases of instruction.

The evening's program was presented in the new auditorium, the finest of its kind in this section of the State. The seating capacity of

COUNCIL APPROVES MAYOR'S MEASURES

Laws and Ordinances Committee Promptly Introduce Resolutions.

The laws and ordinances committee of the Common Council, of which R. H. Cox is chairman, displayed a great amount of activity at the adjourned meeting last night, by promptly introducing a number of resolutions approving and suggesting the adoption of certain measures as advocated by Mayor Leighton Calkins in his first annual message.

Among the things approved by the committee and later concurred in by the Council were the administrative survey, requesting the Mayor to submit plans for the same; that the Board of Education give the Mayor and Council and Board of School Estimate an opportunity to consider school estimates and that the oBard of Education be invited to attend meetings of the councilmanic finance committee.

It was further recommended that records of all committee meetings be kept and filed and that the responsibility with respect to pending legislation at Trenton be entrusted to the laws and ordinances committee; that there be public hearings on the city and school budgets and suggestions be referred to the finance committee.

There was approval of the recommendation relating to a city headquarters and city planning and it was suggested that these matters be referred to the public affairs committee.

All of the above recommendations were covered by resolutions which were adopted with the exception of one which was held over until a later meeting. The resolution laid over included an amendment to rule six to provide that the finance committee shall consist of a chairman and in addition the chairman of the committee on streets, fire and buildings, police and either alms or street lighting as the president may determine.

There was some differences of opinion regarding the proposed makeup of the finance committee and for that reason it was decided to lay this resolution over to another meeting.

MRS. KATE KEOUGH.

Mrs. Kate Keough, of 217 Lee place, died at her home this morning. She was the widow of the late James Keough. The deceased is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Helen Dunn and Mrs. Bessie Connelly, of New York; one daughter, Mrs. Francis Gill, and two sons, John and James. Funeral services will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church and burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

RESIGNATIONS ARE WITHDRAWN

City Clerk James T. MacMurray Acceeds to Council's Request.

WEAN FOLLOWS SUIT

Corporation Counsel C. A. Reed Advises the Council That it Can Receive Fees Heretofore Going to City Officials.

City Clerk James T. MacMurray, who at a previous meeting of the Common Council, resigned because when he was re-elected to his position for a term of three years the Council failed to fix his salary, withdrew his resignation, as requested, at the adjourned meeting of the Council last night. Following this action, George B. Wean, city stenographer, who had also resigned, but not for the same reason, withdrew his resignation. It is now evident that the misunderstanding that existed over the matter has been straightened out.

Mr. MacMurray, in his communication, stated that he appreciated the sentiment expressed in the Council's resolution requesting him to withdraw his resignation and regretted that there had been any misunderstanding. It is now expected that the Council will proceed to fix the salaries of both the clerk and Mr. Wean.

In this connection an opinion was received from Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed, which was requested by the Council, advising that body that the fees of all city officials could be collected and turned over to the

SCHOONER RAMS THE WASHINGTONIAN

$1,000,000 Worth of Raw Sugar Loss in Collision of Vessels.

Norfolk, Jan. 26—The American steamer Washingtonian was rammed and sunk by an unidenified schooner early this morning off Fenwick Island, 50 miles from Cape Henry. All but one of her crew of 40 men were saved. The collision occurred during a fog and there was no warning of the other vessel's presence until her bow loomed up out of the darkness. The crash came a minute afterward when the schooner veered off and continued on her way.

New York, Jan. 26.—The loss of the American-Hawaiian liner Washingtonian with nearly 10,000 tons of raw sugar valued at nearly $1,000,000 is considered an important if not a serious factor, in the sugar situation by some authorities. According to Claus A. Spreckles, president of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, the country needs all the sugar it can secure.

EXPECT INDICTMENT OF STRIKE DEPUTIES

Assemblyman Runyon Introduces Resolution Authorizing An Inquiry.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, yesterday introduced in the Assembly a resolution providing for the appointment of five assemblymen to probe the Roosevelt affair. It provides for a thorough investigation of the shooting, an inquiry as to what legislation, if any, is needed to meet the situation and prevent a reoccurrence of the trouble, the appointment of deputy sheriffs and the causes of the strike.

Nearly 100 witnesses, among them one from Dunellen, have been summoned to give their testimony at the investigation begun by the Middlesex county grand jury today. They are expected to tell of the fullisades opened on the crowd that formed around the Roosevelt factory and of the conditions prevalent immediately following the shooting.

It is expected that indictments of murder in the first degree will be returned against the twenty-seven gunmen now lodged in the New Brunswick jail. Attorney General John W. Westcott has charge of the inquiry.

Union county officials are investigating the complaints of seventy employes of the Bowker Fertilizing Plant at Elizabeth, who went out on a strike yesterday.

COUNCIL GRANTS LIQUOR LICENSES

Beside Regular Renewals G. R. Westcott is Given Wholesale Privilege.

ACTION IS OPPOSED

President Clay and Councilmen Claybrook and Hylan Vote Against New Application and That of M. J. Devine for Clark's Place.

The number of liquor licensed places in the city was increased to eleven at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, an additional wholesale license being granted to George R. Wescott, at 133-135 North avenue, where Cramer's restaurant is now located. The action of the Council was not wholly a surprise, it being predicted that another wholesale place would be licensed. All of the other regular places were granted renewals.

President George S. Clay and Councilmen R. A. Claybrook and Thomas F. Hylan voted against both Mr. Wescott's application and that of Michael Devine, the latter for a license at Clark's saloon on Liberty street. Mr. Claybrook explained his vote by saying that he had nothing against the applicants, but he believed that he was elected to stand by the present policy on the liquor question, adding that he also opposed the amendment to the Tyler ordinance which permitted the continuance of a license at Clark's saloon.

Mr. Hylan voted against the application of Ellsworth C. Wescott for a saloon license on East Front street.

T. A. B. HAD BIG TIME AT THE COUNTY SEAT

Local Members Were Guests of Elizabeth Society Last Night.

Members of St. Mary's T. A. B. Society and young women friends of the organization, to the number of 125 in all, enjoyed a gala affair, last night, as the guests of the Elizabeth T. A. B.'s, in the latter's commodious clubhouse. The program arranged by the hosts included bowling, dancing, refreshments, an entertainment and general reception. Every moment of the time was enjoyed to the limit by the Plainfielders and all are looking forward to a return affair here in about three weeks.

The trip to the county seat was made by special trolley. The full complement of the society's fife and drum corps discoursed patriotic airs on the journey and on arriving at Elizabeth, Major Frank Donnelly, marshaled the visitors in parade form. A short march followed with red fire lighting the way and the hosts acting as escort. Most of the young folks enjoyed the dancing, while the rival pin-pitters contested on the alleys. The Plainfielders lost two out of three games, the odds being decidedly against them. After the alley contest, the entertainment and refreshments took precedure and it was after midnight when the return trip started.

The success of the affair was largely due to the local committee, composed of John J. Hines, chairman; Joseph McCue, Michael D. O'Keefe and John Force. The young women were so appreciative they will aid the local society in conducting a social and dance in the West Fourth street hall on Wednesday night, February 3.

The local bowling team was composed of Messrs. Howe, Monahan, O'Keefe, Pasch and Skinner.

ELKS WILL BE HOSTS AT RECEPTION TONIGHT

Members of the local Elks' Club are planning to receive a record number of visitors at the Watchung avenue rendezvous tonight, when the fifth of a series of winter receptions will be given. Dancing will be the leading feature and the usual amount of merriment typical of the previous gatherings is in store for those who attend.

The committee in charge has secured VanEps' orchestra for the occasion and the famous Victor drummer will again be in attendance, renlering solos on his favorite instrument. Refreshments will be served during the dance intermissions.

MINE SINKS CRUISER

British Heavy Artillery Destroys Enormous German Gun Which Was Marked by An Expert Aviator—French Capture Trenches.

Paris, Jan. 26.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"On the Yser front the Belgian troops advanced in the region of Pervyse, yesterday. The Germans lost at daybreak against our trenches east of Ypres, a strong attack with a battalion which was halted. Three hundred dead, among whom was the commander of the leading company, were left on the ground. This attack should have been supported by the companies of the second line of Germans, but because of the accurate fire of our artillery those forces were unable to leave their shelters. Near La Bassee at Givenchy and Guinehq the enemy lost against the British line five attacks. After having made slight progress the Germans were repulsed, leaving on the ground a number of dead and sixty prisoners, of whom two were officers. That attack was accomplished by an attempted diversion at several points on our front between the Bethune road and La Bassee and Aix Uoulette Oe. One part of the enemy's forces that had attempted to leave the trenches were instantly halted by the fire of our infantry and artillery.

"On the rest of the front between Lys and the Oise there was an artillery duel. West of Craonne the enemy made two successful attacks of extreme violence. The first was repulsed. The second penetrated our trenches, but with an energetic counter attack our troops regained almost all the lost ground. The battle continues around that part of the trench still held by the Germans. In Champagne, while the enemy's artillery is showing less activity than on preceding day,s our batteries have fired effectively upon the Germans. In the Argonne in the region of St. Hubert we broke up with our artillery an attempted attack. In Alsace the enemy has actively employed his bomb throwers against our positions at Harimanns Weilerkopf. No new fighting has taken place."

Berlin, Jan. 26 (by wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war the enemy, as is customary, placed Middlekerke and Westende under fire yesterday. A large number of the inhabitants were killed or injured by the artillery fire, including the burgomaster of Middlekerke. Our losses yesterday were quite small, though we were attacking the positions of the English on both sides of La Bassee canal, while our attacks north of the canal between Cicenchy did not lead to the capture of any English position owing to a strong flanking movement. An attack by our troops from Baden, south of the canal, met with complete success. In this region English positions extending over a width of 1,100 yards were taken by storm. Two strong points of support were also captured. Three officers and 110 men were taken prisoners. We also captured one cannon and three machine guns. The English vainly attempted to recapture the positions which have been employed for our purposes, but were beaten back with heavy loss. Our losses were comparatively small. Battles which resulted successfully for us occurred on the heights of Craonne, southeasts of Laon. All French attacks in southern Argonne were repelled. We captured 50 prisoners.

"In the eastern theatre of war the Russians unsuccessfully attacked the positions of our cavalry northeast of Gumbinnen. Fierce artillery duels occurred on the remainder of the front in eastern Prussia. Nothing of importance occurred west of the Weichsel and east of the Filica in Poland. We were successful in less important engagements northeast of Wloclawek."

Berlin (wireless to London), Jan. 26.—Additional details of the sinking of a British battle cruiser in the naval fight in the North Sea, west of Heligoland, claimed by the Germans, is given in a statement issued here today. The statement follows:

"According to well-informed German sources this cruiser suffered heavily from the fire of our cannon and was then sunk by a German torpedo boat by two well directed shots. The sinking was observed by a German airship, which followed the battle closely.

An adjonrued meeting of the Mayor and Common Council was held in the Borough Hall, last evening, at which time two petitions calling for drainage and storm sewerage systems to take care of the situation on Front street, west of Washington avenue, and on North avenue, also west of Washington avenue, were presented. The North avenue petition was signed by about 54 per cent. of the property-holders to be benefitted by the improvement and the other petition by 60 per cent.

A communication was received from Fred J. Batchelt, of New York, a certified public accountant, in connection with auditing and systemizing the books of the borough. He offered to do this for $15.

Chairman Castner, of the street committee, said that the realty company, of which M. F. Gano, of Plainfield, is head, had failed to remove the pipe in the brook south of South avenue. Mr. Castner said it was imperative that this pipe be removed, as when it rains like it did the other night conditions are very bad there. He was instructed to inform Mr. Gano that unless the pipe was removed at once the borough would do it and charge his company for the job.

The Council is considering new equipment for the Council chamber.

A bill of $125 presented by the engineering firm of George W. Fuller, for preparing plans of the sewerage drainage system, was ordered paid by resolution.

The first rehearsal of the play, "Country Folks," to be given sometime during March by the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal church, will be held at the home of H. F. Townley, on Madison avenue, Friday evening.

PLAN BASEBALL TEAM.

The Columbus troop of the local organization of Boy Scouts held a meeting in the rectory of St. John's church on Sunday afternoon. Edward Gray, Jr., the new scoutmaster, presided over the meeting. After the transaction of routine business the Scouts unanimously decided to take a hike over the mountains to Warrenville, Saturday afternoon. It was also decided to place a representative ball team on the field this summer.

Democratic Committeeman Willard N. Apgar, who has been seriously ill with the grip, is now able to be up and about the house.

Miss Carrie Hill, of North avenue, has moved to Bristol, Conn. Her brother, John Hill, proprietor of the Park Hotel Stables, has moved from Plainfield into the flat in the Feldman building which she vacated.

Mrs. S. R. Titsworth, of New Market road, who was taken ill Friday night, is now able to be up and about.

Virginia and Marion Tinsman, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Tinsman, of Front street, who have been ill with the grip, are improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Tinsman, of North avenue, entertained Mrs E. H. Tinsman and daughter, of Plainfield, Sunday.

Daniel Sullivan, of Dunellen avenue, has accepted a position with the Pond Tool Works, at Plainfield.

Mrs. M. E. Tinsman, who is visiting her son, Lewis Tinsman, of North avenue, is ill.

Scout Commissioner Edward J. Dusel, a man with ideas, has another project. If he can obtain the co-operation of the citizens he plans to have a building erected for the local Scout troops. A meeting of the prominent citizens of the borough will be called for the purpose by Commissioner Dusel within the next ten days. Mr. Dusel believes that every community should have a Scout organization for the moral, physical and intellectual common good of the youth of the land. He says that in order to make the present movement in Dunellen a permanent one the boys must have a place that they can call their own; a place where they can meet and have a gymnasium. Such a building, Mr. Dusel says would cost $2,500. This amount at the first hearing seems rather large, but when the fact that this borough has a population of over 2,500 it can readily be seen that the amount could more than be raised by each person contributing a dollar. In regard to a lot to have the building erected on, Mr. Dusel said he thought that he could have a lot donated.

The citizens, who are apprised of what is being attempted and realize what the Scout movement means to a community, are all heartily in accord with Mr. Dusel's project.

Burgess Tallamy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tallamy, of North avenue, has the measles.

Elizabeth Hamley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Hamley, of Washington avenue, is another measles victim.

The condition of J. Newton Apgar was reported as being better this morning.

Mr. Vail, who is a messenger in the employ of the American Express Company, was on the train which was stopped.

Local grocers, hackmen and other tradesmen are experiencing great difficulty these days in traveling the newly opened streets, as in most cases the macadam is too narrow to permit the passage of two vehicles, and some one gets stuck in the mud. Peter Ritter, Sr., a local hackman, had his Ford stuck in the mud on Paterson road, yesterday morning, as did several of the large New York department store trucks. The large motor trucks of the Newark Hardware Company and Hersh Brothers, wholesale grocers, who make daily trips through here, are nearly as frequent in their calls for a tow out of the mud. This has been true on South avenue, the county road, where trucks sink in at the sides of the road over the wheels.

DISCUSS DECLINE OF BIBLE SCHOOLS

Race Suicide Said to Be the Cause of Falling Off in Enrollment.

EVANGELISM IS URGED

Men of Elizabeth Presbytery Held First of Series of Three Conferences in Crescent Avenue Church Last Night.

That race suicide is the cause of a diminishing Sunday-school enrollment was the statement made by Rev. Dr. John R. Davies, pastor of the Bethlehem Presbyterian church, Philadelphia, at the conference on evangelistic work held last evening, at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The gathering of fully 200 men at the local church was held under the auspices of the Evangelistic Committee of the Presbytery of Elizabeth, and was one of a series of three to be conducted by that committee. Churches of Westfield, Elizabeth, Basking Ridge, as well as other points, including this city, were largely represented at the conference.

The statement by Dr. Davies was the result of one made by a previous speaker to the effect that the enrollment in the Sunday-schools of the Presbyterian Church throughout the country was on the decline, and this contributing cause brought forth a greater need for further evangelistic work. Dr. Davies, throughout his address, gave his experiences in evangelistic work in his various charges, especially during his fourteen years in his present pastorate. So simple, yet logical, were the methods used and explained in full detail by the speaker, and so great was the impression upon the gathering of clergy, elders and laymen, that an outbreak of applause concluded the remarkable address on the problem for which the meeting was called to discuss.

Rev. Paul Stratton, of the Dayspring Presbyterian church, Yonkers, N. Y., was the first speaker of the evening, dwelling upon the contributing causes for such a gathering, and telling of the great resources at the command of the Christian churches with which they might carry on a vigorous and profitable evangelistic campaign, not only in the Elizabeth Presbytery, but throughout the country and the world at large. During the course of his address Rev. Stratton referred to the decreases in the Sunday-school enrollment, and the comparatively small number of communicant members received on confession of faith in the denomination which the gathering represented.

Two other similar meetings and conferences on the same subject are to be held tonight, one at Basking Ridge, and the other at Elizabeth. The Basking Ridge gathering will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, this city, and Frederick H. Andrews, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church.

CANNOT RESTRICT LABOR TO THE CITY

Council Advised by Judge Collins Through Board it Would Be Illegal.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

Council Appropriates $675 for Police Pension Fund—Arthur Brisbane Objects to Paying An Assessment Tax for Sewer Connection.

Respecting the request of the Common Council to the Board of Education that in awarding contracts for the erection of the new Evergreen Avenue School at least 90 per cent. of the labor employed be engaged here, H. R. Conger, of the Board of Education, communicated with the Council, last night, in which he quoted an opinion of Judge Gilbert Collins to the effect that such a clause in the contract would be illegal and in violation of the State law. Mr. Conger also informed the Council that the contracts for the new school had been awarded, and that certain amounts are now due. This matter was referred to the finance committee.

A resolution offered by Mr. Claybrook, and adopted, appropriated $675 to the police pension fund to provide for the pension paid to former Police Captain Christian Frederickson. Resolutions offered by Mr. Blatz, and adopted, provided for an appropriation of $420 to care for the city "dump" for 1915, invited bids for furnishing the city with asphalt and tar and proposals for the repair of streets, the bids to be opened on March 1, and authorizing the city clerk to advertise for bids for furnishing crushed stone and flagging for sidewalks for the coming year.

Another resolution offered by Mr. Blatz, and adopted, fixed Monday evening, March 1, as the time the Council will meet to treat with the property-owners in the matter of widening East Second street, between Watchung avenue and Church street.

Suffern & Co., certified public accountants, in a communication, requested consideration of its application for the work of auditing the city's accounts for the year. This was referred to the finance committee.

Samuel C. Cowart, attorney for Arthur Brisbane, editor of The New York American, in a communication asked the Council to deduct $24 from the latter's tax bill on property located on East Seventh street, levied for a sewer assessment, it being claimed that the sewer is not connected at that point. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

J. F. Nelson, a local mechanic, in a letter told the Council of the craftsmen who are now suffering because of no work and adding that they are too proud to beg. He urged the Council to start the work of erecting a city hall, employing Plainfield mechanics. He said that by working the men in relays there would be sufficient work to keep the now idle men busy for some time to come. This matter was referred to the public affairs committee.

George S. Beiser, of Prospect avenue, complained about the removal of an electric light on Cedarbrook terrace, leaving that particular section in darkness, and he requested that the lamp be restored to its former location. The matter was referred.

PUBLIC OPINION AND ROTHBERG CLOTHING

Public opinion is the barometer which registers the rise and fall of public enterprise. What the people think of Rothberg clothing is more important to us than what the people pay for Rothberg Clothing.

Our list of customers is a large one, and it's a most significant fact that our customers are not the transient kinds. Once a man or boy buys a Rothberg Suit or Overcoat he comes back for his next one.

It was Lincoln's belief that you couldn't fool all the people all the time, which, perhaps, is why Rothberg Clothing is so well known in and about Plainfield.

Belgium's Queen Writes a Letter of Appreciation to Women of America

"Like a ray of sunlight in the darkest hour of Belgium's history" is the way in which Queen Elisabeth describes the food which America is daily providing to the women and children of her stricken country.

"It gives me great pleasure to become patroness of the Woman's Section of the Commission for Relief in Belgium," writes Queen Elizabeth to Mrs. Lindon W. Bates, chairman of the Woman's Section, whose offices are at No. 5 Madison avenue, New York City. "At the same time I wish to extend to the women of America the deep gratitude of the women of Belgium for the work which they are doing for my people. The Belgian women have fought a brave fight, and are still fighting for the common cause of human liberty so dear to every woman's heart."

With the letter from Belgium's Queen also came one from King Albert's sister, Henriette, who writes:

"I gladly accept your invitation to become patroness on the Woman's Section of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium. I know that I speak for every Belgian woman and every Belgian child when I say that we thank God for what you are doing. Now that the extremity of our distress is becoming known, we feel sure the tender hearts of the women of America will respond to our cry.

"Food is terribly needed by millions of my brave brother's unhappy subjects, who still remain in their native land. Before Winter is over the need will become still more desperate. In the name of the suffering women and little children of Belgium, I ask the women of America to help us."

Grand Quartier Generale (Belgique)
November 1914

It gives me great pleasure to accept the invitation which has been transmitted to me to become Patroness of the Women's Section of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium. I wish to extend to the women of America the deep gratitude of the women of Belgium for the work which they are doing for my people. The food which your country's people are daily providing to our women and children is like a ray of sunlight in the darkest hour of Belgium's history. The Belgian women have fought a brave fight and are still fighting for the common cause of human liberty so dear to every American woman's heart.

BENEFIT RECITAL FOR THE RED CROSS

Well Known Artists Will Appear Here on January 29.

The following press notices may interest those who expect to attend the recital of Aurelio Giorni, pianist, and Wallace Cox, baritone, tomorrow evening, January 27th, at 531 West Eighth Street, for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Signor Giorni is a native of Rome and has been in this country only a few months. An artistic recital was given at Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, on Tuesday, January 12th, by Madame Niessen, Stone and Aurelio Giorni. The latter is a ianist new to this city, but a young Italian of marvelous technical powers. He plays with absolute command of his instrument, and all of his numbers were most difficult in character, but were given with all the technical stumbling blocks easily overcome.

"The Graphic," London, May 6, 1913: "That such a young artist should possess marvelous technique is not so startling as the fact that he plays with a completeness of conception and subtlety of intelligence which are uncommon at any age.

"Journal de Geneve," November 22, 1913: "Le jeune pianist merite le gand succes quil a en par la surete et la velocite de sa technique, par l'intelligence de sou interpretation et par son toucher agreable, jamals dur dans la fortissimo, habile a faire ressortir les parties importantes."

Mr. Cox is an American and has studied both in this country and in Berlin.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding that a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

WAR NEWS

"Two English torpedo boats were also sunk. The airship also observed the serious damaging of other English ships."

In the absence of further details of the battle the newspapers confine themselves to comments about the great superiority and strength of the British units engaged.

No credence is given anywhere here to the British Admiralty's report no British vessel was lost in the fight.

Berlin, Jan. 26.—A despatch from Cracow announces that the Austro-German forces have occupied Kielce in Russian Poland, capital of the State of the same name. Its strategic value lies in the fact that it is the most important railroad junction northeast of Cracow.

Copenhagen, Jan. 26.—A despatch from Trelleburg, Sweden, says that the German ferry which left yesterday on its daily trip to Sassnitz, Prussia, returned two hours after its departure. Its captain had received a wireless from German warships ordering him to turn back as hostile submarine had been sighted in the Baltic near Ruegan Islands.

London, Jan. 26.—A despatch from Berlin says that it has been officially announced that the German government has taken charge of all stocks of wheat in order to safeguard the supply of bread until the next harvest.

London, Jan. 26.—A "Daily Mail" Venice dispatch reports from Trieste that an Austrian cruiser has struck a mine near the Brioni islands and sunk. The Brioni islands are at the mouth of the harbor of Pola, Austria's big naval base.

St. Omer, France (via Paris), Jan. 26.—The British heavy artillery has destroyed an enormous gun the Germans were placing on a hill about a mile behind their first trenches, and about two miles from Festubert, with the object of silencing the English howitzers and bombarding Bethune. The position of the big gun was marked by a British aviator and the fourth shell from the British guns demolished it.

The British gunners then fired on German artillerymen placing a similar gun a mile further behind, scattering them with a feww well timed shells. They also smashed three German pumps brought up to empty water out of the trenches.

CHANGE OF CABLE RATES.

New York, Jan. 26.—The Western Union Telephone Company announces the suspension of the 13 word minimum in its cable letter service between New York city and Cuba and that until further notice its cable letters between these points will be subject only to such delay as may result from their deferment to full rate traffic. Under this modification a cable letter of five words would cost twenty cents; one of ten words forty cents; one of thirteen words forty-five cents; excess words four cents; delivery on receipt at destination.

STONEWALL J. COLES BURIED IN HILLSIDE

Military and Masonic Honors for Soldier Who Died in the Service.

Stonewall J. Coles, a late member of Company C, Twenty-fifth U. S. Infantry, who died at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, on December 21, was buiried this afternoon at 3 o'clock with military and Masonic honors. The services were held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church and Rev. Dr. M. W. Vaughan officiated. He was assisted by Rev. Dr. E. W. Roberts, pastor of Shiloh Baptist church. The funeral was largely attended. The casket was draped with an American flag and there were many beautiful floral tributes.

The War Department, at Washington, sent a firing squad from the Twenty-ninth U. S. Infantry, Governor's Island, under the command of Corporal Alfred. The detachment consisted of eight privates, a bugler and the leader. At the grave the soldiers gave a military salute over the body. The pall-bearers were members of Stone Square Lodge, No. 39, F. and A. M. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery.

RECREATION NOTES

The men's gym class meets at the High School tonight. The pool will be opened at 8:30 for swimming instruction.

Tomorrow evening the gym and pool are to be open for women. The popularity of this class has forced the Recreation to limit the membership. There is already a lengthy waiting list.

The Cosmos Club meets tonight at the Stillman School. There will be an open discussion on the subject, "Is Baseball a Good or a Bad Thing for the Community?" The colored girls' gym class meets upstairs in the Stillman School at the same time.

The Choral Society will hold a rehearsal of the oratorio, "Elijah," at Franklin School, at 8 o'clock tonight. All vocalists and lovers of music should try to be present.

DECREE NOT MODIFIED.

Washington, Jan. 26.—It is false that I have in any way modified the petroleum decree." This statement was received today from General Carranza by his agency here regarding the oil situation at Tampico and Tuxpam. In spite of the recent protests of foreign governments the agency said General Carranza is determined to suspend all construction work in the oil fields until his decre eis complied with by foreign operators.

A STATE CONSTABULARY.

Atrocities committed by the thugs who were engaged under the misleading title of "private detectives" for the Roosevelt strike, have, more than ever before, focussed the attention of the people of New Jersey upon the need for a State constabulary. The matter has been discussed more or less in the newspapers at times in the past, especially when it has been necessary to call out the National Guard to quell rioting, but never has there been such a general demand as is the case now. There are many ways in which such a force could be used. Some twenty-five or more years ago preliminary steps were taken for such an organization in New Jersey, but after a Hudson county politician got the job as chief of State police, nothing was done to establish the force, except to provide a salary for that politician.

An established force of men, trained for such work as the special duty sheriffs of Middlesex county should have done—but did not—would have a healthy influence toward peace at the scene of every strike to which they might be despatched—an influence much greater than that of the National Guard. They could keep the peace in time of local disturbances from whatever cause, and disperse crowds that assembled, if they threatened to defy law and order. In the Roosevelt case all accounts agree that there were no threats and that the cowardly attack made by the imported thugs was unprovoked.

The Trenton Times says that the people of that section "have had occasional opportunities for seeing what a small squad of trained men backed by the authority of the government has accomplished in Pennsylvania. The same results may be obtained in New Jersey, and, as has been suggested, it is entirely practicable to employ members of a constabulary in the forest preservation, fish and game, and the automobile inspection service.

"Incidentally the organization of a constabulary force would have the effect of increasing interest in the National Guard, which has been for several years under a partial boycott by organized labor in resentment of its employment during strikes. This is no time to add needlessly to the State's fixed charges, but by dismissing a lot of useless hangers-on in the Legislature and wiping out some of the sinecures in the State House, enough can be saved twice over to maintain a State police system."

EMILY P. BISSELL.

Delaware has for years been notorious as a State in which the government has been controlled by the corporations. If by any chance a good law should get through the Legislature, which made it hard for the wealthy interests to do business, regardless of the life or health of those whom they employed, some means has been found to nullify the act.

The particular mission of Miss Emily P. Bissell has been the protection of child slaves in Delaware, a State where the child labor laws are noticeably lax. She has done her work so well that the hardened exploiters of child labor think it is time for her to be retired from her place. They are making plans to kill her politically, and in order to accomplish this have selected a hand picked committee to investigate the commission of which she is a member, and which removed as incompetent and prejudiced a child labor inspector who was a pensioner on one of the big child labor exploiting concerns. The legislative committee is going to probe Miss Bissell, not the commission. To make the job complete the plan is to pass a law, after the probe, forbidding the appointment of a woman to any public commission.

The sad part of this State-wide attack upon a glorious woman is not that the special interests, the slave owners of the child laborers in the industries, are financing and directing the campaign against one woman, but—that the poor people, the working class, the very ones for whom she is about to be crucified, are either silent, indifferent, or have joined in the chase to run her down to death.

Hated by corrupt business in active alliance with corrupt politics, pursued to her doom, she is deserted by those whose lives she tried to save at the expense of her own. Irony reaches its limit in the case of Emily P. Bissell.

Look for something big in the war today. January 26th is the Kaiser's birthday, and nothing would satisfy him more than to have a big victory handed to him as a pleasant (?) reminder that his men were celebrating the day.

Winter is half gone now, but the severe weather has made more than half the coal supply disappear. There is plenty of time for us to have snow, too, before the date when spring is officially ushered in.

FOR TRAINED MEN AT SEWER PLANTS

State Board of Health Would License Skilled Attendants Who Show Their Fitness.

Trenton, Jan. 26—The licensing of attendants of sewage disposal plants after they have received special training and demonstrated their fitness for the work is one of the recommendations contained in the annual report of the State Board of Health. The Board has encountered much difficulty in improving the conditions of disposal plants because of the ignorance of attendants.

"The process of sewage treatment falls," said the Board, "particularly in the fields of the great sciences of physics, chemistry and bacteriology. These are subjects about which the ordinary laborer knows nothing, yet most of the plants in the State are operated by ordinary laborers.

"To secure the highest degree of efficiency on sewage disposal plants each unit should be tested at frequent intervals. The tests should be physical, chemical and bacteriological. They are such that no ordinary laborer can make. They must be made by a trained man understanding the processes involved and having a working knowledge of chemistry and bacteriology. When such a man is in charge of a sewage disposal plant the increased efficiency and longer life of the various units will more than offset the increased maintenance charges due to a trained man's salary.

"With the rapidly increasing population the necessity for proper sewage disposal is becoming more and more important in New Jersey. The disposal should be performed in such a manner as to render the sewage neither offensive nor dangerous to the community. The danger of sewage lies chiefly in its bacterial content.

"The man in charge of the plant should be able to test the effluent of the various units at frequent intervals, in order that the plant may be kept working at high efficiency."

The report shows that there are 150 sewage disposal plants in the State, twenty of which were added last year. At only one of these plants is a trained man employed as manager. This plant has long been tremendously overloaded. In the hands of an ordinary laborer, such as is found in charge of most plants, the Board said this plant would long ago have become a nuisance, but in the hands of a trained man it has been doing good work in spite of the great overload, and no complaints of a nuisance have been made.

Since the disposal of sewage is primarily a health problem and the supervision of sewage plants is under the State Board of Health, the report maintains that attendants should be licensed by that body.

VETERAN EDITOR OBSERVES HIS EIGHTY-NINTH BIRTHDAY

Morristown, Jan. 26—Alanson A. Vance celebrated yesterday his eighty-ninth birthday at his Ridgedale avenue home. Because of a recent death in the family no general reception was held, but he received the congratulations of relatives and close friends.

Mr. Vance was for many years the editor of The Jerseyman, retiring when he was seventy years old. After that he served for sometime as a member of the Morris County Board of Freeholders. He is enjoying general good health and is as much interested in politics and current events as when actively engaged in newspaper work. Mr. Vance was one of the original Republicans and takes pleasure in showing his first commission as postmaster at Morristown, dated July 16, 1861, and signed by Abraham Lincoln and William H. Seward. He served in that capacity for fourteen years.

Woodruff M. Vance, the veteran editor's son, who was a former resident here, has been appointed clerk of the County Commissioners of Yakima county, Wash. He went to North Yakima from here and engaged in newspaper work until recently. Vance gives all his time to his new duties.

AVERS HE'LL FIGHT PENSION OF NEWARK EX-FIRE CHIEF

Passaic, Jan. 26—Scarcely had former Fire Chief David E. Benedict, of Newark, seated himself, after asking those at a meeting in Garfield, of the Exempt Firemen's leagues of the Sixth and Seventh Congressional districts to support him in trying to have the Legislature pass a bill giving him a pension of $1,500, when up got Assemblyman William Barbour, of Paterson, and declared he would work earnestly to defeat the bill.

Mr. Barbour was at the rear of the hall when Mr. Benedict addressed the meeting. There was an awkward pause after the Assemblyman's announcement. Then the meeting proceeded to the consideration of other topics.

In addition to Mr. Barbour, there were at the meeting Assemblyman George H. Dalrymple, of Passaic, and John J. Johnson, of Bergen. Both are members of the joint legislative committee appointed to sift the claim of the exempt firemen of the State to a right to participate in the State relief fund. Mr. Dalrymple told the exempts that there is a possibility that the committee may never submit a report to the Legislature. Mr. Johnson said he would see that the Legislature got some account of the committee's work.

Mr. Dalrymple told the exempts he believed their cause a hopeless one. He said he felt that "much time has been lost investigating a matter of little importance." On the other hand, Mr. Johnson said he believed the exempts have a good cause for action.

Mr. Barbour raised what State President John Kennell, of the exempts, said was a new question when he expressed doubt of the willingness of insurance companies to pay money to two beneficiaries. The relief fund is raised by a tax on insurance companies organized outside of New Jersey, but doing business here.

SELF-CONTROL OF ALLIES DESCRIBED

Sallo Kahn Writes Interesting Letter to Samuel Rothberg.

A SOLDIER'S FAREWELL

Former Plainfielder in Paris Witnesses Pathetic Scenes as Wives Are Separated From Their Husbands as They Leave for War.

Samuel Rothberg, of West Front street, has just received an interesting letter from Sallo Kahn, a former Plainfielder and graduate of the Plainfield High School, who is now in Paris. Mr. Kahn's letter is under date of January 6 and is as follows:

"The Christmas leave was over—and the Victoria station was filled with a throng of returning soldiers, their wives and sweethearts. It was a miserable day,—the 29th of December,—still misty and foggy after the memorable storm of the night before.

"To a stranger, the scene was one of intense interest—no excitement, no hysterics, no tears. It is unbelievable what self control can do when put to the test, and England's women are testing their's to the utmost.

"It was my fortune to share a compartment with a colonel of the Lestershire Yeomanry, and his leave taking was but a counterpart of hundreds of others on the same platform. His wife had come down to see him off—she had had one happy week with him over the Christmas holidays, and in all probability his three months' previous absence on the firing line and in the trenches, had contributed not a few of the many silvery threads in her hair, not a few of the careworn lines around her eyes, but, notwithstanding, what a fine-looking, motherly little woman she was..

"And now, he was off again, for three months perhaps, possibly more, possibly ——, but who could tell, or, knowing would? And there they stood, in the misty fine rain that had been coming down steadily for hours. Not a tear, not a sob—visible. And she must have thrilled with pride as she gazed at her stalwart husband, so cool looking, so calm eyed, so efficient,—the look of the soldier who had been through much, and carried no illusions about the horrors of war.

"Time was up, and the compartment doors were being closed. Just a handclasp,—but so strong that it brought to her unwilling lips a 'Dear, you are hurting my hand,'—a fervent kiss—and then, the choking in my throat made me turn my head away.

"I heard his 'Well, Cheery Ho,'—the train began to move—another answering call of 'Cheery Ho,'— and he was lost to her sight.

"The colonel sat in the seat beside me, gazed hard at his sword through a filmy mist—then, a deep breath, shoulders squared, and he was his efficient self again. An English lady opposite, whose brothers were at the front, and who could appreciate only too well the feeling in this 'good-bye' discreetly waited a moment or two, then, holding out some newspapers, said to him, 'Would you like to look at these?' He accepted with thanks, and for an hour he steadily read, without seeing a word.

"Soon, however, we were on the most friendly terms, and the trip to France was well under way with only one subject to talk about,—The War. One doesn't talk of anything else. And two questions are always asked of Americans: 'How do you feel about the war?' 'When do you think it will end?'

"(Signed) SALLO M. KAHN."

FIDELITY TRUST CO. CUTS A BIG MELON

375 Per Cent. to Be Divided Among Shareholders and Employes Get Bonus.

Newark, Jan. 25.—The Fidelity Trust Company today declared a dividend of 375 per cent., which is equal to a distribution of $7,500,000 to its shareholders. The dividend will be paid by disbursing 275 per per cent., or $5,500,000 in cash, now, and by distributing 50 per cent., or $1,000,000, in capital stock of the Public Service Corporation held by the Fidelity, to be allotted pro rata at 110, and another 50 per cent. cash dividend will be paid just as soon as the shareholders shall have voted to increase the capital stock of the Fidelity from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000.

With the money received from this latter 50 per cent. the shareholders are supposed to invest in additional stock authorized. The distribution of the money is due to the sale of the trust company's stock in the Prudential Insurance Company through the mutualization of the latter corporation. It is pointed out that with the $3,000,000 profit in the $9,096,000 received by the Fidelity last week for this stock the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the trust company were brought up to nearly $13,000,000.

It was also announced that employes of the Fidelity would be remembered at this time by a distribution to each of an amount equal to 10 per cent. of the annual salary received.

Uzal H. McCarter, president of the Fidelity, gave out a statement explaining the action of the directors, after calling attention to the fact that the sale of the Prudential stock had increased the capital, surplus and undivided profits to $13,000,000.

"This large aggregation of capital," he said, "when considered in relation to the company's total assets of $31,000,000, and more particularly with regard to its deposits of $20,000,000, was manifestly much greater than necessity requires or even the most conservative would approve of. It was in fact top heavy, cumbersome and uneconomic, entailing unnecessary expense upon the company through taxation and demanding extraordinary labor upon the part of the management in its efforts to invest so large a sum not only safely but in such a manner as to have it produce its own proportion of profit, as do the other general assets of the corporation.

"With the mutualization of the Prudential Insurance Company the purpose no longer exists for which these additional funds were obtained from the stockholders, and as that money, invested in Prudential stock and now realized through the sale of that security, is in no way necessary in the general business of this institution the directors, after mature consideration have concluded to reduce the company's surplus funds to an amount which in their judgment will not only more than amply protect the present obligations of the corporation but will be sufficiently large to also take care of such future growth in its business as may come to it."

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Take a tip from one who knows, and don't miss the bill that opened the week at Proctor's Theatre, yesterday. It is an "all-feature" program with every act a headliner, as was evidenced by the rounds of applause following them throughout. Here they are, read them for yourselves: Lala Salbini, the "Venus on wheels," and a supporting company in novelty bicycling, singing, dancing and variety; Dave Rafael, comedy ventriloquist, presenting a special scenic sketch, "On the Farm;" Mardo & Hunter, real comedians, in the side-splitting skit, "The Crazy Recruit," with special scenery and effects; Catherine Cameron & Company, in the protean playlet, "The Up-to-date Girls," cast of five people, and a climax out of the ordinary; Ward & Delmar, comedians de luxe, in an original offering that includes singing, dancing, parodies and "business" in the audience. Beside this big vaudeville offering, the feature film, "The Wishing Ring," was shown yesterday and will be repeated this afternoon and tonight. Tomorrow afternoon, the eighth episode of "Zudora" will be flashed upon the screen, and Thursday comes the second installment of "Runaway June." Follow the crowd to Proctor's and get the biggest value for the money that there is in the city.

TALK OVER WIRE ACROSS NATION

3,400 Mile Circuit, New York to Frisco, Formally Opened.

BELL HAS FIRST SAY

Inventor of 'Phone Talks to Thomas W. Watson, to Whom He Communicated First Message in 1875 —Voices Clearly Heard.

WILL COST $20.70 TO TALK 3,400 MILES.

About March 1 the transcontinental telephone line will be ready for commercial use. The rates will be $20.70 for three minutes and $6.75 for each additional minute.

These rates do not seem so large when one is told that whenever the connection is made between New York and San Francisco about $2,000,000 worth of plant is tied up.

New York, Jan. 26—Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, who first talked over the telephone, his nvientionl, in over the telephone, his invention) in the office of President Theodore N. Vail, on the fifteenth floor of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company building, yesterday, and said:

"Mr. Watson, are you there?"

And out on the Western edge of the continent, in San Francisco, 3,400 miles away, Thomas W. Watson, Mr. Bell's assistant in his first experiments, threw up his hand with a whoop of joy. To him had come as clearly as if he had been only across town the tones of Dr. Bell's voice.

"Indeed, I am!" he said.

"All right, I am glad of that," said the inventor. "Your enunciation seems perfectly clear here. It sounds as if you were in the other room, or in another part of New York, instead of 3,400 miles away."

The first official talk between the Eastern and Western Gateways of the United States was a fact. Over busy cities, rolling praries and the snowy peaks of the Rockies had hummed the words that bridged 3,400 miles in the twitch of an eyelid And away down South, on Jekyl Island, off the coast of Georgia, Mr. Vail listened to this transcontinental conversation as easily as if he had been in his home office in New York.

Later Mayor Mitchell had his little joke with Mayor James Rolph, of San Francisco, who reminded him of Horace Greeley's advice, "Go West, young man, go West." President Wilson talked with the East, the West and the South, from the White House, and later in the evening Mayor James Curley, of Boston, joined in the long distance badinage.

The President said:

"It appeals to the imagination to speak across the continent. It is a fine omen for the exposition that the first thing it has done has been to send its voice over from sea to sea. I congratulate you on the fine prospects for a successful exposition. I am confidently hoping to take part in it after the adjournment of Congress May I not send my greetings to the management and to all whose work has made it possible and made it the great event it promises to be, and convey my personal congratulations to you."

The receiver in San Francisco was then handed to Mr. Watson, with whom the President exchanged greetings.

"I am very glad to have the opportunity of talking with you, Mr. President," said Mr. Bell, who next spoke to the President, "over the first transcontinental telephone line."

"I am very much obliged to you,' said the President. "I want to congratulate you very warmly on this notable consummation of your long labors and remarkable achievements You are justified in feeling a great pride in what has been done. I think this will be remembered as a memorable day."

Then the President talked a few minutes with President Vail, congratulating him on the work of his company.

Of the many interesting moments in the afternoon one that caught the attention of the watchers most closely was when Dr. Bell picked up a duplicate of the original instrument with which he talked to Mr. Watson in 1875, when the distance between the two men was but a few feet. So perfect had been his conception of the transmitter then that yesterday he could talk over it as perfectly as over the modern instrument, the main improvements having been in the wires and other means of transmission.

Dr. Bell's patriarchial face broke into a broad smile of delight as he handled the wooden apparatus built like a box and told of the days when he dreamed of talking over a distance of a few miles. He finally picked up and spoke into it to Mr. Watson, who in 1875 caught the first words that Dr. Bell ever said over the telephone. By request he repeated them yesterday on the second greatest day in the history of his invention.

"Watson, come here, I want you," he said, and then Dr. Bell threw back his head and laughed with pure glee.

"He says it would take him a week to come now."

Describing the system over which he and his men have labored for years, a representative of the 'phone company said that one one thing had made it possible, but it was due to the constant improvement of all the essentials of telephone mechanism, the cables, the wires, switchboards, other connecting apparatus and transmitters. There are only about ten miles of cable in the entire line, the rest being highly improved copper wires strung overhead, four of them. Over these wires were two circuits, so that two distinct conversations were kept up for more than two hours between New York and San Francisco and for about the same time from Boston.

The wire over which the messages carried ran through Plainfield, and in order to avoid trouble two linemen were kept in this city during the demonstration.

BIBLE SCHOOL'S SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Annual Meeting of Trinity Reformed Church Organization Held.

EXCELLENT REPORTS

Question of Changing Session of School is Laid Over to the April Meeting—New Electric Lighting System is Approved.

The annual January meeting of the officers and teachers of Trinity Bible school was held last evening in the church parlors with Superintendent F. E. Smith presiding. Owing to the discussion of changing the hours of the Sunday-school sessions from afternoon to morning there was an unusual large representation of teachers present.

At the December meeting the teachers were requested to make a canvass of their classes and report at this meeting. According to the vote of the members of the school, 231 favor leaving the sessions as they now are, and 193 voted for a morning session the year around. After remarks had been made on the subject by several of the teachers it was finally decided to lay the matter on the table until the April meeting.

The secretary, C. F. Colthar, presented his report, which showed the school to have a membership of 1,116, divided as follows: Officers and teachers, 68; senior department, 282; intermediate department, 112; junior department, 70; primary department, 91; beginners department, 54; cradle roll, 66, and home department, 373. The average attendance for the year had been 386. This average is the largest in the history of the school. The largest attendance was 582 and the smallest 122. Twenty-four Sundays during the year the attendance was over 400 and only eleven Sundays did it go below 350. During the year there has been 19,541 persons attending the school. During the past twelve years the school has grown in membership from 589 to 1,116, and the contributions have increased from $624 to over $1,900.

The treasurer, James B. Conkling, reported receipts for the year amounting to $1,901.42, and disbursements amounting to $1,681.04, leaving a balance January 1, 1915, of $220.38.

It was voted that the school contribute its share toward having new lights installed in the Sunday-school room, as the present lighting system is unsatisfactory on account of the low hanging chandeliers.

Several amendments to the constitution were offered and these were all laid on the table until the next meeting. Mr. Smith appointed E. F. Sheppard, Mrs. Rapalje and Rev. J. Y. Broek as a committee to revise the constitution and have their report ready at the next meeting.

N. P. H. S. NOTE.

Plainfield High School and Leal School basketball forces will meet for the first time this season in an Interscholastic League match in the Y. M. C. A. gym, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. Plainfield has just taken the lead of the league by winning over the boroughites while the private school aggaregation is aching to get its first chance at the prospective champions. Coach Wardlaw's players have been playing some tight games and close guarding has become their specialty.

With the advantage of their home court, Leals expect to give their rival a hard fight for the game, which in the event of winning would make a three cornered tie. J. J. McNamee will be the official and the teams will lineup as follows:

P. H. S.	Leals

Peacock guard	Harrington

Manager Lillian Spencer, of the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team, has arranged a night game and dance for next Friday. The borough girls' opponents will be the Plainfield High School Alumni and this will be the second meeting of these two teams this year. The game will be played in Saengerbund Hall and will start at 8:15 o'clock. Dancing will follow.

Miss Helen Brynarski has some new players who did not play in the first game and the city team hopes to reverse the score of the first battle, which was won by North Plainfield. The teams will lineup as follows:

SUMMIT GAME OFF.

The basketball game between North Plainfield and Summit High Schools, which was to be played at the latter place tomorrow afternoon, has been postponed indefinitely because of a misunderstanding between the managers. The Summit aggregation is scheduled to play at Elizabeth that day and the boroughites will be idle until Saturday night, when they play a return game with Bernardsville, at that place. Another game will probably be arranged with Summit to be played at Summit.

HOT WATER NOW FOR HOPE PLAYERS

Installation of New Boiler Gives Chapel Athletes Good Showers.

The installation of the new boiler in the gym of Hope chapel was completed last week and hot water was used for the first time by the basketball players after the game Thursday night. This improvement is a great addition inasmuch as it furnishes hot water for wash basins and shower baths.

The boiler is the one purchased from the Y. M. C. A. when that organization installed a new one and is just the thing for the Fourth street building. In speaking of the improvement, one connected with the Hope team stated that it was his opinion that the lack of proper facilities was the cause of some of the boys being laid up. The tank will hold about 300 gallons of water and visiting teams will now have a chance to take comfortable baths after the game.

PLENTY DOING ON T. A. B. SOCIETY'S BASKETBALL COURT

Perhaps the liveliest basketball court in this vicinity is the one in St. Mary's T. A. B. Hall. Every evening there is a game on between the three teams which are in the club. The teams have made wonderful progress for the few months they have been playing.

Under the careful handling of "Bill" Mahoney, a "past master" at the game, the finer points have been easily grasped. One night a week is reserved for the young women who are interested in the game, and it is needless to say that they are quite adept at the game.

SECOND GAME FOR CITY TITLE PLAYED SATURDAY

The second game of the series for the basketball championship of Plainfield will be played next Saturday night, between the Hope Chapel and Y. M. C. A. teams on the chapel court. Since the first game on the association court Christmas night, which resulted in an easy victory for the home players, both aggregations have been playing a fine brand of ball and the game will undoubtedly be one of the best ever played between these two teams.

Last year Hope Chapel won the series.

TOWNLEY AND STINE MAY WORK AGAINST SOLDIERS

"Hub" Stine and George Townley, of the borough, will probably get a chance to work against the Army baseball team this spring, as the West Point manager has placed the Springfield Training School nine on his schedule. This game is booked for May 22 at West Point. All of the games, which number twenty-one, will be played on the soldiers' home diamond.

The borough boys, who formed the star battery for Springfield last season, will undoubtedly get places again this year because of their good work. Stine caught all of the games last year and Townley pitched his full share of contests.

ELKS' HOUSE TOURNEY.

Two matches will be played in the Elks' House Bowling League tonight, the Waldorf and Todd and VanBuren and Townley teams hooking up. The Townley aggregation has lost only one game so far in the race, while Waldorf and Todd are tied for next to last place.

JOHNNY GRIFFITHS' BEST CHANCE TO BEAT WELSH IS TO SCORE KNOCKOUT

Johnny Griffiths (top) and Freddie Welsh.

Johnyy Griffiths apparently has but one chance to defeat Welsh in their battle at Akron on February 1 and that is to score a knockout. Griffiths can punch hard, but Welsh has never been knocked out, and doesn't propose to be at this late day.

The Jerusalem and Anchor bowling teams, contenders in the Masonic Bowling League, came together for the first time last night on the Elks' alleys and the Jerusalem pinners sprang the surprise of the league by taking all three games from their opponents who were holding down third place in the league. Jerusalem has been in the cellar all season with only two victories against twenty-five defeats and the Anchor men were completely surprised at the showing made.

The scores of the first game were 841 to 835. Blimm again led off with a 188. A. Mulford hit for 148 while Causbrook finished up with a 141. VanEmburgh and Vail were the high scorers for the Anchor aggregation in this game, getting 168 and 166 respectively. The scores of this game were 745 to 729.

The Jerusalems had a close shave in the last game but managed to win out with a margin of two pins, the scores being 702 to 700. Honeyman's 89 almost proved fatal in making the clean sweep. The scores follow:

CONTRAST IN EFFICIENCY OF STATE-OWNED AND PRIVATE RAILROADS IN FRANCE.

Students of government ownership will be interested in an editorial in The New York Telephone Review, which presents some rather striking figures regarding the operation of government owned railroads in France. Although not expressed in the article, the parallel is clearly implied between the situation of railroads under government control and of other public service enterprises under similar management.

"The Councilor of State of France has issued the report on the operations of the state-owned railroads in that country during 1913. It is stated as a cause for congratulation that the loss in operation during the year was $16,000,000, which is less than in 1912. The state-owned railroad lines in France are about one-fifth of the total mileage. Their freight rates are higher than the privately owned lines, but their passenger rates are lower. Out of every hundred dollars of revenue received the government spent from $83 to $86 for operating expenses, the balance being insufficient to meet the fixed charges of $26,000,000 a year. Out of every hundred dollars of revenue received the privately owned lines in France spent $59.60 for operating expenses, showing again that private enterprise is conducted more economically than government undertakings.

"Both the government and private lines in France charged more than five times as much per ton per mile for freight as the railroads of the United States. The figures are: In France, government lines nearly one and two-thirds cents, private lines nearly one and one-third cents; in the United States, less than a quarter of a cent."

The fact that it costs privately owned railroads only about two-thirds of what it costs government owned railroads to operate in France is a startling fact, and the figures may cast some valuable light upon the railroad situation in this country.

TELEPHONE SIGN TWENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD.

Twenty-five years ago, in December, 1889, the Blue Bell was adopted as the insignia of the telephone business. The New York Telephone Review tells of its being designed by Angus S. Hibbard of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Chicago, and of the enormous proportions to which its influence and meaning have grown. As the symbol of a great business enterprise and of a universal convenience, this sign is probably more widely known than any device of similar purpose.

Al G. Fields, in Al G. Fields Minstrels, at Plainfield Theatre, next Wednesday, Matin eeand Night.

When the Itala Film Company, of Turin, Italy, was casting Gabriele d'Annunzio's scenario masterpiece, "Cabiria," they were balked for some time in filling the character of Maciste, a Numidian slave. According to the scenario, Maciste was to be a man of unusual size and strength and when no one could be found who suited d'Annunzio the directors tried to prevail on him to be content with a smaller man, but they were unsuccessful. d'Annunzio insisted upon a Goliath. A short time later, d'Annunzio, while strolling through the shipping districts, was attracted by a crowd of people who were evidently very much interested in the unloading of a ship. Approaching, he saw the object of their interest. A huge man, veritably a small giant, was casting hogsheads about as though they were mere paving blocks. One look was sufficient to convince him that here was the object of their search; a man with the qualifications for the part of Maciste. He was immediately engaged, but the hardest task was still to come, for it required several months of coaching to teach him to walk correctly and the necessity of gestures to make one's self understood in motion picture photography. "Cabiria" will be exhibited at the Plainfield Theatre, on Wednesday and Thursday.

"Minstrelsy of the Better Kind" is a line in the reading matter of Al. G. Field. It would be permissible to add "Minstrelsy of the Rapid Fire Kind." The jokes, songs, dances and scenic surroundings all move with that swiftness pleasing to the spectator. From the rise to the descent of the curtain that shuts out of view as pretty a stage picture as ever devised, the rapidity of action is kept up. The closing scene referred to as pretty is even more than pretty,—it is ennobling and appropriate, following a ludicrous burlesque on the Mexican war, and this, too, is appropo in the light of recent happenings in Greaserland. There bursts into view a tropical scene,—a birds-eye view of the Panama Canal. Warships come up out of the mists of the sea, while the moving clouds above show here and there illuminated pictures of war and peace heroes, with the colors of the various States blended with "Old Glory;" a dirigible balloon with mounted guns. From the back come marching men,—white-clad sailors with the colors of their ships flying. This is more than minstrelsy of the better kind,—it is an arousing of the patriotic feelings of the masses that tends to keep alive the love of the flag and our country. Al. Field and his company will appear at the Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday afternoon and evening, February 3.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

RESIGNATIONS WITHDRAWN

city treasurer and the official be given a fixed salary. In cases where salaries are fixed by ordinance Mr. Reed said that an amendment to the ordinance would be necessary. The opinion was based on the 1914 law. This will mean that all fees which have been going to the city clerk will, in the future, be received by the city and he will be paid a stated salary.

Mr. MacMurray has been receiving a salary of $1,200 a year and in addition the fees, and he has been paying Mr. Kean $200 a year out of his income. What salary the Council will fix for Mr. MacMurray has not yet been determined or at least made public, but will be within a short time.

It is the intention of the Council to not only pay the clerk a fixed salary, but the same rule will apply to Mr. Wean and all clerical help engaged for city purposes, so that Mr. MacMurray will not be obliged to pay the salaries of the two young women who are now engaged in his office as well as in the office of Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett.

Under the new arrangement Mayor Leighton Calkins or anyone else in authority may feel at liberty to use the stenographers or clerks for city business from time to time and it is the opinion that the arrangement will be more satisfactory to all concerned. However, the Council has every disposition to fix the salaries of those concerned commensurate with the work performed and there is no desire to cut down the compensation to any unreasonable amount.

COUNCIL GRANTS LICENSES

thinking that he was voting against George R. Wescott's application. When he learned of his mistake he was permitted to change his vote, allowing it to stand in the negative against the latter's application, which he opposed.

Prior to the Council's action on the liquor license applications, remonstrances were received from the W. C. T. U., the Plainfield and Rahway Religious Society of Friends and Clarence L. LaRue, chairman of the good citizenship committee of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union. They were referred to the license committee, while a communication from the Plainfield Ministers Association thanking the Council for its decision not to increase the number of saloons was filed.

William Newcorn, representing Henry Haurand, an applicant for a wholesale license, withdrew the latter's application, and later when Councilman C. C. Graves, chairman of the license committee, recommended that Henry Vosseller's application for a wholesale license be refused, Mr. Blatz explained that the Calkins ordinance would prevent favorable action and his motion to lay it on the table was passed, allowing Mr. Vosseller an opportunity to withdraw his application. The liquor applications granted are as follows:

Peter Floersch, Queen City Hotel; Henry F. Windham, Hotel Waldorf; William J. Kitchen, Hotel Kensington; Jacob Blimm, Somerset street; Michael P. Devine, West Third and Liberty streets; Godfrey J. Weinman, 213 Park avenue; Michael F. Watson, 207 Grant avenue; Ellsworth C. Wescott, East Front street, all saloons; Frank Linke, West Front street; Eastern Bottling Company, West Second street and Central avenue, and George R. Wescott, 133-135 North avenue, wholesale. All the licenses become effective March 1 next.

1,200, while not taxed to its limit, was three-quarters filled, and many of those present had their initial glance at the immense assembly hall. This was the centre of attraction for the visitors and comments on its adaptability to High School needs were many and favorable. It is sixty feet wide and ninety feet long. At one end of the auditorium is the stage with a depth of thirty feet and a proscenium opening thirty-five feet wide and eighteen feet high. The hall is illuminated by an artistic arrangement of electric bulbs in the side-walls and ceiling.

Hon. Calvin N. Kendall, State Commissioner of School Education, was the principal speaker on the program and he said in part:

"A wide campaign in the interests of High School education is not only becoming common in New Jersey, but throughout the entire country. In 1861, the date of the outbreak of the Civil War, there were not more than forty public High Schools in the United States, while today the number is placed at something over 12,000, scattered throughout the area reaching from Maine to California. There has been a 100 per cent. increase in the enrollment in High Schools during the past ten years and in the last twenty years it has swelled 275 per cent. in New Jersey. While this boom in High School education was in progress the increase in population amounted to only seventy-four per cent. In New Jersey 40,000 boys and girls, ranging in age from fifteen to twenty years are attending the upper schools. This is wonderful when the fact that New Jersey has not been conspicuous in the past for the number of young people in its High Schools is taken into consideration.

"Several States have heretofore led New Jersey in this branch of educational work, but we are now fast beginning to assume a position among the leaders. Today one out of every eighty persons is a pupil in the public High Schools. Forty years ago one out of every 250 was a pupil. In time one out of every sixty will be the proportion. All of the important cities of the State now has, or is about to have, a fine High School building, with the possible exception of two. There are twelve or fourteen High Schools in the State that necessitated an expenditure of upwards of $250,000. The equipment in the modern High Schools is equal to that of the colleges.

"Plainfield, with the exception of one other city, leads the State in the use of school buildings for recreative purposes. People of all classes are entitled to reap benefit from the municipal educational institutions and the practice of opening the schools at night for recreative and social gatherings should be encouraged.

"The time is not far distant when New Jersey is going to have a college for women and our larger cities are going to provide their boys and girls with facilities to gain a two years' college education in the home High Schools."

"In a few years there will be 1,500,000 boys in the public schools of this country. Laws have been enacted in New Jersey which entitle every boy and girl between the years of five and eighteen to proper educational advantages if he wants them. One of our latest battleships cost the nation $12,000,000, three-quarters of the amount it cost the State to operate all of its schools in one year. An expenditure of $650,000 annually is needed to operate this type of battleship. The school is an institution of construction, while the battleship is one of destruction.

"The automobiles in this country, used exclusively for recreative purposes, are equivalent in number to the total of public school pupils in the United States. In one city of four million people the cost of operating the schools was equal, last year, to the amount that city spent at its motion picture houses and theatres. It costs the State a little more than twenty cents a day for each pupil in the schools. There is no danger of the American people spending too much money on the education of their children."

Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson likened the school institution to a great factory, the graduates being the products turned out to be used by the community. He contrasted the wage earning capacity of the boy without a High School education with that of a youth who has had the advantage of modern training and declared that every item of expense incurred in properly educating children is justified. Dr. Maxson spoke of the increased enrollment in the High Schools and compared it with that of the lower grades. The speaker concluded his address by comparing the advantages offered by present day High School courses with those of former years and the growth of the High School curriculum from one course to six.

Mayor Leighton Calkins gave a historical account of education, dealing with the essentials of pedagogy from the time of the ancient Greeks until the present time. He complimented the School Board on the completion of the Ninth street building and referred to it as a valuable asset to the community.

William S. Tyler, president of the local Board of Education, acted as the presiding officer and prior to the introduction of the speakers, read a paper presenting many statistics showing the cost of school maintenance in Plainfield and the advantages offered the local pupil, contrasting these conditions with those existing a number of years ago. He described the facilities of the new building and explained the manner in which the $388,000 had been spent in construction and equipment.

William D. Murray, Plainfield High School's best known graduate and one of the oldest, gave an interesting reminiscent talk, comparing present day educational facilities in Plainfield with those of a half century ago. His address was punctuated with a number of humorous anecdotes describing personal experiences.

The Rev. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, delivered the invocation, and during the evening a program of music was rendered by the Plainfield High School orchestra under the direction of Margaret Louise Evans.

February Sale of Furniture

(ORIGINAL)

First Courtesy Day Tomorrow

Offering Privilege of Advance Selection Now, Purchases to Date from Next Month

Home-makers, young people about to be married, house committee-men of clubs, managers of hotels—everybody—all are invited. And when you come you will see—

(1) The largest collection of good furniture under one roof in New York;

(2) The best furniture the world has produced;

(3) Prices which are lowest because the Wanamaker capacity for buying and distributing is greatest.

Fifty-nine car-loads have come in during the last few days. These are in addition to our vast regular stocks.

$946,000 is the tally of the value of all this furniture, Wanamaker rating. It is to be sold for nearly a quarter of a million dollars less.

Every piece and suite will bear a February Sale tag, on which is already marked the regular Wanamaker selling price and the February Sale price. This is done to identify quality and grade; something not one in a thousand can do from examination alone. It is our warrant of the true economies in the sale.

Ten per cent. is the least reduction in price on any piece; fifty per cent. the highest. 25 per cent. is the average saving.

You will find the library, living room and hall furniture on the Fifth Gallery, New Building; there, also, in the entrance to the House Palatial, the period furniture which is included in the Sale.

The dining room and porch furniture are on the Sixth Gallery; the bedroom furniture on the Seventh.

We went over the floors yesterday with the furniture chief. The words required to do adequate justice to the display would sound trite.

"In the things that count for long and satisfactory service this furniture excels," he said.

He pulled a drawer from out a mahogany chiffonier.

"Did you ever see a cleaner close? Nothing to mar the smooth opening and closing. This chiffonier, as you see, is $54. It will be $32.50 in the sale."

A 10-piece dining-room suite in mahogany has quartered white oak interiors, after the fashion of English made furniture. It was marked $412. It will be about $103 less tomorrow.

"Look at the barrel support to that table," he said, turning up the extension table in a 10-piece Jacobean suite. "Solid oak, as is every piece, and though partially hidden, just as carefully carved and finished as the rail to the sideboard."

"Note the chair; its style and color. No amount of money could buy a more correct design. And see how beautifully it is made. It came from one of the biggest and best furniture makers of America."

"Here are five legs grouped under this extension table. If it had been made with but one, who would have appreciated the difference?"

"Observe closely the rich oak panels in that Charles the Second suite of fine old Jacobean oak. Now look at the table legs, and you will see them just as carefully carved and finished. That suite will be about $181 less tomorrow."

And so it was on every floor; carefulness of detail, of workmanship; in the modest pieces as well as the magnificent; in the simple golden oak dining-room suite equally with the wonderful Adam bedroom suite of rarest mahogany.

Every grade of good, substantial furniture is in the sale; every desirable wood; every finish; every period and school represented in pure designs.

The furniture chief says the showing is without an equal in the world.

Well, you have four days, beginning tomorrow, in which to see it and to make comparison.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"Five Hundred Dollars a Potato."

PERSUADING, bullying, and, at times, by main strength, men were dragged from their bunks and forced to dress. Smoke selected the mildest cases for the burial squad. Another squad was told off to supply the wood by which the graves were burned down into the frozen muck and gravel. Still another squad had to chop firewood and impartially supply every cabin. Those who were too weak for outdoor work were put to cleaning and scrubbing the cabins and washing clothes. One squad brought in many loads of spruce boughs and every stove was used for the brewing of spruce tea.

But, no matter what face Smoke and Shorty put on it, the situation was grim and serious. At least thirty fearful and impossible cases could not be taken from the beds, as the two men, with nausea and horror, learned, while one, a woman, died in Laura Sibley's cabin. Yet strong measures were necessary.

When the working gangs came in at noon they found decently cooked dinners awaiting them, prepared by the weaker members of their cabins under the tutelage and drive of Smoke and Shorty.

"That'll do," Smoke said at 3 in the afternoon. "Knock off. Go to your bunks. You may be feeling rotten now, but you'll be the better for it tomorrow. Of course it hurts to get well, but I'm going to get you well."

"Too late," Amos Wentworth sneered pallidly at Smoke's efforts. "They ought to have started in that way last fall."

"Come along with me," Smoke answered. "Pick up those two pails. You're not ailing."

From cabin to cabin the three men went, dosing every man and woman with a full pint of spruce tea. Nor was it easy.

"You might as well learn at the start that we mean business," Smoke stated to the first obdurate, who lay on his back groaning through set teeth. "Stand by, Shorty." Smoke caught the patient by the nose and tapped the solar plexus section so as to make the mouth gasp open. "Now, Shorty! Down she goes!"

And down she went, accompanied with unavoidable splutterings and strangulings.

"We're covering this spruce tea route four times a day, and there are eighty of you to be dosed each time," Smoke informed Laura Sibley. "So we've no time to fool. Will you take it, or must I hold your nose?" His thumb and forefinger hovered eloquently above her. "It's vegetable, so you needn't have any qualms."

"I'll—I'll take it," she quavered. "Hurry up!"

That night, exhausted as by no hard day of trail, Smoke and Shorty crawled into their blankets.

"I'm fairly sick with it," Smoke confessed. "The way they suffer is awful. But exercise is the only remedy I can think of, and it must be given a thorough trial. I wish we had a sack of raw potatoes."

"Sparkins, he can't wash no more dishes," Shorty said. "It hurts him so he sweats his pain. I seen him sweat it. I had to put him back in the bunk he was that helpless."

"If only we had raw potatoes," Smoke went on. "The vital, essential something is missing from that prepared stuff. The life has been evaporated out of it."

"An' if that young fellow Jones in the Brownlow cabin don't croak before mornin' I miss my guess."

"For heaven's sake be cheerful," Smoke chided.

In the morning not only was Jones dead, but one of the stronger men who had worked on the firewood squad was found to have hanged himself. A nightmare procession of days set in. For a week, steeling himself to the task, Smoke enforced the exercise and the spruce tea, and one by one and in twos and threes he was compelled to knock off the workers. As he was learning, exercise was the last thing in the world for scurvy patients. The diminishing burial squad was kept steadily at work, and a surplus half dozen graves were always burned down and waiting. One day Smoke saw the seeress entering Amos Wentworth's cabin and followed after her. At the door he could hear her voice, whimpering and pleading.

"Just for me," she was begging as Smoke entered. "I won't tell a soul."

Both glanced guiltily at the intruder, and Smoke was certain that he was on the edge of something, he knew not what, and he cursed himself for not having eavesdropped.

"Out with it!" he commanded harshly. "What is it?"

"What is what?" Amos Wentworth asked sullenly. And Smoke could not name what was what.

Grimmer and grimmer grew the situation. In that dark hole of a canyon the horrible death list mounted up. Each day, in apprehension, Smoke and Shorty examined each other's mouth for the whitening of the gums and mucous membranes—the invariable first symptom of the disease.

"I've quit," Shorty announced one evening. "I've been thinkin' it over, an' I quit. I can make a go at slave drivin', but cripple drivin' 's too much for my stomach. They go from bad to worse. They ain't twenty men I can drive to work. I told Jackson this afternoon he could take to his bunk. He was gettin' ready to suicide. I could see it stickin' out all over him. Exercise ain't no good."

"I've made up my mind to the same thing," Smoke answered.

The everlasting miracle of Wentworth's immunity perplexed Smoke. Why should he alone not have developed scurvy? Why did Laura Sibley hate him and at the same time whine and snivel and beg from him?

On several occasions Smoke made it a point to drop into Wentworth's cabin at mealtime. But one thing did he note that was suspicious and that was Wentworth's suspicion of him. Next he tried sounding out Laura Sibley.

"Raw potatoes would cure everybody here," he remarked to the seeress. "I know it. I've seen it work before."

The flare of conviction in her eyes, followed by bitterness and hatred, told him the scent was warm.

"Why didn't you bring in a supply of fresh potatoes on the steamer?" he asked.

"We did. But coming up the river we sold them all out at a bargain at Fort Yukon. We had plenty of the evaporated kinds, and we knew they'd keep better. They wouldn't even freeze."

Smoke groaned. "Now, mightn't there have been a couple of odd sacks left—accidentally, you know, mislaid on the steamer?"

She shook her head, as he thought, a trifle belatedly, then added, "We never found any."

"But mightn't there?" he persisted.

"How do I know?" she rasped angrily. "I didn't have charge of the commissary."

"And Amos Wentworth did," he jumped to the conclusion. "Very good. Now what is your private opinion—just between us two? Do you think Wentworth has any raw potatoes stored away somewhere?"

"No; certainly not. Why should he?"

Struggle as he would with her, Smoke could not bring her to admit the possibility.

That night, when the camp groaned and slept or groaned and did not sleep, Smoke went to Wentworth's unlighted cabin.

"Listen to me, Wentworth," he said. "I've got a thousand dollars in dust right here in this sack. I'm a rich man in this country, and I can afford it. I think I'm getting touched. Put a raw potato in my hand and the dust is yours. Here, heft it."

And Smoke thrilled when Amos Wentworth put out his hand in the darkness and hefted the gold. Smoke heard him fumble in the blankets and then felt pressed into his hand not the heavy gold sack, but the unmistakable potato, the size of a hen's egg, warm from contact with the other's body.

Smoke did not wait till morning. He and Shorty were expecting at any time the deaths of their worst two cases, and to this cabin the partners went. Grated and mashed up in a cup, skin and clinging specks of earth and all, was the thousand dollar potato—a thick fluid that they fed, several drops at a time, into the frightful orifices that had once been mouths. Shift by shift through the long night Smoke and Shorty relieved each other at administering the potato juice, rubbing it into the poor swollen gums where loose teeth rattled together and compelling the swallowing of every drop of the precious elixir.

By evening of the next day the change for the better in the two patients was miraculous and almost unbelievable. They were no longer the worst cases. In forty-eight hours, with the exhaustion of the potato, they were temporarily out of danger, though far from being cured.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," Smoke said to Wentworth. "I've got holdings in this country, and my paper is good anywhere. I'll give you $500 a potato up to $50,000 worth. That's 100 potatoes."

"Was that all the dust you had?" Wentworth queried.

"Shorty and I scraped up all we had. But, straight, he and I are worth several millions between us."

"I haven't any potatoes," Wentworth said finally. "Wish I had. That potato I gave you was the only one. I'd been saving it all the winter for fear I'd get this scurvy. I only sold it so as to be able to buy a passage out of the country when the river opens."

Despite the cessation of potato juice, the two treated cases continued to improve through the third day. The untreated cases went from bad to worse. On the fourth morning three corpses were buried.

Then Smoke and Shorty together invaded Wentworth's cabin, throwing him out in the snow, while they turned the interior upside down. Laura Sibley hobbled in and frantically joined them in the search.

Though the very floor was dug up, they discovered nothing.

Another day passed, during which they kept a steady watch on Wentworth's movements. Several times when he started out, water bucket in hand, for the creek they casually approached the cabin, and each time he hurried back without the water.

"I'll give you $500 a potato up to $50,000 worth."

"They're cached right here in his cabin," Shorty said. "But where? We sure overhauled it plenty." He stood up and pulled on his mittens. "I'm goin' to find 'em if I have to pull the blame shack down a log at a time."

He glanced at Smoke, who, with an intent, absent face, had not heard him.

"What's eatin' you?" Shorty demanded wrathfully.

"Just trying to remember something, Shorty."

"What's the game?"

"Watch me, that's all," Smoke baffled. "I always told you, Shorty, that a deficient acquaintance with literature was a handicap, even in the Klondike. Now, what we're going to do came out of a book. I read it when I was a kid, and it will work. Come on!"

Several minutes later, under a pale gleaming, greenish aurora borealis, the two men crept up to Amos Wentworth's cabin. Carefully and noiselessly they poured kerosene over the logs, extra drenching the door frame and window sash. Then the match was applied, and they watched the flaming oil gather headway. They drew back beyond the growing light and waited.

They saw Wentworth rush out, stare wildly at the conflagration and plunge back into the cabin. Scarcely a minute elapsed when he emerged, this time slowly, half doubled over, his shoulders burdened by a sack, heavy and unmistakable.

Smoke and Shorty sprang at him like a pair of famished wolves. They hit him right and left at the same instant. He crumpled down under the weight of the sack, which Smoke pressed over with his hands to make sure. Then he felt his knees clasped by Wentworth's arms as the man turned a ghastly face upward.

"Give me a dozen, only a dozen—half a dozen—and you can have the rest," he squalled. "Just half a dozen," he wailed. "Just half a dozen. I was going to turn them over to you—tomorrow. Yes, tomorrow. That was my idea. They're life! They're life! Just half a dozen!"

"Where's the other sack?" Smoke bluffed.

"I ate it up," was the reply, unimpeachably honest. "That sack's all that's left. Give me a few. You can have the rest."

"Ate 'em up!" Shorty screamed. "A whole sack! An' them geezers dyin' for want of 'em! This for you! An' this! An' this! An' this! You swine! You hog!"

There was no sleep in camp that night. Hour after hour Smoke and Shorty went the rounds, doling the life renewing potato juice, a quarter of a spoonful at a dose, into the poor ruined mouths of the population. And through the following day while one slept the other kept up the work.

There were no more deaths. The most awful cases began to mend with an immediacy that was startling.

"Nary a potato," Shorty told the whining, begging Wentworth. "You ain't even touched with scurvy. You got outside a whole sack, an' you're loaded against scurvy for twenty years. Knowin' you, I've come to understand God. I always wondered why he let Satan live. Now I know. He let him live just as I let you live. But it's a cryin' shame, just the same."

"A word of advice," Smoke told Wentworth. "These men are getting well fast. Shorty and I are leaving in a week, and there will be nobody to protect you when these men go after you. There's the trail. Dawson's eighteen days' travel."

"Gentlemen, I beg of you, listen to me," Wentworth whined. "I'm a stranger in this country. I don't know the trail. Let me travel with you. I'll give you $1,000 if you'll let me travel with you."

"Sure," Smoke grinned maliciously, "if Shorty agrees."

"Who? Me?" Shorty stiffened for a supreme effort. "I ain't nobody. Wood ticks ain't got nothin' on me when it comes to humility. I'm a worm, a maggot, brother to the pollywog an' child of the blowfly. I ain't afraid or ashamed of nothin' that creeps or crawls. But travel with that mistake of creation—go 'way, man! I ain't proud, but you turn my stomach."

And Amos Wentworth went away, alone, dragging a sled loaded with provisions sufficient to last him to Dawson. A mile down the trail Shorty overhauled him.

"Come here to me," was Shorty's greeting. "Come across. Fork over. Cough up."

"I don't understand," Wentworth quavered, shivering from recollection of the two beatings, hand and foot, he had already received from Shorty.

"That thousand dollars, d'ye understand that? That thousand dollars gold Smoke bought that measly potato with. Come through."

And Amos Wentworth passed the gold sack over.

"Hope a skunk bites you an' you get howlin' hydrophoby," were the terms of Shorty's farewell.

WHITE MONKEY FOR THE MATINEE MAID.

Not a little conspicuous is this lately completed costume for a debutante. White—or bleached—monkey fur is the trimming and even the reticule for opera-glass and vanity belongings is edged with the white fur. The tailored suit is made of blue broadcloth and an odd, knotted cord girdle defines a low waistline, over a gathered tunic and graceful back and front panels.

A HAT AND CAP

All the tendency in the newest headwear seems to be toward narrowness and height. In this walking hat of black velvet the brim of uneven width rolls close to the crown, the latter supporting two puffy white silk pompons fore and aft. The boudoir cap is of fine white net with lace ruffle and crown banded by a strip of pearl passementerie. A garland of closely set silk roses conceals joining of crown and frill.

WOMAN LAYS CORNERSTONE.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 26—Mrs. Julian L. Nugent, of St. Louis, will today lay the cornerstone for the million dollar building given by her grandmother, Mrs. W. Van Rensselaer Smith, of New York, to the Young Men's Christian Association. The building will be the largest and most complete of its kind in the world. Mrs. Smith has donated it in the memory of her son, Clarence E. Smith, who was the father of Mrs. Nugent, who today leads the ceremonies.

SMALLEY "FAVORITE SON."

In the paming of "favorite sons" eligible for consideration in the race for the governorship of New Jersey at the next election, Senator William W. Smalley, of Bound Brook, has been mentioned. He has a record of more than seven years in the State Legislature, four years in the House and three years in the State Senate.

Majority Vote Will Make People Think.

As a result of the house vote on the Hobson resolution prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquor becomes a national political issue. It is possible that before another presidential campagin this issue will obtrude itself as a determining factor in the choice of candidates on the national ticket of the various parties. Yet in national conventions in former years platform declarations against sumptuary laws were common.

The heavy vote for Nation-wide Prohibition serves the good purpose of setting people to thinking.

A majority of the members of the present national House of Representatives favors prohibition as a national policy. Their attitude reflects public opinion in many sections with a fair degree of accuracy. It cannot be doubted that temperance sentiment is growing in the nation. If this growth is to continue to breed prohibition sentiment one is bound to assume that the Congressional vote against the liquor traffic will be still more formidable in future sessions.

The liquor question has made an impressive entry into national politics, and there it is likely to stay for a considerable time.—Chicago Daily News.

Congressman Richmond P. Hobson.

Who are the agents that teach the boys to drink? Thousands and tens of thousands of agents of the liquor trust all over the land. You need not think the bootlegger is simply sustained by his peddling; he is sustained by the great national liquor interests. They must get the boys, and they go after them systematically. Why do they do it? What is their motive? Not to harm the boys. I am not fanatical on this question. They do it to get the profits from the sale of their goods. We propose to remove the motive; we propose to put out the sale and everything that pertains to the sale.

Has It?

Has the liquor traffic ever built a church, asylum, or endowed a college?

Has it ever set a standard of business character which is recognized in banks and counting-rooms?

Has it ever given society a single great-brained and great-hearted man?

Has it ever made a wife happier than she would be with a sober husband?

Has it ever led a youth up into noble manhood?

Has it ever paid its own way as a revenue returner?

Has it ever lessened crime and criminals?—The Issue.

"Some people say, 'the old devil does well, let him stay. We must have the license from the saloons to pave our streets and light our city. Let the saloons stay.' Every saloon gives the devil a better chance to get your boy and I want to tell you if you want a better world, then do something to keep the devil from getting your boys.

"If you want to drive the devil out of the world, hit him with a cradle instead of a crutch

"I tell you the money paid into the public treasury by that dirty, rotten gang of moral cut-throats and character assassins will kindle the fire of hell under any community that accepts it.

Although the Governor made no direct reference to State finances, they will be one of the pressing questions before the lawmakers. Most of the State departments and commissions are asking for more money, and Charities and Corrections Commissioner Byers says a million dollars should be spent for new buildings to enable the State to meet its true obligations to its fifteen thousand wards. That there will have to be rigid economy is shown by the fact that the fiscal year closed with expenditures of $642,000 more than the income and a deficit was only avoided because there was more than $1,000,000 balance at the beginning of the year.

Does it pay to license a traffic which increases taxes by creating a necessity for jails, penitentiaries, asylums, hospitals, almshouses, orphanages, reformatories, police and criminal courts?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WEEK.

Christian Endeavor Week, February 7-14, will be observed as follows at Trinity Reformed church. February 7, the society will attend the evening service in a body, when Rev. J. Y. Broek will preach an appropriate sermon; February 8, enlistment day, a social will be held; February 9, local union day; February 10, church day, the society will take charge of the prayer meeting; February 14, decision day, initiation of new members with sermons appropriate to the occasion.

Mother McGrew and Caroline Crow

I wonder if you ever happened to see
A bird called a crow, sitting up in a tree.
If you ever did, you have noticed, I think,
That its feathers are shiny, and just black as ink.

Now once on a time young Caroline Crow
Had feathers as lovely and white as the snow.
They would have been white, I've no doubt, to this day,
If Caroline Crow had kept them that way.

But she was so careless, she played in the dirt,
And said a soiled feather or two didn't hurt.
The consequence was that she looked like a fright,
All drabbled and black, when she came in at night.

Poor Mother McGrew was quite in despair.
She said, "I've tried everything else, I declare!
So the next time that you soil your pretty white dress,
I'll just make you wear an old black one, I guess."

Young Caroline Crow went on with her play,
And came home more dirty than ever next day.
Then Mother McGrew led her upstairs right quick,
And tapped her three times with her magical stick.

And Caroline's dress that had once been snow white
Was changed all at once to a dress black as night.
And though she pretended that she didn't mind,
And WANTED a black dress, I'm rather inclined

To think that she really was sorry; I guess
That most any crow would prefer a white dress.
And though to this day they are all black, I know
They'd rather be white—you just ask a Crow!

Glimpses of Married Life
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Let me see, have I seen you since your daughter Edith's baby came?" said Mrs. Wright, as she sipped her tea. "So much has happened."

"I can't remember," replied Mrs. Gibson.

"Has Edith a good maid?"

"She has Amanda," replied Mrs. Wright.

"Who is Amanda?"

"Why, don't you remember that queer maid we had for two or three years? She went about carrying an atmosphere of despair which she spread broadcast. After Edith's engagement the gloom was blacker than ever."

"What was the matter with her?" asked the hostess.

"Oh, 'nobody loved her,' and 'she didn't amount to anything,' and so on. It got so she would not eat proper food; she would stand by the stove and eat out of the frying pan instead of setting her table in decent fashion. When I remonstrated with her she said gloomily: 'It's good enough for me. I ain't anybody.' It got on my nerves."

"Poor thing, what did life hold for her?" asked Mrs. Gibson.

"She was well and strong and had a place to work where she was treated with consideration. You must admit there are plenty of people worse off. But all counted for nothing, because she had no sweetheart. The preparations for Edith's wedding emphasized the contrast in positions, of course. What did the girl do but advertise for a husband!" exclaimed Mrs. Wright with disgust in her tone.

"Advertise! How?" asked Mrs. Gibson.

"I did not see the paper. The first I knew a disreputable looking man was hanging about the place. Mr. Wright was about to telephone to the police station one evening when Amanda said: 'Oh, don't, Mr. Wright. He is my beau. He's waiting for me to finish my work and come for a walk.' I shall never forget the ring of pride in her voice. Although I did not like the man's looks, the change in Amanda was so markedly for the better that I said nothing. She said he worked for Sibley & Grant, in the paint mixing department, and soon through Grace, my fourteen-year-old, who was her confidant, I learned that they were to be married. She had a little over $200 in the bank, the savings of years. When Grace told me this was going into a home, I took a hand. I told her by all means to hang onto her money and use it to furnish a home, but I might as well have saved my breath. He wanted the money and he got it—though she said nothing about it to me at the time.

"One evening Grace ran to me greatly excited. She had the morning paper in her hand.

"'Amanda's man has been arrested,' she exclaimed. Sure enough on looking at the paper I found he had been caught trying to pick a lock in Sibley & Grant's office the night before and he was in jail. Poor Amanda was crushed. Then it was that I learned about her $200. Really, she did not mind the loss of the money so much as the loss of her station as an engaged young woman. She sank into such gloom that I had about decided I would have to send her away, when Edith took her off my hands. Edith knew how to cheer her up, and when the baby came she was devotion itself. Edith is never afraid to leave her in charge of the baby, she is so faithful."

Household Hints

POTATO DISHES

Potato Soup—Pare and dice enough potatoes to make one quart. Have ready two quarts boiling water in a pot on stove; put potatoes into boiling water with an onion size of walnut, salt to taste, boil until tender; add butter size of egg, also pepper to taste. Mix one tablespoon flour with cold water, stir into soup, let boil up well; ready to serve. If too thick add more water. A little parsley improves it.

Genuine Irish Potato Cake—Six cups cold boiled potatoes seasoned well with salt. Run through meat chopper. Work enough flour in to make quite stiff. Knead to get flour and potatoes well mixed. Roll about an inch thick, place in frying pan dredged with a little flour (do not use grease of any kind), cook on top of stove until done on one side, then turn and cook other side. Don't have fire hot enough to scorch. Serve with butter and sugar.

Dough-Boys With Potatoes—Boil one or two pounds flank or other cheap beef in salted water until tender; remove from pot and keep it warm. If there is any grease on the liquid remove it. Into the hot liquid put enough pared potatoes for the family meal; when potatoes begin to boil, have ready the dough-boys, made as follows: Two cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon salt, sifted; add to this one tablespoon shortening; add milk or water to make soft dough. Drop this by spoonful into boiling potatoes. Must be liquid enough to cover dumplings. Cover and boil twenty minutes. Do not remove cover until done.

Potato Dumplings—Boil six medium-sized potatoes in their jackets. When cold, pare and put through meat chopper. Work into them one teaspoon salt, half pound flour, two eggs. Mix well but lightly. Have ready some squares of bread browned in butter. Form mixture into balls, placing a square of bread in center of each, drop into boiling water, cook twenty minutes. Serve at once with beef gravy.

Potato Hash—Use two-thirds cold potatoes to one-third meat; put both through meat chopper, add a little onion, season well with salt and pepper and fry a nice brown in beef drippings.

Escaloped Potatoes—Pare and cut into thin slices as many potatoes as required for a meal. Use a stone crock. Spread a layer of potatoes, then salt, pepper and bits of butter; repeat until potatoes are used up; add milk enough to come half way up in crock, cover and bake in moderate oven until tender.

PIES

Lemon Fruit Pie—One cup seeded raisins chopped fine, juice and pulp of one lemon, one cup sugar, one egg, three tablespoons water. Bake with two crusts.

Mock Mince Pie—Twelve crackers rolled fine, one cup hot water, one-half cup vinegar, one cup molasses, one cup sugar, one cup currants, one cup raisins, spice to taste. Measure with a teacup. Some use one cup dried bread crumbs and a small cup of butter. This makes four pies.

Orange Pie—One cup sugar, one cup boiling water, two tablespoons flour, butter size of half an egg, grated rind and juice of one large orange. Cook clear. When cold add yolk of egg. Frost as lemon pie.

Lemon Pie—One lemon grated, one cup sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch, two cups cold water, yolks of two eggs. Frost.

Cream Pie—Yolks of two eggs, one pint milk, one cup sugar, one tablespoon cornstarch, one tablespoon flour. Frost same as lemon pie.

Raisin Pie—Two cups sugar, two cups raisins, three cups boiling water, three tablespoons vinegar, two tablspoons flour, one tablespoon butter, pinch of salt. Mix all together and cook a few minutes, then turn into crust and bake. This will make two pies.

Raisin Pie—Boil together one package raisins, a pint of water and juice of one lemon about twenty minutes. While this is cooking beat together one cup sugar, one tablespoon flour and pinch salt with one egg; add this to cooking raisins and let simmer just a minute or two. Allow to cool. Make an upper and lower pie crust and bake a nice brown.

ESTABLISH RECORD AT THE HOSPITAL

Total of Seventy-four Patients Cared for at the Institution.

When Muhlenberg Hospital enlarged its facilities for the care of the sick of the community, by the addition of the splendid fire-proof private room building, the board of governors were anticipating the needs of the constantly increasing municipality. The experience now daily recorded at this great institution shows how wise was the judgment of those who are responsible for the existence of the new Muhlenberg.

Some months ago it was recorded that a new record had been made at the oHspital, when there were sheltered under its roof some 68 patients. This number exceeded all previous records of Muhlenberg.

Last Thursday night another new record was made as to the number of patients in the hospital, when there were 74 patients being cared for as follows: Private rooms, 12; semi-private, 15; wards, 47; total, 74 patients in all.

With the growth of the community, and the constantly increasing tendency of the present time to use hospital facilities rather than the less adequate facilities of the home, it is a question now of but a short time when the present capacity of Muhlenberg Hospital will be none too large to meet the demands that will be made upon it for the care of the sick of Plainfield.

A SLAVE TO CUSTOM

It is the most natural thing in the world for a man of property to name his friend or a business associate executor of his will and even trustee of his estate. This has been done for generations, in the absence of better facilities. The habit still continues after the need for it has completely disappeared.

TRUST COMPANY SERVICE IS MUCH MORE EFFICIENT

This company has specialized experience and ability which fit it to handle all phases of trusteeship in an economical way. It is familiar with investments; is equipped to handle real estate; to wind up a business; to collect and remit income. No individual could be expected to render as highly specialized a service, and no individual can be depended upon to serve. He may die, move away, become overburdened with cares of his own. This company is a permanent organization of trained men, always accessible, unaffected by the hazards of individual life.

HAD TO ABANDON PROPOSED PLANS

One Watchung Man Returns and His Companion is in New Orleans Hospital.

PERILS ENCOUNTERED

Henry Kirchoff and Harold Bigham Left on Government Mission December 2—Latter May Have to Have Frozen Feet Amputated.

Henry Kirchoff of Watchung, who with Harold Bigham, left this city on December 2 to begin a six months' trip down the Ohio and Mississippi valleys to study flood conditions for the government, returned to Plainfield, yesterday, bringing with him a remarkable story of suffering, due to unprecedented weather conditions. Bigham is now in the Naval Hospital at New Orleans, facing the prospect of having both feet amputated, because of conditions which followed their becoming frozen. The physicians are trying skin grafting as a last resort, but the result will not be known for many weeks. Kirchoff was more fortunate, although he will feel the effects of his ordeal for many days to come.

The two men had years of experience in forestry and topographical conditions and were deputized by Washington to secure data that might aid in adopting measures to prevent the recurrence of floods such as were experienced in 1913. They left Parkersburg, W. Va., on December 6, having fitted up a houseboat with a gasoline engine and provisions. Sixty miles down the Ohio River the engine exploded, putting it entirely out of condition..

They drifted as far as Madison, Ind., where they procured repairs.

COMEDIE FRANCAISE SUBJECT OF LECTURE

Madame F. Berkeley Smith Addressed a Large Audience.

Madame F. Berkeley Smith, of Paris, gave the first of a course of two lectures on the French drama, yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, to an intensely interested audience that taxed the seating capacity of the house. The subject of the first lecture was the "Comedie Francaise," which Madame Smith traced from its founding by Moliere to the closing of its doors at the beginning of the war in 1914. Though the lecture was in English, Madame Smith's accent and the quaint French idioms, for which she apologized, gave a decided French flavor, and stories of spicy dialogue and untoward happenings at rehearsals, made light spots in the lecture, the more serious side of which showed that Madame Smith had a profound knowledge and broad grasp of her subject.

Madame Smith ended her lecture with an appeal for a national theatre in the United States, which should bring before the public the plays of promising young authors, and standardize language and pronunciation for the American people.

The second lecture of the course on "Conflicts of Conscience in the Modern French Drama," will be given on Tuesday, February 2, at the home of Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, 531 West Eighth street.

FRANK J. DAY MARRIES MRS. MARGARET HYLAND

Mrs. Margaret Hyland and Frank J. Day were married this morning in St. Mary's church, the Rev. B. M. Bogan officiating. The ceremony was a quiet affair attended only by the immediate relatives of the couple. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wierenga, brother and sister-in-law of the bride.

Immediately after the church service the newlyweds left on a honeymoon trip to Philadelphia and other points of interest. On their return they will reside at 403 East Fifth street. Both are well known to a wide circle of acquaintances in this city and they were the recipients of many hearty congratulations from the few who knew of the quiet nuptials this morning. Mr. Day is employed as foreman by the city street department.

POSTPONE SOCIAL.

The experience social of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Netherwood Reformed church, which was to be held Friday evening, January 29, has been postponed indefintely.

MANY ENJOYED A FINE PROGRAM

Seventh-Day Baptist Church Workers Supplied Musical Treat Last Night.

A select and appreciative audience of music lovers enjoyed a pleasing musical program held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church, last night, under the auspices of the Women's Society of Christian Work. The program included vocal and instrumental solos, duets and a sextet. It was arranged by Mrs. Noel G. Evans and Miss Mabel A. Maxson and they were assisted by the following artists: Mrs. Joseph Edgar, soprano; Mrs. Lyle Smith, violinist; Miss Jessie Utter, organist; Mrs. Frank Hubbard, pianist, and Roy Titsworth, baritone.

One of the most popular selections of the program was the sextet selection, entitled "Snow," by Elgar. This piece was excellently rendered and the talent was forced to appear in an encore before the audience was satisfied. The organ, piano and violin trio selections were well balanced and were thoroughly enjoyed. At *the close of the program a silver offe*ring was taken and ice cream and cake were placed on sale. The committee in charge realized a neat sum, which will be used for the church.

The program as rendered follows: Trio, piano, violin and organ, Adagio, Miss Mabel Maxson, Mrs. Noel Evans and Miss Jessie Evans; vocal solo, selected, Mrs. Joseph Edgar; violin solos, "Liedesfrued," by Kreisler, "The Bee," Bohm, Miss Lyle Smith; piano solo, selected, Miss Mabel Maxson; organ and piano, pastorale, Guillmant, Miss Jessie Utter and Miss Mabel Maxson; violin solos, "Indian Lament," Bvorak-Kreisler, "LaPrecieuse," Couperin-Kreisler, Mrs. Noel Evans; vocal solos, (a) "The Vulcans Song," Gounod; (b), "A Spirit Flower," Campbell-Tipton; (c), "I Long for You," Learned, Roy Titsworth; sextet, "Snow," Elgar, Mrs. Stephen Tugwell, Mrs. H. S. Moyer, Mrs. J. S. Edgar, Mrs. Theodore Mantz, Mrs. William Burnette, Mrs. L. C. WANT A BARN TO STORE WOOD CUT BY UNEMPLOYED

In order to keep the unemployed men of the city from being idle, the Commission which has been looking after their wants this winter, has split up about 700 barrels of wood, much of which is green. They are now cramped for room at the wood yard, and have asked the newspapers to make an appeal for a vacant barn somewhere in Plainfield or North Plainfield where this wood can be stored until it becomes dry. Any person having such a barn that can be loaned for the purpose will confer a great favor upon the committee by notifying Samuel T. Carter, Jr., of Woodland avenue. Persons who can use some of the wood, and who have room in their homes to store it until it dries out, have an opportunity to secure it at a very reasonable price, and it will be furnished by application at the offices of the Charity Organization Society in the Babcock building.

The problem of the unemployed is clearing up a little, and there are prospects that it will become much better. The great trouble up to the present time has been finding temporary work for the men whom the committee is helping. It has been found that it is not best to give any money outright, except in the most unusual cases, and all of those applying for aid who are physically able to do so are given some kind of employment.

HEAVENLY REST MEN'S CLUB TO BE HOSTS AT A EUCHRE

Members of the Men's Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, have arranged for a euchre to be held in the parish house tonight, a large attendance being expected. Many handsome awards will be made to the successful players at the culmination of the evening's feature.

The euchre will be of a progressive nature and will be followed by a social hour during which the men will serve refreshments to their guests.

KENNEL CLUB IS READY FOR SHOW

V. P. BREESE TO JUDGE

Big List of Special Prizes Offered by Many Well Known Dog Owners—Show Limited to Dogs Owned by People Within Eight Miles.

Plans for Plainfield's first indoor match show, for canines whose owners reside within a radius of eight miles of Plainfield, have been completed by the Plainfield Kennel Club and the event will open in the Lufburrow building next Saturday. Entries close tonight with the secretary of the club, *F. N. Anderson, of 61*6 Central avenue, and indications point to one of the largest lists that has ever compiled for a local event of this nature. Dog fanciers in all of the surrounding suburbs have availed themselves of the opportunity to exhibit fine specimens of the four-legged species and some close matching is expected.

Vincent P. Breese, one of the best known dog judges in the country, has been secured to be present at the Plainfield show and make the awards. Puppies of any age up to twelve months are eligible to compete and many of the younger specimens have been booked.

There are four classes, divided as follows: Puppy, for all dogs any age under twelve months; novice class, for all dogs of any age that have never won a prize; open class, for all dogs of any age, whether a prize winner or not, and brace class, for two dogs of any one kind owned by one exhibitor. URGE THINNING OUT OF THE SHADE TREES

Loocal Commission Gives Timely Advice as to Care of Trees.

The president of the Shade Tree Commission says that the soil in Plainfield is naturally sour (acid) and ill-fitted for lawns. This condition is rendered much worse by the great amount of dense snade. If there is moss or a green mold on your grounds is an evidence that the soil is acid, for moss, like ferns, wintergreen, laurel, rhododendrons, huckleberries and some other plants, will not grow on any other kind of soil. The remedy is first, thin out the trees or bushes where they are too thick, and then put on lime or wood ashes. Either the air-slaked lime or the finely powdered limestone may be used. It should be applied at the rate of about two tons to the acre, which means 25 lbs. to the square rod; or for a lawn 100 feet square, 900 lbs. This ought not to cost over 50 cents per 100-lb. bag. It can be obtained of local dealers. Now is the best time to apply it. This should be followed in the spring by a raking off of the dry grass with an iron rake and the sowing of a liberal quantity of grass seed and some good fertilizer. The ground should be firmly rolled after the sowing of the seed.

He says there is no reason why we cannot have good lawns if we give them proper attention. He thinks that there is a good opportunity for a couple of men to build up a good business and do the city a lasting benefit, by making a specialty of making lawns. The people of Plainfield would gladly support two or three more men who would push this line of work.

Perhaps the City Relief Committee has some men available for this work.

VANARSDALE TURNED OVER TO POLICE OF PATERSON

Arrested on the request of the Paterson police, Jay VanArsdale, of this city, was taken to that place yesterday, to stand trial on a charge of passing worthless checks. He is also said to be wanted by the Newark authorities on a similar charge.

The young man is well-known in this city, where he has been employed by various companies for a number of years as a collector and solicitor. About a year ago he was arrested on a charge of forgery preferred against him by local complainants.

The Symphony Club will meet at the home of Mrs. Samuel F. Case, 1140 Martine avenue, Thursday morning.

FULL INVESTIGATION INTO STRIKE TROUBLE

Assemblyman Runyon One of Committee Ordered to Make the Probe.

Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city, is one of the members of the Assembly committee ordered to make an investigation, "full and complete," into the strike troubles at Roosevelt, which led up to the fatal shooting last week. The probe is to be conducted under the autnority of a resolution passed by the Assembly after it had been reported favorably by the Judiciary Committee as a substitute for the resolutions introduced Monday night by Mr. Quinn and Mr. Runyon.

Mr. Runyon said today that the shooting was already being probed by Prosecutor Florence, of Middlesex county. "This will be thorough," said the assemblyman, "and it is not desired that the two investigations should overlap." The Assembly committee will give more attention to other phases of the case, only looking into the shooting as the result of conditions, leaving the criminal side to the law officers of the State and county.

The Middlesex County Grand Jury yesterday considered the charges against the twenty-seven former deputies locked up in the New Brunswick jail on charges of murder in the first degree. The session was held behind closed doors and more than 100 witnesses were examined. Prosecutor Florence later stated that he was confident that indictments charging murder in the first degree would be returned by the Grand Jury against the men.

The strike of seventy men employed at the Bowker Fertilizing Plant in Elizabeth, yesterday, effectually tied the plant up. No disorder resulted and the men are said to have gone out as the result of dissatisfaction over wages. While the strike so far only effects the Bowker plant it is expected that it will spread further as the Elizabeth concern is one of a chain owned by the American Agricultural and Chemical Company, of which the William and Clark and Liebig plants, at Roosevelt, are parts.

ELKS' HOSPITALITY WAS ENJOYED BY MANY GUESTS

Many members and their invited friends attended the fifth informal reception and dance of the winter series in the Elks' clubhouse, last night, the event being a thoroughly enjoyable one and similar in the leading respects to the four which preceded it.

Dancing furnished the chief source of entertainment, music being furnished by Van Eps' orchestra. During the evening refreshments were served by the committee of members in charge.

ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH BOYS ORGANIZED SOCIAL CLUB

A new social club, the object of which is to promote social and athletic activities of the borough, was organized last night, and named the St. Joseph's Club. It is connected with St. Joseph's church and the members are now fitting up the basement of the edifice to use as a clubroom and it will be furnished with games. The following officers were elected at the meeting: President, Martin McDonough; vice-president, Alfred Seidel; secretary and treasurer, Jack Harper.

Although it is rather late in the season, the club will be represented by a basketball team and the first practice was held Monday night in Columbus Club. There were eleven who reported for practice and Daniel Denny was elected to lead the team. William Seidel was chosen to book games. The next meeting of the club will be held tomorrow night. Plans have already been started for the organization of an orchestra and baseball team.

Those who are trying for the basketball team are Clarence Smith, Daniel Denny, Martin McDonough, Raymond Pasch, Roland Lester Daly, Edward Moraller, Vincent LaPorte, John Kaldoush, Alfred and William Seidel and Andrew McDonough. The club has a membership of twenty-five.

TOLD HOW STATE REFORMS BOYS

Dr. Frank Moore Gave Crescent Avenue Men's Club An Interesting Talk.

RAHWAY REFORMATORY

Head of Institution Declared that Method of Treating Inmates As Men, and Not As Criminals, Has Made Confinement Pleasant.

Dr. Frank Moore, superintendent of the New Jersey Reformatory, at Rahway, gave a highly interesting and instructive talk, last night, in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the Men's Club of the church. The talk was illustrated by lantern slides, and the audience was told "what New Jersey is doing for the young men who break her laws."

With the aid of pictures the audience was taken for a trip through all departments of the institution, and the amount of work being accomplished was a revelation to those present. Prior to telling of the various problems which confront the officers of the Reformatory, Dr. Moore briefly reviewed the methods used for centuries for imprisoning men, so that they might be contrasted with the modern ideas.

When the young men are received at Rahway they are carefully examined by a physician and psychologist, and by a board of the officers to determine what method of employment is best suited to them, and are assigned a small, comfortable room, not a cell. Once a week Dr. Moore talks to the new arrivals, and tells them what he expects of them during their stay. Each inmate is charged

LOCAL COUPLE WERE MARRIED IN 1864

Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Mendel Celebrate Their Golden Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Mendel, of Holly Park, celebrated the semi-centennial of their marriage in a quiet way at their home Monday. They were married in Cincinnati, January 25, 1864, by Dr. Isaac M. Wise, of one of the temples of that city.

She has for many years been a prominent worker in the Independent Order of True Sisters.

Mr. Mendel is a native of Wendelsheim, province of Hesse-Darmstadt, and came to the United States when he was fourteen years old. He located in Cincinnati and remained there for fifty years. He founded the firm of Corbin, Mendel & Company, wholesale liquor dealers. About twenty years ago he organized the Mendel Company, of Cincinnati, of which he is still the head. In 1896, Mr. and Mrs. Mendel came to New York, where the climate seemed to be more agreeable to Mrs. Mendel's health, and ten years later they moved to Plainfield and bought the Holly Farm just over the city line on Park avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Mendel have two children, Mrs. S. VanPraag, of New York, and Milton Mendel, of Plainfield, who is a lawyer.

COUNTY BOARD HEARING IN CITY BUILDING TONIGHT

Members of the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes will meet in the city building tonight for the purpose of hearing an appeal registered by the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company from an assessment levied on its property located on North avenue, paralleling the railroad. The local assessor has placed a valuation of $21 per foot on the property in question and a large reduction is asked.

The same concern has filed application for a decrease in the assessment on its property on Madison avenue, at the corner of West Third street. Both cases were adjourned from last Friday in order to give the appellants time to submit expert testimony to show that their assessment is too high. Tonight's session will be the final one for the County Board in this city. There has been a total of 300 appeals taken from last year's assessments, and out of this number not more than fifty were granted reductions.

MYSTERIOUS FIRE BURNS OUT SMALL GROCERY STORE

Fire, the origin of which is shrouded in mystery, was discovered at 4:12 this morning in the store owned by Harry Cohen, 659 West Fourth street, and before it was extinguished by the local fire department damage to the extent of $300 was done. The proprietor and his family live in the parts that adjoin the store and they were awakened by a choking smoke that filled the place when the chattels in the store became ignited.

Aaron Mattox, of Spruce street, noticed the flames and pulled box No. 81. When the firemen arrived the little structure was a mass of flames, the fire having assumed good headway. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

EXPECT ACTIVITY TO HONOR KAISER

Wilhelm Said to Again Be at Front to See Troops Make Birthday Memorable.

REPORT GERMAN LOSS

French Statement Says Total Losses of January 25 Will Reach Two Battalions of Men—English Fleet Which Routed Germans is Home.

London, Jan. 27.—A message from Amsterdam says that the German staff headquarters has been moved to Charleville, France, opposite Mezieres and near Sedan.

Another dispatch says that the Kaiser has again arrived at general headquarters in Flanders to witness operations which will take place today in honor of his birthday. He is fifty-six years old today.

All Belgian railroads have been employed for several days rushing material to the front for the big birthday attack. It is expected there will be demonstrations in the air and at sea, as well as on land.

Paris, Jan. 27.—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock:

"In the sectors of Nieuport and of Ypres artillery combats occurred yesterday. A German flying machine was destroyed within the lines of the Belgian army. Stories told by prisoners established the fact that it was not a battalion, but a brigade that attacked our trenches east of Ypres on January 25. The enemy lost in that affair the effective force of a battalion and a half.

THAW CONSPIRACY TRIAL SET FOR FEB. 23

Justice Davis Accepted Plea of Not Guilty This Morning.

New York, Jan. 27.—Justice Vernon M. Davis today set the trial of Harry K. Thaw on the charge of conspiring to escape from Matteawan for February 23.

Thaw was jubilant today when told that William Travers Jerome is no longer connected with the case. Thaw regards the unexpected removal of Jerome as a favorable sign that he will soon obtain his freedom.

Thaw pleaded not guilty to the conspiracy charge.

John B. Stanchfield, one of Thaw's legal staff, contended that under section 836 of the penal code Thaw is entitled to a sanity test at Bellevue before he is tried on the present indictment.

Jerome, in opposing, declared Thaw has several times been adjudged insane, and therefore should be remanded to Matteawan, as the Tombs is not a prison for insane persons.

In announcing that Jerome's commission had expired, Attorney-General Woodbury complimented Jerome and Deputy Attorney-General Kennedy on the return of Thaw to "the rightful jurisdiction of New York courts," and said Jerome had fulfilled the purpose of the designation.

Woodbury also expressed the belief that his office staff is competent to handle the case from now on, and added that Kennedy and Deputy Cook will be in charge of the prosecution.

Woodbury mentioned the matter of expense, and this is believed to have been a determining factor in dropping Jerome, as he received $22,500 in fees from the State. Other expenses have brought the cost of Thaw's prosecution to $30,000.

ACCIDENT VICTIM STILL IN A SERIOUS CONDITION

George Gaskill, who was struck by an automobile owned by the Plainfield Cab Company, at West Sixth street and Park avenue, Saturday night, remains in a semi-conscious condition at Muhlenberg Hospital and his recovery is still a matter of grave doubt. He is suffering from concussion of the brain and severe lacerations about the head and face.

Since his confinement in the hospital the police have succeeded in locating his wife and four children and Mrs. Gaskill has visited him at the institution. He has recognized her on several occasions, but is still too weak to make a statement.

Mrs. S. H. Titsworth, of New Market road, who has been ill, was able to be out yesterday.

STAKED OUT SEWER LINE.

Borough Engineer Churchill and force, yesterday afternoon, staked out the line to be followed by Contractor McCormick in laying the sewerage pipe under the Grove street crossing of the Central Railroad. This is the first line staking that has been done in connection with the borough's collecting sewerage system. The time is not far distant when all the work in connection with the construction of the system will be going in full blast. In addition to the work above mentioned, Engineer Churchill took data to be used in preparing a map of the crossing.

MISSIONARY LED SERVICES.

Mrs. J. M. Baker, a missionary from South India, who is home with her husband on a furlough, had charge of the morning and evening services in the First Baptist church, Sunday. In the afternoon she spoke to the junior and intermediate departments of the Sunday-school. Mr. and Mrs. Baker are successors to Dr. Clough in the Telegue field at Ongole, where they have been for the past twenty years. Mrs. Baker was greeted by very fine audiences at both services in the church. Her talks were entirely relative to work in India and proved to be most interesting. Mrs. Baker also sang hymns in Telegue.

PARENT-TEACHERS MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association was held yesterday afternoon at the Lincoln School, and there was a good attendance present. A very fine time was had by the mothers and teachers in relating their experiences in making money to pay for some chairs that they have purchased for the schools. Some of the members had composed poems to cover the way they had made their money and the reading of them elicited much laughter. A total of $10.12 was turned in. Some sold clam chowder, eggs, candy, while others made theirs by darning stockings, ironing shirts and draping curtains. One of the teachers gave a dog a bath, earning a quarter; another one earned the money she turned in by polishing shoes.

The association voted to join the Federation of Mothers' Congress of Plainfield and vicinity, and will be represented at the meetings of the federation by the president and corresponding secretary.

The association has been in the habit of subscribing for the American Motherhood magazine, which is very helpful to mothers and the subscription for this magazine was renewed for another year.

It was left an open question as to whether some action could not be taken to modify the exercises held at special times during the school year so as to relieve the terrible nervous strain that the pupils taking part in these exercises are obliged to undergo. The question of dress for the graduating class was taken up and discussed at length. It is felt that the manner in which the young lady graduates have dressed in the past is too expensive for such a small graduation and an unnecessary tax upon the pocketbooks of the moderate in circumstances.

The question was left open for further discussion at the next meeting of the association. After the completion of the business of the afternoon refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed by all.

Although several of the farmers of the Willow Grove section of the township have attended the sales in Plainfield where equines have been purchased for use on the European battlefields, they have as yet been unable to sell them as all were too old or small or had some other defect and when one farmer did receive an offer of about $25 for a horse he thought would bring a hundred at any time he decided to keep it.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Al. G. Field is noted for his stage productions, but in all the years of his managerial reign he has put forth nothing so timely as the closing stage picture which ends the entertainment. This scene is the ending of the Panama-Pacific Exposition number, with a great deal of Joe Coffman and Bert Swor's "Oh Yes" comedy to spice it. A burlesque on the war with Mexico is also appropriate at this time. Then follows a birds-eye view of the Panama Canal and locks; dreadnaughts come up out of the mists of the sea; moving clouds reflect the flags of our country, with portraits of Washington, Lincoln, Grant and Lee with flags entwined. The moving water and clouds are more natural than we ever remember of seeing in mimic reproductions. There is a dirigible balloon mounted with guns such as we opine are in use in the war now raging in Europe, and last comes the marching marines, with the warships passing. It is certainly a scene of animation, the audience standing reflecting the patriotism peculiar to Americans in these times. It is an animating stage picture and is worthy of the approbation bestowed upon it by the plaudits of the populace. Al. G. Field and his company will be here Wednesday afternoon and evening, February 3.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The semi-weekly change of the bill at Proctor's Theatre will produce the following program, beginning tomorrow: "The Butterfly and the Rose," a novel spectacular singing and violin production, and the season's best scenic production; the Jewell Sisters, "nifty" entertainers de luxe; Sullivan, Pasquelina and Company, in a comedy skit based on back stage life; Camile Personi and Company, with James G. Reaney, in "Butterfly Love;" Leonard and Lewis, singing and talking acrobats. The photo-play portion of the bill for the remainder of the week will include the eighth episode of "Zudora," to be shown this afternoon and tonight, the second episode of "Runaway June," tomorrow afternoon and night, and the fourth installment of "The Exploits of Elaine," Friday afternoon and evening. Keystone comedies will be shown every day, making it doubly certain that every class of theatregoer is catered to at Proctor's. Although "Runaway June" is the newest serial running at the popular playhouse, having been shown for the first time last week, the initial presentation made an instantaneous hit, and there is no doubt but what George Randolph Chester's adventurous young heroine will become a prime favorite.

DESTROYS SLEEP.

Many Plainfield People Testify to This.

You can't sleep at night
With aches and pains of a bad back—
When you have to get up from urinary troubles.
If the kidneys are at fault
Set them working right with Doan's Kidney Pills.
Here is Plainfield proof of their merit.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I endured much misery from backache which was caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold, it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine didn't help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store, that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

MANY LOCAL PEOPLE ARE SENATOR ACKERMAN'S GUESTS

About one hundred Plainfielders were included in the party which went to Siegfried, Pa., this morning, as the guests of former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, the president, and the other officers of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company. Similar trips have been taken for some years past, the parties including, aside from the local people, many friends of the corporation from New York and other places.

The trip today was made in six parlor cars, forming a special train which left New York at 9 a. m. and Plainfield shortly before 10. They will be given an opportunity to see how cement is made, from the time it is taken out of the ground until the finished product is shipped by the carload. At noon a dinner was served for all those present.

PUBLIC OPINION AND ROTHBERG CLOTHING

Public opinion is the barometer which registers the rise and fall of public enterprise. What the people think of Rothberg clothing is more important to us than what the people pay for Rothberg Clothing.

Our list of customers is a large one, and it's a most significant fact that our customers are not the transient kinds. Once a man or boy buys a Rothberg Suit or Overcoat he comes back for his next one.

It was Lincoln's belief that you couldn't fool all the people all the time, which, perhaps, is why Rothberg Clothing is so well known in and about Plainfield.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the place that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

MISSIONARIES SAIL FOR SOUTH AMERICA

Large Trade Seeking Delegation of Americans Left Today on Finland.

New York, Jan. 27.—Missionaries in trade, in banking, in insurance and the other branches of modern business life are embarking on the liner Finland, which will sail today for a tour of the South American coast cities, to find out just what the people in the southern climes want to buy, how much money they need from Uncle Sam's pocketbook, and just how they look upon the United States, the big brother of the north.

The big liner is ready to sail today. A stop will be made at Baltimore, where another body of tourists will board her, and where she will be given an elaborate sendoff on Friday. For the tour is a Baltimore affair, although manufacturers and bankers in other sections have been invited.

The tourists will circumnavigate South America. Some 16,000 miles will be covered in a period of 102 days, of which half will be spent in the leading coast cities in conference with the business and banking interests in each country. The tour has been arranged for the specific purpose of enabling bankers, merchants, manufacturers, exporters and importers to meet personally the business men of the United States and to make a determined effort to increase the trade relations between the northern and southern ends of America.

It is the belief of those responsible for the plan that satisfactory business dealings cannot be carried on between people who are aliens and strangers, who do not understand the needs and methods unfamiliar to them, and who are lacking in the sympathy and co-operation that develops from that contact. The United States, it is stated, has neglected a fertile field in South America through failure to study and understand the needs of its southern neighbors. We have been so engrossed in building up our own industries that we have overlooked the great opportunity for trade expansion. The American industrial era has progressed to that stage where we are real contenders in all foreign markets. South America had never been closely allied in trade with her growing northern neighbor. Colonization, financial investment, and the opening up of the resources in the far southern countries were accomplished with European capital. Spain, France, England and Germany had enjoyed unmolested the trade of one of the richest sections of the globe.

The shattering of the routes of trade, which resulted from the European war, and the elimination of German supplies, brought the favorable moment for American exporters. But information was sadly lacking. A tour of inspection was suggested, and today the representatives of the leading trade bodies of the United States will embark on the mission which is expected to draw the friendship of our southern neighbors more closely to us, by mutual understanding of the methods, needs and co-operation of both ends of the western hemisphere.

BELGIUM RELIEF MUST CONTINUE UNTIL SUMMER

The Commission for Relief in Belgium, of 71 Broadway, New York, has announced the completion of its vast pipe line shipping organization, which has for its object the collection of all Belgian relief food-stuffs and supplies in America and their distribution in Belgium. Telegrams making public this information to the Governors of every State in the Union and to the various State relief organizations, all of which foodstuffs anr relief supplies are now being handled by the Commission.

The organization of the Commission includes a line of thirty-one steamships, the use of the 65,000 postoffices of the United States and the 35,000 offices of the express companies of the United States. Special arrangements have been made with the postoffices and express companies for the shipment of small packages of food by individuals, and it does not in any sense disturb the railroad arrangements previously made for large shipments.

The response of America to the appeal of Belgium has been gratifying, the task of provisioning over six million people, 1,400,000 of them are absolutely destitute, requires the dispatch of a shipload of food every other day and the maintaining of a transport line comprising 31 steamers. State relief organizations have been told, therefore, that they should be put on a permanent basis for continued effort until summer, if not longer.

LOCAL PLANT INCLUDED.

One of the 150 sewerage disposal plants in New Jersey included in the report of the State Board of Health is the one in this city, of which John R. Downs is chemist and manager. The State Board has recommended that the attendants of sewerage disposal plants be licensed and that they be subjected to a special course of training.

THIS busy, progressive nation is today at the dawn of a new era of commercial and social development. The means by which the human voice, with its slightest inflections and indications of personality, can be carried across the continent instantly, have been provided. Talking by telephone from New York to San Francisco is now an accomplished fact.

The celebration of this latest and greatest triumph in the art of telephony has just taken place. Within a short time the public will have, ready for its use, the product of American brains, American initiative and American scientific and technical skill, a transcontinental telephone service, the equal of which is not even approached in all the other nations of the world.

It is a splendid scientific achievement of the very highest character. The power that sends the human voice out over the telephone is scarcely greater than that of a breath, yet the means have been provided by which this tiny, almost imaginary impulse, made up of as many as 2,000 separate vibrations a second, can be picked up by a delicate instrument, conserved over a distance of 3,400 miles, and reproduced perfectly and instantly across the continent. The human voice has been made to travel as fast as light, faster than sound unaided by technical apparatus; indeed, it rivals THOUGHT even, in the swiftness of its flight.

The imagination can but feebly grasp, much less attempt to measure, the far-reaching significance of such a tremendous accomplishment. One hundred million people will have for their daily use a system of communication that knows no East, no West, no North, no South. Dialects, provincialisms, sectional prejudices, must eventually yield to the closer union, the better understanding, the more intimate comradeship that the human voice establishes. The neighborliness of a whole nation is advanced by the brushing away of the physical restraints of centuries.

This contribution to the future happiness and prosperity of a more closely united people has not been brought about, however, by the overcoming of a few isolated, concrete difficulties. Its success has depended upon the exercise of the highest engineering and technical skill, and the solution was found only in the cumulative effect of improvements great and small, in telephone, transmitter, line, cable, switchboard, and every other piece of apparatus or plant required in the transmission of speech.

In this work the experimental and research department of the Bell System, of which this Company is a part, has been engaged ever since the telephone became a commercial possibility, less than 40 years ago. With no traditions to follow and no experience to guide, this department, which is now directed by a staff of over 550 engineers and scientists, including former professors, post graduate students, scientific investigators—the graduates of 140 universities—has created an entirely new art—the art of telephony, and has given to the people of this country a telephone service that has no equal.

It has required vast expenditures of money and immense concentration of effort, but these have been justified by results of immeasurable benefit to the public. The transcontinental telephone line, 3,400 miles long, joining the Atlantic and Pacific, is part of the Bell System of 21,000,000 miles of wire connecting 9,000,000 telephone stations, located everywhere throughout the United States. Composing this system are the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Associated Companies and connecting companies, giving universal service to 100,000,000 people.

mans yesterday suffered a great check. On the road from La Bassee to Berthune alone there were found the bodies of six officers and 400 men. The total losses of the Germans, therefore, certainly represent an effective force of two battalions at least.

"From Lens to Soissons there were artillery combats. In the region of Craonne we are maintaining our positions in the trenches taken by us in the course of counter attacks on January 25.

"In the Argonne in the region of St. Hubert a German attack was rolled back with the bayonet. The day was calm in Lorraine and in the Vosges."

Petrograd, Jan. 27.—The Russian general staff today gave out a report on the progress of the fighting as follows:

"In the Pilkalen region our troops took the offensive January 25 and drove all the detachments of the enemy who opposed them back toward the line from Malvischken to Lasdeñen. During this operation we dislodged them from many of their positions after fighting at the point of the bayonet.

"On the right bank of the River Vistula there have been advance guard engagements of minor importance. A fusillade was reported January 25 in this locality, and in the vicinity of Qschprov the fire of our artillery has demolished a lookout post on the left bank of the river.

"To the left of the Vistula the Germans made several fresh efforts to assume the offensive, particularly near the villages of Borjimow and Goumine during the evening of January 24, and the afternoon of January 25, but each time they were driven back with serious losses. In the vicinity of the villages of Grablliebondy and Rouda, to the northeast of Skierniewice, our fire reduced two German batteries to silence.

"In Galicia the activity of the enemy has increased on the front between Casdisk, Oujok, Nijneveretsk and Maidanka, where the enemy, in addition to his artillery fire, made other endeavors to operate on the offensive. Te was, however, everywhere driven back. We took prisoner three officers and about 200 soldiers.

"There have been no important changes in Bukowina.

"On January 25 a German Zeppelin flew over Libau and threw down nine bombs. These missiles, however, did not do any serious damage. The Zeppelin then returned toward the frontier. At a point near Virghen our artillery men succeeded in hitting this airship and she fell into the water. Light gunboats went out from Libau and finished her destruction. Her crew of seven men were taken prisoners."

Berlin, Jan. 27 (by wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war only artillery duels occurred at Nieuport and Ypres yesterday. The enemy unsuccessfully attempted to capture the positions at Guinchy, southwest of La Bassee which we took Monday. His attacks broke down under our artillery fire.

"In the battle on the heights of Craonne which we reported yesterday we were entirely successful. The French were driven out of their position and the heights, west of Haeregnteferme and east of Hurtbeise, and were forced back on the southern slopes of the elevated country. The Saxon troops stormed and took several points of support, extending over several hundred metres (1,500 yards). 865 wounded Frenchmen and eight machine guns were captured, together with a depot for sappers and miners, and much other war material.

"We captured a French point of support southeast of St. Mihiel. The French counter attacks were unsuccessful.

"In the eastern theatre of war a Russian attack northeast of Gumbinnen made no progress."

Vienna, Jan. 27 (by wireless to London).—The Austrian war office gave out the following statement:

"In the valleys of Ung, Latorczo and Nagysyamos, the enemy has been forced to evacuate some important heights after repeated and fruitless counter attacks which cost them heavy losses."

London, Jan. 27—Most of the warships engaged in Sunday's naval battle in the North Sea returned home Monday and during Monday night, it was announced here today. The Lion, the flagship of Sir David Beatty, was the last of the battle cruisers to arrive.

She returned yesterday, when the Arethusa and the Laurels, among the light cruisers, some of the destroyers and the battle cruisers Tiger, Princess Royal, Indomitable and New Zealand were already at their moorings.

The Lion arrived at 11 o'clock and was greeted with vociferous cheers by the crews of the anchored warships. It was a spontaneous tribute of affection to Vice Admiral Beatty and his flagship.

Captain Erdmann, of the German armored cruiser Bluecher, has been placed among the wounded, according to the "Times" Edinburgh correspondent. He is suffering from shock.

The Lion, which had some of her forward compartments flooded by shells below the water line, was taken in tow by the cruiser Indomitable. The destroyer Meteor, which also was disabled, was taken in tow by the destroyer Liberty.

The total number of casualties among the officers and men reported to the admiralty is: On the Lion, seventeen men wounded; on the Tiger, one officer and nine men killed, and three officers and eight men wounded; on the Meteor, four men killed and one man wounded.

The Turkish advance guards are nearing the Suez Canal, according to reports from Cairo. Troops are assembling at points on the canal and warships have been passing through the channel to points which may be attacked.

Cairo, Jan. 27—An official announcement was made today that fighting occurred yesterday at Alkantara, east of the Suez Canal, between the advance guard of the Turks and a British force. One British officer was wounded.

AN UNEXPECTED BUMP.

There is cold consolation for the members of the county tax boards in New Jersey in a statement reported to have been made by former Governor Edward C. Stokes, who was responsible for the tax boards, and now says that he expected them to remain in existence but three or four years. When they were created, nearly nine years ago, it was for the purpose of equalizing tax assessments and establishing standards, and what they were supposed to do in three or four years they have hardly begun to do in over twice that length of time. The former Governor's suggestion now is that the boards be abolished except in the largest counties, and then revived against in the future if the old abuses again appear.

Coming from Mr. Stokes, whose fertile brain worked out the plan to adjust tax matters, and at the same time provide jobs for a lot of party workers, the foregoing statement will make it mighty hard for the men now holding the tax board positions to advance any argument why they should be kept in office. If they say their work is not done, they need merely have their attention called to the fact that apparently they have made no effort to accomplish it within a reasonable length of time, but have been carefully nursing their jobs along, so that they could feed at the public crib.

Everyone concedes that work, similar to that now being done by the tax boards, should be continued, but it could be done by one or two roving boards, with power to go into every county in the State, or by single commissioners, in fully as capable a manner as is now the case. For the twenty-one secretaries, paid out of the county treasuries, two or three clerks could be substituted, who would be able to give just as good service, except possibly in Hudson and Essex counties. For that matter the State Board for the Equalization of Taxes, were it to give its full time to this work, could do everything now done by the county boards without its members being overworked.

"Political pressure for spoils," says the Newark Evening News, "has been too great in the past to end eighty-four paid positions. If the boards were to be abolished and then re-established (as suggested in the Stokes plan), a similarly successful fight to keep the jobs would be likely for another dozen or so years.

"The pledge of the Republicans is to abolish county boards 'as now constituted.' That should give the majority lawmakers ample opportunity to keep their promise and yet provide for effective equalization and for a method of appeal from local assessments that would be at least as satisfactory as at present, and at a considerably less cost."

What the News says is all right, except the statement about it being at "least as satisfactory as at present." From our experience we believe that the people of Plainfield think that any method at all would be more satisfactory than the present one adopted by the county board, which apparently does not care whether the assessments throughout the county are equal or not. That was shown by their evident determination not to have attention called to inequalities in Elizabeth, as compared with Plainfield, when David T. Kenney made his appeal.

FORD AND HIS SYSTEM.

Henry Ford's idea of bettering the unemployed is to get them back to the farm and get them back to work. To the mind of this practical reformer work is the panacea of all evil; it obliterates the incentive to crime and, therefore, blots out crime as a social disturber; it makes men happier because there is always ahead and present as a great inspiring force the hope that every man clings to—the hope of happiness and plenty.

As the Asbury Park Press says, Henry Ford is not a fanatic; he is the most practical kind of a practical business man who seeks the greatest return from his capital invested. Mr. Ford has discovered that fair treatment makes the workman tractable and satisfied. Hence the Ford benefaction, as it is called, is doing wonders for the Ford plant. It is making $25,000,000 a year for the Fords and pretty nearly as much for the Ford workmen; it is transforming criminals into respectable members of society and is helping to empty the jails of Michigan.

Mr. Ford says if the Sing Sing criminals could be put to work with hope before them there would soon be no need for Sing Sing and he offers to demonstrate the truth of the statement after the Michigan criminals are turned into good workmen at the Ford plant. Mr. Ford's philosophy that idleness is a base of crime and poverty cannot, as the Press says, be controverted. He believes the big multi-millionaire should do something with his hands as well as with his brains; work, according to Mr. Ford, is the secret of morality, of wealth and happiness.

At present Mr. Ford is something of a curiosity to the money makers of New York and the other big millionaires who are not prepared to copy his co-operative plans, but the automobile man has given figures and statistics to show that he is making more money in his plant than he made when he kept all the profits for himself. His ideals of justice and fair play may ultimately be copied.

Settlement of the license question for 1915 was promptly and effectively completed on Monday night. The Council members are to be congratulated upon having avoided all of the controversy of the preceding years.

HOW STATE REFORMS BOYS

450 days at entrance, and by devotion to study and the showing of particular skill in any trade, coupled with good behavior, this can be reduced to 360 days. Fourteen trades are taught, and the instruction is of a practical character in each. Dr. Moore showed pictures of a concrete wall, brick buildings and other construction work which had been done by the inmates, thus saving thousands of dollars to the State, and at the same time teaching trades in a practical way. There is a printing office, where not only the work for the institution is done, but that of other institutions of the State; a tailor shop, a shoe shop, carpenter and concrete working shops, blacksmithing and other industries. There is also an opportunity given for agricultural training.

Dr. Moore told of the liberties allowed the men. They are permitted to play or watch a match game of baseball every Saturday during the summer with teams outside the institution, and during the winter months moving pictures are given. The only punishment is that of reducing in rank and adding to the length of sentence for infraction of the rules, and occasionally placing the boys in a well ventilated cell within hearing of the dining-room, the baseball field and other places where they can mediate over their wrongdoing. In the last few years about fifty boys have been permitted to go home to funerals without guards of any kind, and only one has taken advantage of the opportunity to escape, always returning by the time set.

At the present time there are 650 young men in the institution. They range in age from sixteen to twenty-one, but mentally, the average age of their brains is but twelve. Dr. Moore said that they had had cases of mentally deficient boys, whose brains were no better developed than is the case with some children of five.

Throughout the talk the speaker illustrated his point with a number of amusing stories. To show the way in which the trade school is appreciated, he recited the case of an Italian woman whose son was sent to the Reformatory, and he learned the brick laying trade so well that she falsely accused another son of stealing money so that he could be sent to the institution to be made a carpenter. Both are now earning good wages, having gained their parole.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Dr. Moore made a plea for co-operation by the people of the State. He said that they could play an important part by looking about and seeing whether the influences under which the young men of the various sections are living are good. If there can be any improvement made, he urged his hearers to see to it that the young men and boys be given the cleanest surroundings possible.

At the conclusion of his remarks a vote of thanks was given Dr. Moore by the club. There was a large number of women present, and after the talk refreshments were served, and a social hour enjoyed.

NEW MARKET FOLKS HAVE BOROUGH BEE

Preliminary Steps Taken to Have Village Separated From Piscataway.

With real estate transfers of the first magnitude fast becoming a common occurrence in Piscataway township, and the appearance of a possibility of South Plainfield becoming a separate and distinct municipality with a borough form of government in the near future, New Market is now shaking the dust of obscurity from its heels preparatory to making a history making splurge, into the lime-light.

New York real estate dealers visiting the village a few weeks ago were instrumental in stirring up considerable talk concerning the advisability of the organization of a Board of Trade, the object of which would be the proper development of the place by residents rather than a forced development by "professionals" in that line, thus avoiding a reaction after the course of a few years. Following the visit of the New Yorkers, several citizens have been instrumental in buying up a large section of that vicinity which might be used for development purposes.

The latest development in the case appears in the form of a well organized desire on the part of a number of villagers to see New Market take after the steps of South Plainfield to become a borough, thus placing in the hands of the local residents greater opportunities of handling the problem of the real estate development of that section of Piscataway township. Along with the discussion of the question of taking unto themselves the borough form of government, appears some talk of consolidation with the borough of Dunellen, thus coming in on the proposed sanitary sewerage system. The latter question has been discussed pro and con upon several previous occasions covering a period of several years, the fullest benefits of such a move now being apparent when New Market is on the verge of a real estate, as well as a building boom.

It is a well known fact that advocates of both of these ideas have held conferences within the course of the past two weeks, and it is highly probable that a program of future activities in the New Market section of Piscataway township will be decided upon shortly. Whether the followers of the two ideas will come together in a common body under the head of a Board of Trade is still an open question, but it has become self evident that something definite will be accomplished in the course of the next few days, with the possibility of a mass meeting of the residents being called for Saturday evening of this week.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press.

I regret to learn that lack of public support may make it necessary for the Woman's Exchange to close its doors and thereby discontinue its very helpful and important work.

There are many women in Plainfield who have found it of great financial assistance to make bread, cake and pies, as well as fancy articles and to sell them at the Woman's Exchange.

It will mean embarrassment to many of these women no longer to be able to sell their goods. There are also many householders who have found it of great convenience to be able to supply their needs by purchasing articles of food at the Woman's Exchange.

To be unable to continue these purchases will be regretted. During the last few years the Woman's Exchange has been ably managed and the women who have directed its management will gladly continue the work if they can have the necessary financial assistance.

The Woman's Exchange is deserving of support and should not be permitted to go out of existence. Are there not a sufficient number of people in Plainfield to lend their support in order that the work may be continued?

LEON RICE TO GIVE TWO CONCERTS HERE NEXT WEEK

Leon Rice, the American tenor, who has already delighted Plainfield audiences by his singing, has been secured by the Y. M. C. A. to give two "Evenings of Song," on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week. This return visit of Mr. Rice to Plainfield insures another rare treat to the city's music lovers.

Mr. Rice has had a most interesting career. He began singing when but eight years of age in a boys' choir. In 1904, after having been engaged in business for a number of years, during which time he had studied voice culture with eminent instructors, he gave a recital at the St. Louis World's Fair. This recital was so successful that he gave up business to devote his time entirely to singing. Since that time he has sung to nearly two and one half million people in the United States, Canada and Europe.

In almost every city of importance in this country, Mr. Rice has given concerts to the people at their own price and the results have been most gratifying. He will render here a program which will please not only cultured music-lovers, but those of undeveloped taste as well. The songs will be sung in English and will consist of the most popular of the classics and the most classic of the popular songs of musical literature. The programs for the two evenings will be entirely different. A silver offering will be taken.

MEXICAN CITIES OF PRESENT INTEREST

Aguascalientes and Guadalajara Centers of Opposing Factions.

Two cities in Mexico are playing an important role in the troublous times of today. These are Aguascalientes and Guadalajara. Aguascalientes was the seat of the convention which named Gutierrez as provisional president and is still playing an important part, being dominated by the Carranza faction. It is named Aguascalientes (hot waters) because it possesses some fine thermal springs. It is an ancient town, founded in 1575, and built on the remains of Indian ruins.

Guadalajara, placed under control by the Villa forces, is the second largest city in Mexico and is the capital of the state of the same name. It was called after a Moorish city and was founded in 1530. It has fine public buildings and a splendid cathedral. The industries are chiefly manufactures and have been in the hands of Germans. French and English Americans have never obtained firm foothold in Guadalajara owing to intense hatred of the "gringo," which, it is asserted, is fanned by foreign interests. In 1910 there was an uprising against Americans, and much property was destroyed.

Many of the descendants of the original Spanish families live in Guadalajara and form its aristocracy.

A STORM CENTER.

Town of Muelhausen, In Alsace, Has Been Taken and Retaken.

The town of Muelhausen, in Alsace, has been in the thick of the fight, it may be said, between the allies and the Germans. It has been taken and retaken. It was captured by the French troops on Aug. 9 in the early advance into Alsace to try to relieve the pressure on Belgium. The effort to divert the main German movement failed, and the approach of a large German force compelled the French to retire after having occupied this important town only two days.

The Germans retook the town, but it was again invested by French forces and has been again subjected to artillery fire.

Muelhausen is divided into the old and the new town. The former stands on an island formed by the Ill, which divides into several branches and is crossed by four bridges. The new town extends from the right bank of the Ill to the Rhone and Rhine canal, which has here a capacious basin. The streets are spacious and regular. The trade of Muelhausen is very important, and it has extensive manufactures. It has a population of about 100,000.

George Hodgson & Co. Meet Defeat at the Hands of the New York Athletic Club.

George Hodgson & Co., composing the swimming team of the Montreal A. A., met an overwhelming defeat at the hands of the crack swimming team of the New York A. C., Friday night, the only event on the program, which the Canadians were able to capture, was the water polo contest, by score of 4 goals to 2.

The first event of the evening was the 200-yard relay race for teams composed of four men each, each to swim 50 yards, and the Mercury Footers romped away from their rivals, creating new American figures for the distance of 1 minute, 43 3-5 seconds.

Walter Ramme took the first relay for the winged-foot athletes and swam his fifty yards in 25 seconds flat, the fastest half century ever seen in the New York Athletic Club pool. This gave Harry O'Sullivan, who followed him a lead of three yards, and he increased it slightly. Then James Reilly added a few feet to it, and Richard Bennett more than held his own, splashing in twenty yards in front of his Candian opponent.

Ramme and O'Sullivan came out again for the 50-yard dash against McGill and Earl, of the visitors. Ramme took the van at the gun and was never headed. O'Sullivan and McGill had a neck-to-neck fight for second place, but the New Yorker just nipped his antagonist at the tape. The time was 25 1-5 seconds.

The 100-yard swim saw Herbert Vollmer score an easy victory. McGill and Reilly clung to him for half the course, but he pulled away from them after that and won by a couple of lengths in 59 1-5 seconds. Reilly finished second and McGill third.

The surprise of the evening came in the 220-yard race, which proved the feature of the meet. George Hodgson, the Olympic champion and record holder at 400 and 1,500 metres, was considered practically invincible at the furlong, as he had never been beaten at the distance. But for once he found his peer, and Joseph Wheatley was the man.

Hodgson set out at good pace, with a long, graceful trudgeon crawl stroke, and led to the 75-yard mark, but after the turn Wheatley put on steam, and a few yards behind Hodgson swam an unusually good race.

John Zimnoch, who was placed third, sped by the Canadian, touching the 100-yard post first in 64 seconds. The latter again went to the front soon after, though, and the local swimmer seemed satisfied to trail him until 200 yards had been covered.

Then he uncorked a magnificent sprint, and although Hodgson responded gamely he fell back inch by inch and Wheatley gradually crawled into the lead, winning by a little less than two feet in 2 minutes 34 3-5 seconds. His unexpected victory brought down the house.

Hodgson's defeat came as a surprise to all followers of aquatic sports, as, on his last appearance in New York, he covered this distance in the fast time of 2 minutes, 28 seconds, the only man who ever did better in the local pools being the Peerless C. M. Daniels.

The fancy diving contest went by a big margin to Joseph Dunn, the former national outdoor champion. He defeated his fellow clubman, Albert Downes, by more than fifteen points, and Paul Camerson, of the Montreal A. A. A., by over twenty points.

The announced candidacy of Walter Ramme, of the New York A. C., for the 220-yard metropolitan swimming championship, soon to be held, adds interest to an event which promised already to be one of the best contested of the season. Ramme's recent capture of the 100 yards district title in the fast time of 58 3-5 seconds shows that he has plenty of speed and only needs practice to carry it over the furlong. The coming race will mark his first competitive attempt at the middle distance, but there is reason to believe that he will give a good account of himself, even against such crack performers as Joseph Wheatley, Herbert Vollmer, James Reilly and Nicholas Nerich, slated to oppose him.

A bombshell struck the swimming ranks the other day, when it became known that Otto Wahle was dropped recently as manager of the N. Y. A. C. swimming team. This had to happen. Wahle was concerned in the swim fight that came to light during the sportsmen's show.

Arthur McAleenan, captain of the club, will have full charge of all swimming affairs of the Mercury Foot organization for the next year.

It is not unusual for one man to have complete control of a certain branch of sport at the New York A. C., for Paul Pilgrim, when captain of the club, had full swing over all track and field matters. But there may be some significance in the one-man policy in view of trouble which the club had with the A. A. U. regarding the failure of the New York A. C. watermen to take part in a meet at Madison Square Garden.

The Montreal A. A. A. swimming team met another defeat at the hands of Yale University on Saturday night. The Canadians were only able to capture two first places and one second during the evening.

Hodgson won both the 100-yard and 220-yard swims for the Canadians, covering the distances in 59 3-5 seconds and 2 minutes and 37 2-5 seconds, respectively.

McAleenan won the fancy diving for Yale, with McLeish, also of Yale, second.

The 200-yard relay race was won by Yale in the fast time of 1 minute, 47 1-5 seconds, with a team composed of Marr, Summers, Ferguson and Hoadley.

Princeton University appears to have discovered the secret of developing star water polo forwards. For several years it has produced the ablest scorers in the intercollegiate league, and this season it is again in position to claim the leadership among linesmen, for no player has shown skill and versatility in attack equal to that displayed by Bob Nourse, the big centre of the Tiger sextet, or by A. N. Selby, the team captain. The will be a hard pair to best.

RAHWAY EAGLES CLEANED UP ON PROGRESS CLAN

Progress bowlers, of Newark, visited Rahway, last night, and lost three games in a row in an Eagles' League match to the home five. The pinning was low, as a rule, and the Newarkers put up a poor argument. Goodwill rolled 225 for Rahway in the second game.

EAGLES MATCH TONIGHT MAY DECIDE THE TITLE

The Plainfield and Elizabeth Eagle Bowling League teams will meet on the Second street alleys tonight, and the tussle is expected to be a hard one. The locals have been playing in their best form for the past few matches and have been the cause of a change in the standings of the teams.

Newark and Elizabeth are engaged in a hot race for first place with the former leading by two games, and if the locals should annex two or possibly three of the games of tonight's match it might prove fatal to the Elizabethans. In case of them taking three they would move to third place over Somerville. Newark and Progress are due to have a hard go Friday night.

COUNTY STARS FOR RUTGERS.

Three Rahway High School athletes have announced that they are planning to enter Rutgers College next fall. They are "Doc" and "Monk" Armstrong and Brooks, three of the best all around athletic performers in Union county. These three players have been the mainstays of the Rahway teams for several years and will undoubtedly make a good showing at New Brunswick.

The New Brunswicks have won 29 games and lost 13, while the Silk City pin-knights have accounted for 26 victories and have been charged with 13 defeats.

There was classy pinning, last night, at New Brunswick, and close competition, too, with no totals below the 900 mark. The home five started with 937 and had an advantage of seventeen pins. In the next encounter the New Brunswicks went all the way up to 1,036, and showed the way by 117 pins. B. P. O. E. WILL RUN A BASEBALL LEAGUE

Plainfield Named as One Team in "Bills" Diamond Circuit.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., has been named on a baseball circuit to be run under the auspices of the Elks next season. Preliminary plans for the circuit were outlined Sunday night, at a meeting held in the home of the New York Elks. Indications are that the affair will be composed of either ten or twelve lodges, though thirteen lodges were represented.

The idea of having a baseball league is an extension of the plans made for bowling leagues and billiard tournaments for members of the order only. Enough interest was shown at the gathering to assure those behind the movement that the Elks are in favor of the scheme. The league is to be organized at a meeting Sunday, February 7, at New York, when officers will be elected and the various committees will be appointed. At the meeting L. C. Weller, of Bronx lodge, was elected temporary chairman, and J. H. Mitchell, of New York, secretary. J. C. Sloan, of Bayonne, was appointed treasurer.

Eight lodges had representatives present, while Elizabeth, Kearny, Plainfield, Hoboken and Yonkers were represented by proxy. The other lodges that had delegates there were New York, Newark, Bayonne, Brooklyn, Bronx, Paterson, Jersey City and Queensboro.

Though nothing definite was said about prizes to be given to the winning teams, it was said that a silver championship trophy and individual prizes will be given to the members of the team finishing first. The prize list will also be decided at the meeting in February.

SKEETERTOWN ELKS LOST TWO OUT OF THREE GAMES

Two games out of three went to the credit of the Rutherford team on its own alleys, last night, in an Elks' Senior League match with the Jersey City five. The match was an interesting one. Rutherford started with 844, but this was insufficient, for the Jersey City five came through with 879 and got the decision by thirty-five pins. In the next encounter the home five braced up materially and was there for 930, while the visitors stopped at 885. The final and deciding contest saw the Rutherfords come through for 908, while the visitors touched only 802. Wright rolled 208 and 204 for the Jersey City team. For Rutherford, Clark was high with 201.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Leals and P. H. S. are fighting it out on the Y. M. C. A. court this afternoon. Once more the Interscholastic League hostilities have been transferred to the old rendezvous. You can't get away from it.

"June" Dunning says his prediction that N. P. H. S. will always beat the local High School youths when the ground is covered with a snow counterpane still holds good. Dunning says the snow melted during the latter part of Saturday afternoon's contest and that was the cause for the red and blue team's sudden flash of speed and the boroughites' downfall. He's a regular Joe Meyer in "seeing things."

A sport scribe on the Asbury Park Press wants to know why Captain Brynarski took Dunning out of Friday night's game and substituted Gavett. We'll give it up, old scout, 'twas ever thus in Queen City basketball.

The same scribe says that "Gavett spent most of his time chasing an Asbury Park player around the court and amusing the spectators." Well, what did the spectators come for?

Westfield High School basketball representatives are still leading the campaign to have all referees muzzled and tied up. They said P. H. S. beat them because the "referee was biased," and now they come across with the following announcement after winning a game at the expense of Kearny on the Mt. Ararat court Saturday afternoon: "Bad feeling showed throughout the game, even in the work of the officials, and several times an open break was narrowly averted." Now we'd like to know just who the Westfielders can get along with. They were spanked by the school Board and then claim Plainfield officials are highway robbers and Gyp the Bloods.

Yougottahandit to John Cose for versatality. Our councilman is the pinner whose four last letters adorn one of the last division rungs on the Elks' Senior circuit and also the second rung in the Masonic averages. Look's like the high average prize in one and the consolation prize in the other for "Jawn."

Pretty mess we'll have in the Interscholastic League if Leals happens to land the bacon this afternoon. Who ever heard of a league race where in the contenders have become deadlocked at one all?

Now that a little rivalry has been stirred up between the P. H. S. and N. P. H. S. male faculty members, following the wordy tilt in Saengerbund Hall Saturday afternoon, it's about time someone broke loose with a plan to bring the teachers together in basketball togs.

It's all off boys. Just when we thought there was going to be something doing along the basketball line at the Columbus Club, along comes Ruth and puts the knockout pill across the platter. They tell us that the Front street manager has signed up a couple of feminine regiments to do the preliminary stunt.

It might be well for the Columbus pilot to try out a few of those tight-wire trick plays in private before exhibiting them in real competition to a set of feminine critics. These feminine tossers are all right at basketball games as long as they leave their fighting duds at home and are contented to view the hostilities from behind the ropes.

Headline reads "Hope Chapel now has hot water." Well, the Chapelites seem to have it on some aggregations that are in hot water all the time.

Wonder if there is any significance attached to the fact that the Y. M. C. A. basketeers will be the first visitors to bathe under the heated fluid in the Fourth street gym.

Some idea of the strength of the feminine athletic faction in Plainfield and the borough may be gleaned from a glance at the calendar of sport events for Friday night. There will be four basketball teams in action and every one happens to be of the fair sex variety.

Captain Smalley, of N. P. H. S., has snared the services of Jack Martin. The Philadelphian and Tommy Mullin ought to be able to turn out a team of 'round the world champions in "Canada" this year.

By the way, Jack is carrying a piece of parchment around in his pocket that is good for a year's salary with the Phils. Contrary to newspaper reports Martin has been tendered a new contract and his John Hancock is safely entombed in the Quakertown roster.

PLAINFIELD LED COUNTY IN HUNTERS' LICENSES

Elizabeth, Jan. 27.—Plainfield led in the number of hunters' licenses issued in this county last year, in according to the report tabulated in the office of County Clerk Calvert. That municipality had a total of 553 licenses to 527 in Elizabeth. But one license was issued in Fanwood borough.

The licenses brought in a revenue to the extent of $2,783, of which the county gets $139.15, and the rest goes to the State.

ASSEMBLY PASSES BILL FOR BEEKMAN'S SALARY

Trenton, Jan. 27.—The Assembly yesterday passed the bill providing for the payment of $1,500 for salary to the new State Bill Examiner and Legislative Advisor, former Speaker Azariah M. Beekman, of Somerset county. This office was recently created and Mr. Beekman, who is the first incumbent, found that no provision had been made for compensation.

Both branches of the Legislature adjourned yesterday afternoon until Monday morning. The Runyon measure, providing the $5,000 limit to the exemption of church parsonages from taxation, and exempting them altogether, was given second reading and is ready for final action.

PLAN INAUGURATION OF UNIFORM RANK IN LODGE

At a meeting of Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, last night, the third degree was conferred upon candidates and there were several applications for membership. The meeting was largely attended and the uniform rank was discussed and a favorable report made. Such a rank will probably be inaugurated in this organization in the near future as it has made a favorable impression on the members.

The final report concerning the banquet of the Past Chiefs Association dinner, which will be held Friday night, in the Hotel Waldorf, was rendered and showed everything ready for the occasion.

DR. M'ELROY TO TELL OF EXPERIENCES IN WAR ZONE

Dr. Robert M. McElroy, professor of history in Princeton University, will give a lecture on "Historical Backgrounds of the War and Experiences During Mobilization," in the auditorium of the Plainfield High School, on Tuesday evening, February 9, under the auspices of the Princeton Club, of Plainfield. It will be free to the public.

The subject is one on which Dr. McElroy is well qualified to speak. He is a well-known writer of historical books, and a speaker of exceptional ability and charm. His courses in the university rank in popularity with those of Dr. Axson and Dr. Spaeth, both of whom are well-known to Plainfield audiences.

Dr. McElroy was in Germany at the outbreak of the war, and witnessed the mobilization. His many interesting experiences, of which he will tell in his lecture, include his arrest as a spy, while endeavoring to secure passports for Americans marooned with him. A topic of such great general interest, in the hands of a man of Dr. McElroy's calibre, insures a lecture which should draw a large audience.

HAD TO ABANDON PLANS

From there they were given a tow to New Albany and, although their engine had been given up entirely, they received instructions to proceed to Cairo, Ill. They move in sight of the big government damn below New Albany at night, and mistaking signals were almost capsized by getting into the heavy current instead of the locks. They barely saved themselves by getting a line fast to a dredge, the crew of which took them on for the night. Not knowing their craft was made fast alongside, the engineer blew his steam exhaust in the morning and the little houseboat was deluged, spoiling its entire stock of provisions.

It was at this point that the bitter cold set in. The thermometer fell to two below zero, while ice blocked the river. Bigham got wet in his efforts to guide the boat and almost before he realized it, his feet were frozen. Even this did not deter the plucky pair, and they decided to keep on after Bigham had been given treatment. In the Mississippi River they found conditions even worse than in the Ohio, as almost unprecedented cold prevailed. They battled with it and forced their way through the ice until it became absolute that nothing was to be gained by keeping on. They then accepted a tow which carried them more than a thousand miles down the big stream to New Orleans. Bigham's feet had developed serious conditions, and he was immediately taken to the hospital upon reaching the Crescent City.

Kirchoff returned to New York on the Morgan Line steamer "Antilles," which was one of the steamers rescuing the crew of the schooner, "Mary Baxter," wrecked off Cape Hatteras, Monday afternoon. As Mr. Kirchoff remarked to a Daily Press reporter today, the sight was a fitting climax to a trip of more than 2,500 miles, replete with thrills. In the event of Mr. Bingham's recovery, and the saving of his feet, Mr. Kirchoff said they would make the trip when better weather was a certainty.

CHOIR REORGANIZED IN ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH

The choir of St. Stephen's church held a reorganization meeting in the parish house recently and the Rev. Henry Mesier, pastor of the church, presided. The choir consists of eighteen members and the soloists are Miss Helen Thompson, soprano; Mrs. R. L. Heck, contralto; Herbert Grant, tenor; Robert W. Tebbs, bariton. Charles W. Walker is the organist and choirmaster. At this meeting several new members were admitted into the choir.

After the business meeting a general social time was enjoyed which included dancing in the parish house. Refreshments were served by a committee in charge of Mrs. H. K. Tetsuka.

GIMBELS
February Furniture Sale—"With Initiative"

$10 from $15

$60 from $90

TO-MORROW—FIRST "DAY OF REVIEW"

"Initiative is the faculty which enables one to begin to do things beneficial in one way or another. Almost any man may begin—that is, be the first—to do something, but few men can be the first to do that something well. Initiative, in order to be worthy of the name, should comprise two elements—the element of originality and the element of advantageousness.

"Initiative, guided by unbiased judgment, courage and foresight, is the greatest moving power in the world. It gives life to things which previously appeared dead—it moves, thrills, surmounts, accomplishes and wins."

The foregoing, from an excellent little essay on Initiative, by Robert Francis Nattan, expresses accurately the spirit of this GIMBEL February Sale of Furniture.

For it is the ADVANTAGEOUSNESS of this February event which will appeal most strongly to the public. It provides, to an extent not previously reached,—

(1) Furniture NEWLY MADE to harmonize with the prevailing good taste of to-day.

(2) At low prices made possible by CONCENTRATING on what we realized would be exactly the furniture most in demand. In other words, we adopted the same principle in buying furniture that Mr. Cowan, whose fine furniture is famous not only in America, but the world over, adopted in making the exquisite little Martha Washington Work Table, which we shall sell during February at half the price for which it was formerly sold.

We have applied this policy all along the line, and you are invited to see its results for yourself tomorrow, the first of the three Days of Review preceding the sale's formal opening on Monday next. You will find:

$100,000 worth of Library Furniture,

Comprising:

Davenports, (one style illustrated) at $67.50 to $95, usually $90 to $120; and Davenport Tables, in both of which we have specialized to a remarkable degree.

Library Tables, 148 styles, from $12 to $115, regularly $18 to $175. (A fine design in mahogany, by Cowan, is illustrated.)

252 styles of Easy Chairs, Rockers and Settees; 78 styles of Bookcases, and 46 styles of Library Suites, many luxuriously overstuffed in leather or tapestry.

$100,000 worth of Dining Room Furniture,

Comprising:

88 styles of Dining Room Suites, from $90 to $1,000, regularly $142.50 to $1,375; with an especially rich showing of Jacobean oak and Colonial mahogany at the more moderate prices.

Also 112 styles of Sideboards, 78 styles of China Closets, 56 styles of Dining Tables, and so on.

Over $150,000 worth of Bedroom Furniture,

Comprising:

86 styles of Bedroom Suites, from $87.50 to $975, regularly $130 to $1,490, in Sheraton, Chippendale, Colonial, and other period designs, and Modern American styles, in mahogany, white and gray enamel, American walnut, Circassian walnut and oak.

Other very important classes of Furniture at February savings include:

Sanitary Bedding, including Hair and Felt Mattresses, Feather Pillows, Woven and Wire Springs, all made to your order, at the lowest prices we have ever offered.

Summer Furniture, in Reed, Rattan, Willow, Cane and Rustic, including the favorite "Old Hickory."

Mission Furniture, the superbly built and artistic C. P. Limbert "Arts and Crafts" Furniture, chiefly in the new light, fumed finish, about one-fourth under price.

Fancy Furniture, including many charming gift pieces in mahogany, such as Tea Tables, Trays, Muffin Stands, Work Tables, and others in great variety.

Also Office Furniture of standard makes, Furniture for the Hall, and an unusual assortment of odd Chairs, Tables and other "occasional" pieces.

But, besides providing the furniture and setting extremely low prices upon it, we have made it possible for you to SEE it with utmost convenience, by an extraordinarily beautiful and commodious arrangement of our nearly two-acre selling floor.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Flutter In Eggs.

IT was in the A. C. company's big store at Dawson that Lucille Arral beckoned Smoke Bellew over to the dry goods counter.

Smoke obeyed her call with alacrity. The man did not exist in Dawson who would not have been flattered by the notice of Lucille Arral, the singing soubrette of the tiny stock company that performed nightly at the Palace Opera House.

"Things are dead," she complained, with pretty petulance. "There hasn't been a stampede for a week. There's no dust in circulation. There's always standing room now at the opera house. And there hasn't been a mail from the outside for two whole weeks. In short, this burg has crawled into its cave and gone to sleep. We've got to do something. It needs livening, and you and I can do it. I've broken with Wild Water, you know."

Smoke caught two almost simultaneous visions. One was of Joy Gastell, the other was of himself, in the midst of a bleak snow stretch under a cold arctic moon, being pot shotted with accurateness and dispatch by the aforesaid Wild Water. Smoke's reluctance at raising excitement with the aid of Lucille Arral was too patent for her to miss.

"I'm not thinking what you are thinking at all, thank you," she chided, with a laugh and a pout. "Take it from me, Mr. Smoke Bellew, I'm not going to make love to you, and if you dare to make love to me Wild Water will take care of your case. You know him. Besides, I—I haven't really broken with him. Wild Water thinks I've broken with him, don't you see?"

"Well, have you, or haven't you?"

"I haven't—there! But it's between you and me in confidence."

"Where do I come in, stalking horse or fall guy?"

"Neither. You make a pot of money, we put across the laugh on Wild Water and cheer Dawson up, and, best of all and the reason for it all, he gets disciplined. He needs it. He's—well, the best way to put it is he's too turbulent. He broke out last night again. Sowed the floor of the M. & M. with gold dust—all of a thousand dollars. You've heard of it, of course."

"Yes; this morning. But still I don't get you."

"Listen. He was too turbulent. I broke our engagement, and he's going around making a noise like a broken heart. Now we come to it. I like eggs."

"But what have eggs and appetite got to do with it?" Smoke demanded.

"Everything. I like eggs. There's only a limited supply of eggs in Dawson."

"Sure. Slavovitch's restaurant has most of them. Ham and one egg, $3; ham and two eggs, $5. That means $2 an egg, retail."

"He likes eggs too," she continued. "But that's not the point. I like them. I have breakfast every morning at 11 o'clock at Slavovitch's. I invariably eat two eggs." She paused impressively. "Suppose, just suppose, somebody corners eggs."

She waited, and Smoke regarded her with admiring eyes, while in his heart he backed with approval Wild Water's choice of her.

"You're not following," she said.

"Go on," he replied. "I give up. What's the answer?"

"Stupid! You know Wild Water. When he sees I'm languishing for eggs, and I know his mind like a book and I know how to languish, what will he do? Why, he'll just start stampeding for the man that's got the corner in eggs. He'll buy the corner, no matter what it costs.

"Picture: I come into Slavovitch's at 11 o'clock. Wild Water will be at the next table. He'll make it his business to be there. 'Two eggs, shirred,' I'll say to the waiter. 'Sorry, Miss Arral,' the waiter will say, 'they ain't no more eggs.' Then up speaks Wild Water in that big bear voice of his, 'Waiter, six eggs, soft boiled.' And the waiter says, 'Yes, sir,' and the eggs are brought. Picture: Wild Water looks sideways at me, and I look like a particularly indignant icicle and summon the waiter. 'Sorry, Miss Arral,' he says, 'but them eggs is Mr. Wild Water's. You see, miss, he owns 'em.' Picture: Wild Water, triumphant, doing his best to look unconscious while he eats his six eggs.

"Another picture: Slavovitch himself bringing two shirred eggs to me and saying: 'Compliments of Mr. Wild Water, miss.' What can I do? What can I possibly do but smile at Wild Water? And then we make up, of course, and he'll consider it cheap if he has been compelled to pay $10 for each and every egg in the corner."

"Go on, go on!" Smoke urged. "At what station do I climb on to the choo-choo cars or at what water tank do I get thrown off?"

"Ninny! You make that corner in eggs. You start in immediately, today. You can buy every egg in Dawson for $3 and sell out to Wild Water at almost any advance. And then, afterward, we'll let the inside history come out. The laugh will be on Wild Water. His turbulence will be some subdued. You and I share the glory of it. You make a pile of money. And Dawson wakes up with a grand ha, ha!"

"Hey, Shorty!" Smoke called across the main street to his partner and crossed over. "I want you to do me a favor."

"Sure," Shorty said gallantly. "What is it? Let her rip."

"I want you to buy eggs for me"—

"Sure, an' Floridy water an' talcum powder, if you say the word. Look here, Smoke, if you want to go in for high livin' you go an' buy your own eggs."

"I am going to buy, but I want you to help me to buy. You go right straight to Slavovitch's. Pay as high as $3, but buy all he's got."

"Three dollars!" Shorty groaned. "An' I heard tell only yesterday that he's got all of 700 in stock! Twenty-one hundred dollars for hen fruit. Say, Smoke, I'd sure do anything for you. If you had a cold in the head an' was layin' with both arms broke I'd set by your bedside day an' night an' wipe your nose for you, but I'll be everlastin'ly d—d if I'll squander twenty-one hundred good iron dollars on hen fruit for you or any other two legged man."

"They're not your dollars, but mine, Shorty. It's a deal I have on. What I'm after is to corner every blessed egg in Dawson, in the Klondike, on the Yukon. You've got to help me out. I haven't the time to tell you of the inwardness of the deal. I will afterward and let you go half on it if you want to. But the thing right now is to get the eggs. Now, you hustle up to Slavovitch's and buy all he's got. And then keep on. Nose out every egg in Dawson and buy it. Understand? Buy it!"

Never was a market cornered more quickly. In three days every known egg in Dawson with the exception of several dozen was in the hands of Smoke and Shorty.

The several dozen not yet gathered in were in the hands of two persons. One, with whom Shorty was dealing, was an Indian woman who lived in a cabin on the hill back of the hospital.

"I'll get her today," Shorty announced next morning. "I'll be back in a jiffy, if I don't bust myself a-shovin' dust at her."

In the afternoon when Smoke returned to the cabin he found Shorty.

"What luck?" Shorty asked carelessly after several minutes had passed.

"Nothing doing," Smoke answered. "How did you get on with the squaw?"

Shorty cocked his head triumphantly toward a tin pail of eggs on the table. "Seven dollars a clatter, though," he confessed.

"I offered $10 finally," Smoke said, "and then the fellow told me he'd already sold his eggs. Now that looks bad, Shorty. Somebody else is in the market. Those twenty-eight eggs are liable to cause us trouble. You see, the success of the corner consists in holding every last"—

He broke off to stare at his partner. A pronounced change was coming over Shorty—one of agitation masked by extreme deliberation. "Do you mind kindly just repeatin' over how many eggs you said the man didn't sell to you?" he asked.

"Twenty-eight."

"Hum!" Shorty communed to himself. "They's just exactly, precisely nor nothin' more or anything less'n twenty-eight eggs in that there pail settin' on the table, an' they cost, every dinged last one of 'em, just exactly seven great big round iron dollars a throw. If you stand in cryin' need of any further items of information I'm willin' and free to impart."

"Go on," Smoke requested.

"Well, that geezer you was dickerin' with is a big buck Indian. Am I right?"

Smoke nodded and continued to nod to each question.

"He's got one cheek half gone, where a bald face grizzly swatted him. Am I right? He's a dog trader—right, eh? His name is Scar Face Jim. That's so, ain't it? D'ye get my drift?"

"You mean we've been bidding"—

"Against each other? Sure thing. That squaw's his wife, an' they keep house on the hill back of the hospital. I could 'a' got them eggs for two a throw if you hadn't butted in."

"And so could I," Smoke laughed, "if you'd kept out. But it doesn't amount to anything. We know that we've got the corner. That's the big thing."

Shorty spent the next hour wrestling with a stub of a pencil on the margin of a three-year-old newspaper.

"There she stands," he said at last. "Lemme give you the totals. You an' me has right now in our possession exactly 973 eggs. They costs us exactly $2,700. If we stick up Wild Water for $10 an egg we stand to win, clean net an' all to the good, just exactly $6,970."

At 11 that night Smoke was routed from sound sleep by Shorty.

"I just seen Slavovitch. He says to me: 'Shorty, I want to speak to you about them eggs. I've kept it quiet. Nobody knows I sold 'em to you. But if you're speculatin' I can put you wise to a good thing.' An' he did, too, Smoke.

"Well, maybe it sounds uncredible, but that good thing was Wild Water Charley. He's lookin' to buy eggs. He goes around to Slavovitch an' offers him $5 an egg, an' before he quits he's offerin' $8. An' Slavovitch ain't got no eggs. Last thing Wild Water says to Slavovitch is that he'll beat the head offen him if he ever finds out Slavovitch has eggs cached away somewheres. Slavovitch had to tell 'm he'd sold the eggs, but that the buyer was secret.

"Slavovitch says to let him say the word to Wild Water, who's got the eggs. 'Shorty,' he says to me, 'Wild Water'll come a-runnin'. You can hold him up for $8. 'Eight dollars your grandmother,' I says. 'He'll fall for $10 before I'm done with him.' Anyway, I told Slavovitch I'd think it over and let him know in the mornin'. Of course we'll let 'm pass the word on to Wild Water. Am I right?"

"You certainly are, Shorty. First thing in the morning tip off Slavovitch. Have him tell Wild Water that you and I are partners in the deal."

In the morning Smoke chanced upon Lucille Arral again at the dry goods counter of the A. C. store.

"It's working!" he jubilated. "It's working! Wild Water's been around to Slavovitch, trying to buy or bully eggs out of him. And by this time Slavovitch has told him that Shorty and I own the corner."

Lucille Arral's eyes sparkled with delight. "I'm going to breakfast right now," she cried. "And I'll ask the waiter for eggs and be so plaintive when there aren't any as to melt a heart of stone. And you know Wild Water's heart is anything but stone. He'll buy the corner if it costs him one of his mines. Hold out for a stiff figure. Nothing less than $10 will satisfy me, and if you sell for anything less, Smoke, I'll never forgive you."

That noon, up in their cabin, Shorty placed on the table a pot of beans, a pot of coffee, a smoking platter of moose meat and bacon, a plate of stewed dried peaches and called "Grub's ready!"

Smoke opened the door for a breath of frosty air and saw something that made him close the door hurriedly and dash to the stove. The frying pan, still hot from the moose meat and bacon, he put back on the front lid. Into the frying pan he put a generous dab of butter, then reached for an egg, which he broke and dropped spluttering into the pan. As he reached for a second egg Shorty gained his side and clutched his arm in an excited grip.

"Hey, what you doin'?" he demanded.

"Frying eggs," Smoke informed him, breaking the second one and throwing off Shorty's detaining hand. "Get out of the way, Shorty. Wild Water's coming up the hill, and he'll be here in five minutes."

"Shorty and I own the corner."

Shorty sat down at the table. By the time the expected knock came at the door Smoke was facing him across the table, and before each was a plate containing three hot fried eggs.

"Come in!" Smoke called.

Wild Water Charley, a strapping young giant, entered and shook hands.

"Set down an' have a bite, Wild Water," Shorty invited. "Smoke, fry him some eggs. I'll bet he ain't scoffed an egg in a coon's age."

Smoke broke three more eggs into the hot pan and in several minutes placed them before his guest, who looked at them with so strange and strained an expression that Shorty confessed afterward his fear that Wild Water would slip them into his pocket and carry them away.

"Say, them swells down in the states ain't got nothin' over us in the matter of eats," Shorty gloated. "Here's you an' me an' Smoke gettin' outside $90 worth of eggs an' not battin' an eye."

Wild Water stared at the rapidly disappearing eggs and seemed petrified.

"They—they ain't worth no $10," Wild Water said slowly.

Shorty accepted the challenge. "A thing's worth what you can get for it, ain't it?" he demanded.

"Yes, but—you can't eat eggs like that," Wild Water objected. "It—it ain't right."

"We just dote on eggs, Smoke an' me," was Shorty's excuse.

Wild Water finished his own plate in a half hearted way. "Say, you fellows can do me a great favor," he began tentatively. "Sell me, or lend me, or give me, about a dozen of them eggs."

"Sure," Smoke answered. "I know what a yearning for eggs is myself. But we're not so poor that we have to sell our hospitality. They'll cost you nothing. Go ahead, Shorty. Cook them up for him."

But Wild Water laid a restraining hand on the eager Shorty as he explained. "I don't mean cooked. I want them with the shells on."

"So that you can carry 'em away?"

"That's the idea."

"But that ain't hospitality," Shorty objected. "It's—it's tradin'."

Smoke nodded concurrence. "That's different, Wild Water. I thought you just wanted to eat them. You see, we went into this for a speculation."

The dangerous blue of Wild Water's eyes began to grow more dangerous. "I'll pay you for them," he said sharply. "How much?"

"Oh, not a dozen," Smoke replied. "We couldn't sell a dozen. We're not retailers; we're speculators. We can't break our own market. We've got a hard and fast corner, and when we sell out it's the whole corner or nothing."

"How many have you got and how much do you want for them?"

"How many have we, Shorty?" Smoke inquired.

Shorty cleared his throat and performed mental arithmetic aloud. "Lemme see. Nine hundred an' seventy-three minus nine, that leaves nine hundred an' sixty-two. An' the whole shootin' match at $10 a throw will tote up just about nine thousand six hundred an' twenty iron dollars. Of course, Wild Water, we're playin' fair, an' it's money back for bad ones, though they ain't none. That's one thing I never seen in the Klondike—a bad egg."

Wild Water shook his head sadly and helped himself to the beans. "That would be too expensive, Shorty. I only want a few. I'll give you $10 for a couple of dozen. I'll give you $20, but I can't buy 'em all."

"All or none," was Smoke's ultimatum.

"Look here, you two," Wild Water said in a burst of confidence. "I'll be perfectly honest with you, an' don't let it go any further. You know Miss Arral an' I was engaged. Well, she's broken everything off. It's for her I want them eggs. I want to give them to her on a platter shirred. That's the way she likes 'em."

"Do you want 'em ninety-six hundred an' twenty dollars' worth?" Shorty queried.

"Aw, listen to reason," Wild Water pleaded. "I only want a couple of dozen. I'll give you $20 apiece for 'em. What do I want with all the rest of them eggs?"

"I should say Miss Arral's worth the price of the eggs," Smoke put in quietly.

"Worth it?" Wild Water stood up in the heat of his eloquence. "She's worth a million dollars. She's worth all the dust in Klondike. But that ain't no call for me to gamble $10,000 on a breakfast for her. Now, I've got a proposition. Lend me a couple of dozen of them eggs. I'll turn 'em over to Slavovitch. He'll feed 'em to her with my compliments. She ain't smiled to me for a hundred years. If them eggs get a smile for me I'll take the whole boiling off your hands."

"Will you sign a contract to that effect?" Smoke said quickly, for he knew that Lucille Arral had agreed to smile.

Wild Water gasped. "You're almighty swift with business up here on the hill," he said, with a hint of a snarl.

"We're only accepting your own proposition," Smoke answered.

"All right; bring on the paper; make it out hard and fast," Wild Water cried in the anger of surrender.

GAILY THE RESTAURANT COSTUME GLITTERS.

This typical restaurant gown is of steel beaded silver net with a border design in jet and rhinestone. The pretty little hat of black tulle is also trimmed with glittering rhinestones and a band of gleaming jet drops from the almost transparent bodice. The one touch of vivid color is in the sash, of purple and mais flowered ribbon.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Sidelights on the Suffrage Hearing.

What the Suffragists hope will be the last legislative hearing ever to be held in New Jersey on the question of woman suffrage took place in Trenton, on Monday, before the joint judiciary committees of the Senate and Assembly, Floor Leader William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, presiding.

At the requests of the committee the Suffragists confined their remarks to the resolution, and did not make propaganda speeches. The first speaker for the antis, however, after assuring the committee that neither the Republicans nor the Democrats need feel bound to vote for the resolution because their platforms merely say they "favor its submission to the voters" instead of saying "we pledge ourselves to submit the resolution, etc." (which sounded queer coming from a man of the sensitive honor which Mr. Matthews has several times publicly owned to having!), asked the committee's permission to speak on the general subject of suffrage, which was assented to, the committee no doubt realizing that he could not find enough arguments against the resolution to last for half a minute, much less the half hour allotted to him. This speaker caused a ripple of amusement when he said in closing, "I will now let the other ladies speak."

The next speaker on the anti side said she did not object to a referendum on the question of suffrage, but she wanted it postponed for a few years so that the men of the State might be educated up to voting against it. This must have been what she meant, because if she believed what some antis claim that ninety per cent. of the people of the State are opposed to woman suffrage there could surely be no reason for putting off the election "a few years," unless, horrid thought, the antis are beginning to enjoy the "limelight of publicity" which they constantly accuse the Suffragists of seeking.

The next anti speaker also injected a little humor into the situation when she said (illustrating the fact that in the suffrage ranks you can find all sorts of people—which cannot be said of the ranks of the antis, which contain only two sorts), "Over in Philadelphia the other day, Billy Sunday said the members of the Pennsylvania Legislature were all soused and pickled in alcohol, and that women's votes was the only thing which could ever change that condition in affairs," and she added with much impressiveness, "If he were here today he would probably say the same thing of you."

Miss Florence Leech, of Montana, the new field organizer for the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, attended the hearing, and she said she learned more new things about Montana in half an hour from the antis than her whole lifetime spent in that State had taught her. She discovered that Montana was run by Mormons, although at home she had never heard or seen of a Mormon; she learned that the liquor people of Montana had really advocated votes for women, when all during the recent successful campaign there, when she was traveling all over the State, she had fancied that their greatest enemies were the liquor people, judging from the placards pasted up in saloon windows, general articles in the papers, and the State paper of the Montana brewers themselves, the "Forum."

The Suffragists are assured by the leaders in both houses of the Legislature that the suffrage resolution will be passed without delay.

New Jersey's Vote in Washington.

An analysis of the vote of the New Jersey Congressmen on the proposed amendment to the National Constitution, on January 12, is interesting. The seven men who voted for it were Congressmen Baker, Hamill, Hart, Drukker, Eagan, Kinkead and Scully. Congressman Townsend was paired in favor of it. Two of the four men who voted against it are to be succeeded by Suffragists in the next session of Congress. It is also interesting, to note that of the total vote in favor of this amendment 35 per cent. was from the equal suffrage States, 35 per cent. from the Western non-suffrage States, 25 per cent. from Eastern non-suffrage States and 4 per cent. from the South, thus demonstrating that woman suffrage is not merely a "Western fad" as some of our opponents would have us believe.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

By ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Kate Kangaroo

Kate Kangaroo was the liveliest child
That you ever heard of, no doubt;
She couldn't keep still, but would hop, skip and jump
Till she very near wore herself out.

Each day when the animals came to their meals
They'd almost be frightened to death
At the way Katie Kangaroo came into the room;
She always hopped in, out of breath.

On Sunday the animals walked off to church,
And often they all had to stop
Till they got Katie Kangaroo back into line.
She just wouldn't walk—she would hop!

Then Mother McGrew would say, "Kate Kangaroo,
I've scolded you time and again;
I know that the hopping you do every day
Is bound to be bad for your brain.

But Katie was willful and so would not try
To walk in a ladylike way,
Till finally an accident happened to her
When she went to a party one day.

If there's one place on earth where you'd try to act nice,
A party's that place, it would seem.
But Kate tried to hop from the door to her chair
And upset the pail of ice cream!

Then Mother McGrew led her out by the ear,
And took her off home double quick.
"Since you like it so well, you shall hop all your days,"
And she tapped her three times with her stick.

A hop now and then is all right in its place,
But it certainly does seem to me
That to have to hop always as Kangaroos do
Would be tiresome—just try it and see.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Do you remember Milton Farrer?" asked Mrs. Wells as she followed her friend and they climbed into the electric.

"The man who used to go with Ruth Barber?" inquired Mrs. Styles.

"Yes. Everyone thought they were engaged, you know, but they had some trouble and Milton went west and was gone eight years. He traveled around considerably, but he made good. Ruth learned millinery and secured a position in Davenport," related Mrs. Wells.

"Did they correspond?" asked the friend.

"Not regularly. Once a friend of Ruth's came from Seattle and told her he had seen Milton and gave her his address. She wrote a friendly letter and he replied, but the correspondence dropped then. Milton came east to spend the holidays this winter, and when he got off the train at Davenport whom should he see standing on the platform but Ruth. She had come to meet a girl who was going in the store. Milton stayed over a train and took her to dinner. They must have had a pretty good time, for right after Christmas he went back to Davenport to see her.

"His mother suspected it was some girl taking him away so soon, and she watched the mails. When daily letters began to come from Davenport, having a mathematical mind, she put two and two together. She never liked Ruth, you know; never liked any of the girls her sons had anything to do with. Some people thought she was the one who made the trouble between them," said Mrs. Wells.

"It's very possible, she was so meddlesome. I know of no one more capable of making trouble," remarked her friend.

"Finally she asked Milton if the letters were from Ruth Barber," continued Mrs. Wells. "Milton told her they were, and added, 'We are going to be married inside of a month. She comes home to get ready at the end of the week.' You can imagine what followed, for you remember the commotion she made over Sam's marriage. Milton was surprised. He was thirty-two and had been managing his own life for eight years, but her boys never grew up as far as she was concerned. She still rules Silas with a rod of iron and he is nearly fifty."

"What did she do?" asked her friend.

"What didn't she do would be an easier question to answer. She made day and night hideous. The 'commonness' of Ruth's people, her 'shallowness'; her 'utter lack of all qualities to make a man happy,' were dinned into his ears continually. He tried silence first, thinking if she got it out of her system quiet would be restored, but his patience wore out, and finally he told her she might as well save her breath, for her opinion would change nothing. The old lady was so upset that she went to bed."

"That must have been a relief to the household," laughed her friend.

"Milton went into her room and said, 'Mother, you can go to bed and stay in bed if you prefer, but nothing you do or say will change my plans an iota. Ruth and I are to be married a week from next Wednesday. We should be glad to have you present, but your absence will not invalidate the ceremony,' and he left the house. He spent most of the time at her father's farm and slept at his brother's. Thus left to herself, his mother decided to get up," said Mrs. Wells.

"Did she go to the wedding?" asked Mrs. Styles.

"Yes, she went in bitter, solemn state. It's too bad women can't see that they are throwing away everything they hold most dear by using such methods. Milton never writes to his mother, except an occasional formal note. She utterly killed any affection he may have had for her," said Mrs. Wells.

"Are the young people happy?" asked her friend.

"Yes, and I understand they are doing well. Here we are. This is my home."

Household Hints

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

Fishbone in Throat—A raw egg taken immediately will carry down a fishbone that has got in the throat.

Headache—A hot mustard footbath will relieve headache by drawing blood away from the head.

Oily Hair—Make your oily hair fluffy by rubbing thoroughly with corn meal; then comb. This lasts a long time. Can be repeated when necessary.

WINDOW SHADES

If you prefer a white shade buy a heavy white linen, cut to fit the window and stitch a wide hem in bottom for stick and a narrow one at top, through which you tack to the roller. All fixtures can be purchased at your dry goods store. These blinds can be taken down and laundered, always looking fresh and clean, costing less than a boughten bood blind.

REPLACES CREAM

Custard is delicious served instead of whipped cream with any gelatine dessert. It can be flavroed with vanilla, with a strip of orange peel steeped in the milk, with lemon peel used in the same way or with almond extract.

THE TABLE

Baked Spareribs—Get two good-sized pieces of the ribs. Have a dressing made of stale bread, onions, yolk of one egg, pinch of salt, pinch of black pepper, enough sage to suit taste, enough water to moisten well; lay on one piece, cover with the other piece of ribs, pin together with toothpicks, or sew; put in pan, pour in about three cups water, sprinkle with salt, pepper and a little flour. Baste as you would any roast.

Fried Potatoes—Most people pare and boil potatoes and after they are cold slice and fry them. This wastes gas and the best part of potato is gone up in steam, leaving an almost tasteless "husk." Pare raw potatoes and slice in thin, unequal slices (easily done by revolving potato while slicing it). They fry quicker and better this way and are easier turned in the skillet because they do not stick together. Have skillet hot before putting them in; use plenty of grease, for fried in this way they absorb very little lard. After they are cooked pour lard in a cup and set potatoes back on fire for a little while; they will get a beautiful brown and have a flavor like walnuts. Remove from skillet immediately, for potatoes absorb acid out of a cool skillet.

Saratoga Chips—Use as many potatoes as needed, slice very thin, soak in cold water over night; strain off in strainer next morning. Take lard or drippings of any kind and boil in pan till steaming hot; throw in potato chips; in very few minutes they are crisp. Lay on brown paper to dry. Delicious with fried chicken. Season to taste when using.

"Rocks"—One cup brown sugar, one cup white sugar, one cup butter, three eggs, one-half teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon, one-half pound raisins, one-half pound chopped nuts, enough flour to make very stiff dough. Drop with spoon into well-buttered pan, bake in moderate oven. This makes very delicious little cakes, and if kept a month or so they taste still better.

Custard Sponge—Line dessert cups with thin slices of sponge cake or halves of lady fingers. Fill with custard that has been chilled and sprinkle grated macaroons over the top. Add a spoonful of whipped cream to each and serve.

A SLAVE TO CUSTOM

It is the most natural thing in the world for a man of property to name his friend or a business associate executor of his will and even trustee of his estate. This has been done for generations, in the absence of better facilities. The habit still continues after the need for it has completely disappeared.

TRUST COMPANY SERVICE IS MUCH MORE EFFICIENT

This company has specialized experience and ability which fit it to handle all phases of trusteeship in an economical way. It is familiar with investments; is equipped to handle real estate; to wind up a business; to collect and remit income. No individual could be expected to render as highly specialized a service, and no individual can be depended upon to serve. He may die, move away, become overburdened with cares of his own. This company is a permanent organization of trained men, always accessible, unaffected by the hazards of individual life.

GOV'T TO RECEIVE BIDS NEXT MONTH

Work on New Federal Building to Be Started in Near Future.

APPROVAL OF PLANS

Congressman W. E. Tuttle, Jr., Says That Everything is Now Practically in Readiness to Begin Actual Operations on Postoffice Structure.

The plans and specifications for Plainfield's new postoffice building to be erected at Watchung avenue and East Second street, have been finally approved by the Government and bids will be invited early in February, according to Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., who has been giving his personal attention to the matter, with a view to having operations begin at the earliest possible date. When questioned as to the progress being made, Mr. Tuttle said that he believed that the actual work would be started within the next three months which would probably be during the month of April.

Mr. Tuttle gave every assurance that there is now nothing to hold up the construction of the Federal building in this city, the plans being approved and the money being available for the work. As previously stated the structure will be one of the finest in the point of architecture and interior equipment to be found in this Congressional district and in many others.

The plans are unusually elaborate, especially with a view to providing ample room for all the departments required. It is expected that by the time the work is started on the building East Second street, between Watchung avenue and Church street, will have been widened. The Common Council has already taken steps toward this improvement, a public hearing being arranged for Monday night, March 1.

The councilmen do not expect to meet any opposition in widening the street believing that all of the affected property-owners will realize the importance of lending efforts to this needed improvement.

As there are many men out of employment at the present time the Government anticipates receiving a favorable bid for the construction work. As a rule there is considerable competition. The construction work will be supervised by a Government official, who is likely to come anywhere from Maine to California. No doubt some Plainfield men may be able to secure employment of one kind or another during the progress of the work.

Congressman Tuttle is much pleased with the expeditious manner in which the plans for the Federal building have progressed and while he may not be able to see the actual operations begin before going out of office on March 4, he says that he will at least have the satisfaction in knowing that he has been a factor in giving the city a fine new postoffice.

BOROUGH PUPILS TRYING TO OUTDO NOAH WEBSTER

The first contest for the two $5 prizes in spelling offered by the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association to the students of North Plainfield High School, will be held tomorrow morning at 8:20 in the High School building.

The words used in the contest will be taken from the first eight hundred words in the High School speller and one hundred words will be given. Similar contests will be held on the last Friday of each month up to and including the month of May, and at the close of the competition the person who has misspelled the least number of words during the five tests will be awarded a prize of $5.

The High School has been divided into two groups, one of which comprises only the commercial freshmen and the other includes all other members of the High School. A prize will go to the winner of each group.

WILL LEAVE SATURDAY.

Miss Bertha Spencer, who recently resigned her position as domestic science instructor in the North Plainfield Schools, will leave for her home in Ware, Mass., Saturday. Although Miss Marion Armstrong, the new teacher secured to succeed Miss Spencer, has been here all week, Miss Spencer remained in order to get the new instructor thoroughly acquainted with her work here.

DOROTHY V. FLYNN.

Dorothy V. Flynn, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Flynn, of 47 Clinton avenue, died last night at Muhlenberg Hospital. Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

ACTION OF COUNCIL PLEASES THE MAYOR

General Acceptance of His Recommendations by Committee Gratifying.

Commenting on the report presented to the Common Council at its meeting Monday night by the laws and ordinances committee to a Plainfield Daily Press reporter this morning, Mayor Leighton Calkins said:

"The report of the laws and ordinances committee approving every essential recommendation in my message, gives me great pleasure; as does the promptness with which it has been done. I am equally gratified by the action of the Council in receiving the report. Resolutions were immediately and unanimously adopted, paving the way for an administrative survey; for closer co-operation than we have ever had between the Board of Education and the city, in preparation of estimates of expense; and for continuation by the finance committee of my suggestion that public hearings should be advertised and held on all city and school budgets. I feel sonfident that the finance committee will approve of said recommendation. It is an integral part of my general plans for business-like and democratic methods. The city headquarters' recommendation was referred to the public affairs committee; but was approved in principle, and the committee will consider details. The fee system will now be established; and all this has been set in motion before February 1. I can only say that I greatly appreciate the Council's support, and very prompt and thorough action."

The message of the Mayor was thoroughly considered by the laws and ordinances committee composed of the following councilmen: R. H. Cox, chairman; Francis J. Blatz and Juan A. Babcock, and the recommendations for the most part were approved.

MRS. E. C. MARTIN DIES IN THIS CITY

Succumbs to Long Illness Following An Operation Last Spring.

Mrs. Mary A. Martin, wife of Edson C. Martin, of Albert street, died at her home last night, following an illness of six weeks. She had been ailing for nearly a year, following an operation performed last spring, but her condition did not become serious until a month ago.

Mrs. Martin was born at Chester, Morris county, and came to this city from Morristown eighteen years ago, when her husband and brother established the Woodhull & Martin Company. APPEALS TURNED DOWN BY BOARD

Union County Tax Body Refused to Grant Reduction to Local Concern.

EXPERTS ARE CALLED

Lengthy Testimony Taken in Plainfield Ice and Supply Company Protest Against Assessments Levied by Local Assessors.

Following a lengthy deliberation in the Council chambers last night, the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes dismissed the appeals of the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company for a reduction in assessment on property located in North avenue, east of Berckman street, and in Madison avenue, at the corner of West Third street. Experts were produced by both sides to testify to the merits of the appeal and the estimate established by the assessor for that district.

The applicants claimed that the North avenue tract was worth but $15 a foot whereas it had been assessed at $21 by the assessor and that the Madison avenue property was worth but $20 whereas it had been assessed at $30. William Newcorn appeared as counsel for the appelant and Assistant Corporation Counsel Walter L. Heifield, Jr., represented the city.

The Plainfield Ice and Supply Company produced John F. McIntyre and Edward Hardingham as experts to testify to the value of the properties, both maintaining that the assessment was too high. It was claimed by the appelant that discrimination had been shown in levying the figure and that the property would not sell for the assessment figure.

EXCUSES EXHAUSTED; ACTION COMES NEXT

Council Stirred Over Delay in Arrival of New Nott Fire Apparatus.

Continued pertinent questioning on the part of interested citizens has caused the fire committee of the Common Council to ask for an explanation regarding the non-arrival of the city's new Nott fire engine. The apparatus was ordered last summer and was to have been delivered October 15. The company's representative furnished plausible reasons for its failure to appear on that date and new ones specified have come and gone with the same results since the first of the year, the murmurings of the populace have passed beyond the off-hand stage and the officials have gotten tired of trying to invent reasonable answers. The company sent word last week that the engine had been placed on the cars, but nobody takes it seriously. Direct communications have now been started toward Minneapolis, where the Notts are made, asking the company to come across with the goods or tell without prevarication what is wrong.

Although no serious consideration has been given it, a number of downtown business men have stated openly the Council should refuse to accept the engine even if it comes within a few days. The contract, they argue, has been broken by the long delay. New bids could be asked for and as improvements are being made to auto engines daily something better might be secured. Robert Woodhouse, the local representative of the Nott Company, ran dry over explanations about five weeks ago and could give no new theory when seen yesterday.

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS' ARGUMENTS HEARD

Former Assemblyman John A. Matthews Addressed Local Lodge of Elks.

Anti-suffrage arguments were presented in a forcible manner by former Assemblyman John A. Matthews at a meting of one hundred Elks in the Watchung avenue clubhouse last night. As the Suffragists were given a hearing last spring, the Elks thought it no more than fair that the "Antis" should also be given a chance to present their side of the question.

Mr. Matthews was requested to represent the "Antis" and he gladly accepted. He was accompanied to the metng by Mrs. Sherman B. Joost, president of the Plainfield Branch of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage; Mr. Joost and Mrs. J. Constable Moore, also an officer in the local branch.

The party was given a most cordial welcome by the Elks during the half-hour set apart for the special session, and the "Antis" when they departed expressed confidence in the impression made by Mr. Matthews on the voters present. As he presented his arguments hearty applause was given frequently and at the close of the talk many of the Elks complimented him for his able address.

Assemblyman Mathews dwelt on some of the more important phases of the Suffrage question, and then proceeded to show the lack of results in the States where they have "votes for women." He referred especially to Colorado, where there has been suffrage for twenty-four years and then told of the anarchy and revolution in the State which has attracted country-wide attention.

The speaker said that he did not blame the Suffragists for this revolution in Colorado, but it demonstrated that suffrage had not proved itself to be of the benefit its supports claim. Mr. Matthews also spoke of the Socialistic menace from a political point of view and he thought the Suffragists were dealing themselves a hard blow by allowing the Socialists to allie themselves with the "votes for women" movement. The feminist phase of the question also came in for consideration and other important features in the movement to secure suffrage for women.

The large party made the journey to and from Siegfried in a solid train of seven Pullman coaches and not a single detail was omitted in making the day's outing an ideal one in every respect.

The freedom of the train was given to the guests and every little attention was provided by an able corps of attendants. Upon arriving at Siegfried the train was run into the company's yards and the first thing was an inspection of the new crushing plant, where thousands of tons of stones are crushed daily, electric power being used from the plant of the Lehigh Navigation Company plant miles away.

The guests were then conveyed in automobiles to the Park House, where a fine dinner was served. Afterward the whole party was taken to the moving picture theatre in the town where to the great amusement of all there was shown an appropriate pic-

REPULSE ENEMY ON ENTIRE FRONT

French War Office Says German Losses Have Been 20,000 in Three Days.

RUSSIANS STOP TURKS

London Hears That a Hard Drive by Allies May Be Expected Soon—France Has 2,500,000 Reserves Ready and England 2,000,000.

Paris, Jan. 28.—Desperate attempts on the part of the Germans to make yesterday, the Kaiser's birthday, one of memorable victories all along the battle front in Belgium and France, are reported by the War Office today to have resulted in failure. That the enemy was repulsed by the Allies along the entire line, with comparatively small loss on their part, is the claim, while it is said that in the last three days the Germans have probably lost 20,000 men. The Allies' loss in killed, wounded and captured, is placed at 800. The statement says that German prisoners taken have the impression that the Kaiser's troops have suffered a severe check.

The statement issued by the French War Office at 3 o'clock this afternoon sums up the fighting of the last three days as follows:

"In Belgium the positions of the enemy were bombarded and many of his trenches demolished. South of Lys, the English artillery bombarded the roads and the points of concentration of the Germans. In the sectors of Arras, Albert Roye, Noyon and Soissons, there were intermittent cannonades and rifle engagements. At several points the enemy's infantry attempted to leave the trenches to attack. These forces were immediately repulsed by sharp fire.

"In the region of Craonne the total losses suffered by the Germans on January 25 and 26 certainly reached the effective of a brigade (about 6,000). German prisoners have the impression that they have suffered a severe check. Our losses in killed, wounded or missing for these two days are in the neighborhood of 800 men. These losses are explained by the fact that the fighting was intense, and by the partial collapse announced yesterday of an old ferry in which two companies suffered there during the bombardment. Finding themselves walled in these soldiers were compelled to fall into the hands of the enemy alive during the first part of the attack. Our counter attacks regained for us all the ground in dispute.

"In the sector of Rheims and from Rheims to Argonne, there was an artillery duel in which our heavy artillery mastered the enemy's batteries, as reported yesterday evening. Three attacks in the Argonne at Fontaine Madame, at 6 a. m., 10 a. m. and 1 p. m., were completely rolled back. Three German attacks in the forest of Ailly, southeast of St. Mihiel, resulted in the same way. Some detachments of the enemy were repulsed at Parroy and Bures.

"In the Vosges we have made progress north of Senones, on the slopes of Signal De La Mere Hanri. Our gain was in the neighborhood of 400 yards. It was the same to the southwest of Senones and in the region of Ban De Sapp. Near Launis we gained ground and damaged the secondary defense of the enemy.

"We likewise made progress in Alsace. In the region of Ammertzeiller and Burnhaupt Le Bas the ground we gained was held. Near Cernay an attack of a German battalion was repulsed.

"Judging from the number of dead found on the ground on January 25, 26 and 27, east of Ypres, at La Bassee, at Craonne, in the Argonne, in the Woevre and the Vosges, the losses of the enemy in these three days seem to exceed 20,000 men."

Berlin, Jan. 28 (by wireless).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war the enemy's artillery bombarded Middlekerke and Slupe on the coast of Flanders yesterday. We took on the heights of Craonne 500 yards of trenches ddjoining those captured Tuesday. French attacks were repulsed without difficulty. The enemy suffered heavy losses. From Monday to Wednesday 2,500 dead Frenchmen were found on the battlefield, and we took 1,100 prisoners, including those reported yesterday.

"In the Vosges we repulsed several French attacks in the neighborhood of Senones and Zan de Sapp with considerable losses to the enemy. We took one officer and fifty men. Our closses were small.

"In Upper Alsace on the front of the line, the French attacked our positions. The attacks were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. The French retreated in disorder.

"In the eastern theatre we repelled

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Daniel Frohman's magnificent production of the great Roman spectacle, "Cabiria," considered by experts to be the summit of gorgeousness in in moving picture display, drew capacity audiences to the Plainfield Theatre, yesterday afternoon and night. It will be repeated this afternoon and evening and, although the full production of 1,200 scenes is given, there is no advance in prices. Another big feature film from the Famous Player Film Company will be presented at the Second street playhouse tomorrow and Saturday, when Mary Pickford will be seen in a play of stage life entitled "Behind the Scenes." The story is from the pen of Margaret Mayo, author of "Baby Mine" and "Twin Beds," and affords Miss Pickford the greatest opportunities in her career in the role of the little actress who finds that love is superior to dramatic success.

Gus Hill, that irrepressible purveyor of amusements for the masses, offers a new play under that internationally famous title of "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." As the name implies, it is a play of a son of "Erin's Isle," Allen Doone, whose misfortunes in both love and war lead him into many thrilling adventures. The love domance is interspersed with sweet Irish songs, excellent comedy of a refined order and a little pathos. Though the theme is of war and stirring in its patriotic sentiment, it is minutely neutral and offensive to no nation or people. William Anthony McGuire, the author, has written a play that will rank with "The Littlest Rebel" or "Shenandoah" in its dramatic worth. Mr. Hill has given it an excellent and elaborate scenic production and has engaged a most excellent company of performers. "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" will come to the Plainfield Theatre for an engagement of one night, Friday, February 5.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

One of the most successful comedy dramas produced in recent years was Alice Hagan Rice's story, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." It crowded theatres to their capacity in every city in the United States, and made thousands in foreign countries laugh and cry by turns. It has now been produced in moving pictures by the World Corporation Film Company and will be presented at Proctor's Theatre at the afternoon and evening performances next Monday and Tuesday. The photo-production is even more complete than the original stage version, as the former permits a wider scope of action. Members of the original company will be seen in the important roles, and no expense has been spared to give the delightful story its full interpretation. In addition to a complete change in the vaudeville bill at the theatre this afternoon, the second episode of "Runaway June" will be presented as a photo-play feature, and tomorrow afternoon and night will mark the continuation of the thrilling serial, "The Exploits of Elaine."

TO AMERICA

On Behalf of the Belgium Destitute

By THOMAS HARDY

The following poem by Thomas Hardy was written for The Commission for Relief in Belgium, which is the general shipping and clearance house for this relief work, and the only one recognized by the Powers at War.

Seven millions stand
Enactors, in that ancient Drift-land:—
We here, full-charged with our own national and dear,
And coiled in throbbing conflicts slow and sore,
Can soothe how slight these alls unmerited
Of souls forlorn upon the facing shore!
Where naked, gaunt, in endless band on hand
Seven millions stand

No man can say
To your great country that, with scant delay,
You must, perforce, ease them in their sore need.
We know that nearer first your duty lies,
But—is it much to ask that you let plead
Your loving-kindness with you—wooing wise—
Albeit that aught you owe and must repay
No man can say?

MAY POSTPONE OPENING OF PANAMA CANAL

Washington, Jan. 28.—Intimation that the Panama Canal might not be opened in March as planned was given at the White House when President Wilson declined an invitation to be present at the centennial celebration of Guilford Court House, N. C., on July 4 next. He told a delegation of North Carolinians that he might be absent at the ceremonies, attending the opening of the Canal at that time.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE RESTRAINT HURTS FARMERS

Trenton, Jan. 28—Although all indications are that the epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease has ceased in New Jersey, the State Board of Health still regards as necessary the restrictions which are being maintained to prevent a recurrence of the outbreak.

In a statement issued the Board admitted that the effects of the epidemic are still being felt by many of the farmers. In some instances the restrictions placed upon the purchase and sale of cattle and the inability of farmers to restock their dairies has materially lessenedt he milk supply.

MARTINE SCORES COMMERCE BODY ON RATE INCREASE

Washington, Jan. 28.—Senator Martine again showed his sympathy for the Wilson administration by voting Tuesday night with the radical Republicans against the confirmation of Henry Clay Hall, reappointed to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Hall was confirmed.

"I voted against Hall because I am opposed to the five per cent. increase for the railroads," said Martine, "and I believe that he, like the other members of the commission, looked at the subject through the wrong lens.

"The granting of this increase was the result of a most impudent method of high-handed, brow-beating, domineering influence. The commission had no more right to grant this increase to the railroads than it would have to grant increases in prices to concerns which also had suffered financial stringency.

"These men voted against the masses and for the railroads, and for that reason I would not vote for Hall's confirmation."

As to the case of George Hampton, nominated for collector at Camden, N. J., Senator Martine said he had asked Senator Stone, chairman of the sub-committee of the finance committee in charge of the nomination, if he were ready to report it, and Stone had said he was not.

"Then, I shall call it up at the first opportunity," replied Martine.

This action he would have taken in the afternoon, concluded Martine, if Senator O'Gorman, his right-hand man in the fight, had been present in the chamber.

STARVED INTO GOODNESS.

Why Crime Is Rare Among the Caribs of South America.

In the whole wide world there is not a class of people to be found who inflict severer punshment upon themselves than the Caribs of Central America.

Their religion, which is one of the most peculiar kind, demands self punishment for sins intentionally or unintentionally committed. The punishment takes the form of starvation and close confinement.

If the sin be in the form of a lie, no matter whether it is calculated to injure another or not, the sinner goes without either food or drink for three days, at the end of which it is believed that the offender has paid the penalty for his or her sin. Blaspheming and using bad language are punishable by absolute starvation for two days. Assault, drunkenness and other serious sins call for four days' starvation for one week, three days' starvation for the second week, two days' starvation for the third week and one day's starvation in the fourth week.

All sins are punished with starvation. For that reason crime is very low among the Caribs, who are among the best behaved and most truthful people in the world.—London Telegraph.

Fear of Premature Burial.

The fear of premature burial, which prompted the late Lord Burton to direct by his will that his heart should be removed from his body, has caused many well known men and women to order a surgical operation to be performed upon their bodies. Harriet Martineau left her doctor £10 to amputate her head, and Lady Burton directed that her heart should be pierced with a needle. The late Edmund Yates left instructions that his jugular vein should be severed, with a provision that a fee of 20 guineas should be paid for the purpose. Literary persons appear to have been particularly afraid of premature burial. Bishop Berkeley, Lord Lytton, Hans Andersen and Wilkie Collins all took measures to protect themselves from it.—Westminster Gazette.

Magazines on Warships.

If there is one danger that sailors dread more than any other it is an explosion in the powder magazine. To prevent such an occurrence a device for flooding that compartment in the least possible time is fitted to most big battleships. A pipe below the surface connects the magazine with the sea. This pipe is closed by two taps, which are connected with the deck. In case of danger it is only the work of a minute to open the taps, let the sea rush in through the pipes and flood the magazine. The water is afterward drained off by means of a gutter.—London Mail.

Life Doesn't Wait For You.

It is one of the provoking, but interesting things about life that it will never stop a moment for admiration. No sooner do you pause to enjoy it, or philosophize over it, or poetize about it, than it is up and away, and the next time you glance around it is vanishing over the hill—with the wind in its garments and the sun in its hair. If you do not go on with life it will go on without you.—American Magazine.

Already Taken.

"I wouldn't marry the best man on earth," said Belle scornfully to her dearest friend.

"I guess you wouldn't," said Claire happily. "He has promised me that he'll never marry again, even if I should die."—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE CIRCULATING MEDIUM.

When the war broke out in Europe the first thing that happened in the countries involved was that coin ran to cover. People who had any money put it away somewhere so that if a time came when they really had to have it they would have it. The bankers called it hoarding and were perfectly right in saying it was a mistake to do it. But you can't make human nature over in a night. So people had to trade the commodities themselves instead of the coin that represents commodities.

Europe has a good many troubles but there is one trouble we have that she has not, and that is the mail-order house. The enemies that are hurting the countries over there and destroying towns and homes come from without instead of from within. They are bombarding the cities and towns with bombs instead of mail order catalogues.

We hate to think what some towns would do for a circulating medium if a thing like that ever happened over here and the coin all ran to cover. We mean those towns where the mail order catalog goes about seeking whom it may devour. There isn't much ready money in a town like that, anyway. And if such a community had to exchange commodities instead of cash it would have an awful time. Who would want to swap a ton of good hay for a set of mail-order harness? Who would care to exchange some perfectly good butter for a mail-order chair? And who would want to trade almost any kind of a mail-order thing for something from the same source and maybe get even worse?

There would be only one way to do business and that would be the mail-order way—sight unseen. Instead of taking the harness over to a neighbor to swap it for a mail-order suit of clothes, perhaps, the thing to do would be to take over a picture of it and show it to the other fellow. The clothes or the harness would look A-1 in a picture. But the actual article, especially if it had been in use a little while, would be a hard thing to drive a bargain with. It would be as hard as driving nails with a mail-order hammer.

No, if the coin ever disappears in this country and we have to trade actual commodities, the mail order house and the mail order patron are going to have a hard time doing business.

Mrs. George P. Mellick advanced reasons in the Forum column last night for the continuance of the Women's Exchange in this city. As has been noted in our news columns, the directors of that organization have called a meeting for next month, at which time a vote will be taken to decide whether or not to continue the work. The Women's Exchange, ever since it was founded in Plainfield, has afforded an opportunity for hundreds of women to aid their slim purses, and in some cases has provided their entire means of support. In order to do this work it has been necessary to help maintain the store by outside contributions, and the financial stringency has become so great now that it has been impossible to offset the loss. The Exchange does not interfere with regular business houses, as the articles which are on sale there are seldom found elsewhere in the city. Perhaps a campaign of education regarding the value and needs of the Exchange would make it possible to continue it, and the Daily Press will welcome similar signed communications to the one printed last night, in the hope that the discussion they may bring about will perpetuate the work. Plainfield responded so nobly to the many appeals for aid made here this winter, that it would be a shame to have to admit that so worthy a cause as the Woman's Exchange has been forced out of business for lack of public support.

That immigration may decline after the war, instead of increase, as many are predicting, is pointed out in an article in the current issue of Farm and Fireside. Judson C. Welliver, the Washington correspondent of that paper, says, among other things, that he finds a number of students of the subject who feel that it will not increase. He says that "there will be a pitifully large population of widows and orphans in Europe. Will the men desert them? Will not the Governments, finding that a great share of the most efficient young manhood has already been sacrificed, adopt rigorous measures to discourage emigration? When the great war is over, the men who remain will be needed, more than ever, to rebuild. It will not do to let them hurry away to new and more promising lands."

In their annual report the State Board of Health recommends that hereafter trained and licensed attendants be required at all sewage disposal plants in this State, as it has been found that in some of the plants difficulty has been encountered in improving the conditions because of the ignorance of attendants. The report says that in only one plant is a trained man employed as manager. It now develops that the "one plant" referred to is in this city, where John R. Downes, a chemist, acts as the manager. Just one more instance where Plainfield leads the State. The other cities in New Jersey will certainly have to "go some" if they want to catch up to us in modern methods of handling big problems.

"Women and the Ballot" will be the subject of the editorial for Saturday. It has been written by a well known and popular city official, and it discusses a subject which is paramount now for the reason that the people of New Jersey are to vote on the question before the year is over. While the legislature has not passed the proposed amendment for the second time there is no doubt that they will do so during the present session, as the platforms of both parties pledge them to it.

INSPECT CEMENT CO.'S PLANT

ture entitled "A Concrete Romance," in which the thousand and one uses of concrete were shown as old frame structures were replaced with modern ones of concrete.

From the theatre the party went to the company's offices where after checking their hats and coats they were provided with caps and dusters preparatory to taking the interesting trip to the cement mills. Groups of a dozen men each provided with an experienced and obliging guide spent most of the afternoon in the large plant where they were privileged to witness the whole process of making cement from start when the stone is brought in to the making of barrels bags and filling the same with cement and placing it in freight cars ready for shipment. In all about 400 men are engaged in this interesting work. Every detail was explained by the guides and the walk through the mills proved to be highly instructive

A noteworthy feature and one that seemed to impress everyone in the party was the apparent loyalty of every employe to the concern from the smallest boys to the superintendent and executive department. The humanitarian side of the big industrial plant was plainly evident for while it would be possible for the company to close its mills at this time of the year for repairs, this is deferred until the spring and summer months, when the men are given time to plant their gardens and do other things at home. Thus the men are able to keep busy in a most profitable way. A majority of the employes own stock in the company and in a real sense they are privileged to take part in the profit-sharing plan adopted by the company and they have more than the mere interest of drawing a wage or salary It is just like one big family.

After the trip through the mills it was nearly 5:30 o'clock at which time the homeward journey was started. The inner man was refreshed abundantly with refreshments, topped off with good cigars, and in addition each guest received a handsome leather pocketbook bearing his name in gold letters. Plainfield was reached at 7:15. En route for home the following resolutions were prepared and signed by all on board the train, expressing the appreciation of all for the hospitality of the company and its employes:

Wheras, The officers and directors of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company have this day favored us with marked hospitality, in the form of a personally conducted tour of inspection through their plant at Siegfried, Pa., and

Whereas, The consideration and care shown for the pleasure, comfort and instruction of their guests bespeak rare thoughtfulness and kindly feeling, and

Whereas, As a result thereof, we each and all have enjoyed the day to the utmost. Therefore,

Be it resolved, That the sincerest thanks of us all, the guests of the said company, be, and are, hereby, tendered to the officers and directors of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company, for their kindness, together with our best and heartiest wishes for the company's continued success and prosperity.

Among those in the party were Ernest R. Ackerman, Marion S. Ackerman, State Senator Carlton B. Pierce, Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., Mayor Leighton Calkins, former Mayor Percy H. Stewart, Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield; Councilmen A. D. Edgar, C. C. Graves, Francis J. Blatz, Theodore A. Martin, John H. Cose and Thomas F. Hylan, Assemblyman William N. Runyon, Frank H. Smith, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, Tax Collector William R. Townsend, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Frederic H. Andrews, Enoch Berry, Allen E. Beals, Marson I. Buttfield, James E. Clark, Allan Cowperthwaite, Alfred S. DeNise, Charles M. Dolliver Walter C. Dobbins, Charles L. Force George H. Fisher, Jr., Millard F. Elderton, Louis K. Hyde, Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Edward H. Hobbie, Edward L. Hand, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges Charles E. Loizeaux, Allen B. Laing, Alexander Milne, Armstrong Mulford, Frank Mobus, Alfred M. Morrell Walter M. McGee, John E. Nicol, Albert W. Sheppard, Robert A. Pruden, Charles Wheeler and James Kyle.

APPEALS TURNED DOWN

made the levy on the Madison avenue property, Charles Lyman, Harvey Linbarger, Armstrong Mulford and Thomas Hughes were produced as witnesses for the city. It was alleged that the supply company absolutely refused to place any value upon its Madison avenue property and Mr. Liefke objected to even the slightest reduction in assessment. Both properties are located along the railroad and this feature had much to do in determining the assessment. The piece of property in North avenue is suitable for a coal yard or factory site and the city counsel showed that it had not been valued too high by presenting figures showing what properties in the immediate vicinity and with the same railroad facilities, had sold for recently.

The case was the last to be heard by the County Board, a number of meetings having been necessary to dispose of the many appeals. The unusual number of protests is said to be due to the fact that the assessments in past years have not been sufficiently equalized, a number of large property-owners having been getting off with a light assessment, while the smaller property-holder has been assessed his full share. In a majority of the cases considered by the Board the local assessors have been upheld and the reductions granted have been comparatively small in value when the fact that nearly 300 appeals were filed is taken into consideration.

PINES A MENACE TO NURSERY STOCK

Hearing on Question of Prohibiting Importation is Announced.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 28—Because of the danger to American nursery stock a public hearing will be held next Tuesday at the Department of Agriculture to discuss a proposed quarantine on the importation of all pines from Europe. During the past year imported pines have been found to be infested with the European pine shoot moth. In Europe this is on of the principal insect enemies of pine and is especially destructive in nurseries, young forests and ornamental plantations. It kills or injures the young twig growth and deforms the tree to a serious extent.

In this country the insect seems to be still confined to the European pines in Connecticut, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia. Strenuous efforts are already being made to stamp it out and it is believed that these will be successful if no further importations of infested stock are permitted.

The white pine blister rust has already resulted in the exclusion of all five-leafed pines from Europe and Asia. The proposed quarantine will extend this prohibition to all closes of pines from Europe. No restriction is proposed on the importation of pine seed. The hearing will be held at 10 a. m.

NOTES FROM LABOR FIELD

500,000 men have gone back to work in the United States during the past two weeks, and the tide of prosperity is rising, according to close observers.

Wyoming has adopted the constitutional amendment which provides for workmen's compensation. The vote was 24,258 to 3,915.

The new Colorado Governor starts off right in calling off gun play in future strikes. Miners are rough men, but they have hearts that will meet any honest dealings. They have been taught that force was the best means.

A million American sympathizers will dig down and pay that Danbury Hatters' fine. The hat makers were poor men and many of them have died. The decree imposed by the court is respected, and all honest workmen concur in the finding.

Missouri labor men are opposing the compensation bill, as framed in that State, on the ground that the scale is too low, the limits of the act are too narrow, occupational diseases are omitted and unskilled labor is favored too greatly.

Former President Taft's speech in New Haven stating that labor is injuring its own advancement by seeking "class legislation" was given wider publicity than any vindication of labor.

Differing materially from his fellow jurist came on the same day the decision of Judge Louis D. Gibbs, of New York, discharging organized men: "I fail to see where any crime has been committed. Labor has the right to protect its rights, to use every legal method to get shorter hours and higher wages. If in doing so somebody else is injured labor cannot be held responsible for it."

Mine workers in Pennsylvania have established a legal bureau and accidents are now thoroughly investigated. At Hazleton a mine worker is on a committee to investigate the death of 7 men in a mine last summer. It is charged that the accident was twice "whitewashed" by coroners' juries, and the miners insist the mine was run in an illegal manner.

The recent indictment of three Chicago labor agents promises to bring out a legal fight more bitter than the Gompers-Morrisor-Mitchell affair. The charges brought are for preventing delivery of interstate shipments. The cases are the first of their kind ever brought. Graft and bribery were charged against union officials during the investigation last summer, and the union men charged the contractors had stooped to improper methods to crush organized labor.

Amos Pinchot's hot shot at Gary and Perkins, of the New York investigation committee on unemployment, alludes to the "theory upon which General Diaz chose distinguished bandits to lead the police of Mexico City." And he adds: "Though Gary and Perkins have succeeded well in limiting production and the opportunity of labor, and in keeping up the cost of living, it seems doubtful whether the public will conclude that they are equally successful when called on to increase opportunities of labor and reduce the cost of living."

Ohio has extended its workmen's compensation law to include the following: When bitten by a dog while in the course of employment; after quitting regular work and injured while on way to paymaster's desk to draw money; drowning while on duty; shot by a discharged employee; common law wife is entitled to compensation in case of death of her common law husband; apoplexy, superinduced by over-exertion; quitting work a minute before time to change clothes and painfully injured by a fellow workman; assaulted and killed by another while in course of employment; death from another cause does not abate a claim for compensation for previous injury; a night watchman killed immediately on his arrival on the premises of his employer; heat prostration while in the course of employment.

WAR NEWS

unimportant attacks north and east of Gumbinnen. A Russian division was repulsed near Veivun, northeast of Sierpes. The situation is otherwise unchanged in Poland."

London, Jan. 28.—A despatch from Petrograd says that the general staff of the Russian army of the Caucasus has issued the following statement on the progress of the fighting in that district:

"On the morning of January 26, Turkish forces in the vicinity of Sultan Selim, in the Tchoruk country, delivered a series of vigorous attacks on our positinos, all of which we repulsed. In the vicinity of Olti, 55 miles west of Kars, the Turks, following their custom of recent days of taking the offensive, sent forward an enveloping column. This column was, however, thrown back by us, and the Turks sustained heavy losses."

There is lively speculation here as to the object of the secret visits of President Poincare, of France, to King George and Premier Asquith, last week. The three saw Lord Kitchener's army in training and they were later joined by French War Minister Millerand.

The visitos are believed to be concerned with some very important move of the Allies on the western front now being prepared.

The French army for some time has been carefully conserving its artillery ammunition for a new development of the campaign which has been agreed upon.

France, in addition to the men now on the firing line, is understood to have in reserve for this move 1,500,000 of first line troops, with a further 1,000,000 in the second line as a reserve when the contemplated grand offensive movement begins.

At the same time Lord Kitchener's army, which is estimated as high as 2,000,000, is expected to be in the field to take part in giving a decisive turn to the war.

Petrograd, Jan. 28.—The general staff of the Russian army today gave out a communication on the progress of the war. It is dated January 27 and reads as follows:

"In Oriental Prussia fighting has continued in the region of Malwischken and Lasdenen.

"On the right bank of the lower Vistula there took place again an artillery engagement and encounters with advance parties of the enemy in front of this river, in the neighborhood of Skempe, we were successful in forcing back several German battalions.

"The night of January 26 and the day following saw no important change on the left bank of the Vistula. The Germans, however, delivered reiterated attacks against our front in the vicinity of Bolimow, but in every case they were driven back. During one of these engagements some detachments of the enemy who have been successful in gaining our trenches were dispatched at the point of the bayonet.

"Attacks made by the enemy in the vicinity of the villages of Rabskebudy and Kamion also reulsted in failure.

"In the course of January 26 our artillery bombarded with success the lines of the enemy and reduced to silence a German battery located at the village of Atlanka, which is near Sochaczew.

"In Galicia the engagements are developing on a large scale. The front extends from Mount Bukla to Mount Wyszkow. On the right wing of this front we have captured 100 prisoners and two machine guns.

"In Bukowina on January 25, in the vicinity of Waleputna to the southwest of Kimpolung, there was an artillery engagement."

RAMPOLLA AND POPE LEO.

Cardinal Mentioned For Papacy Sore Famous Message to Dying Pontiff.

The late Cardinal Rampolla was the closest collaborator with Pope Leo XIII. in the movement for the reunion of the Christian churches. When Pope Leo was dying a cablegram was received in Rome saying that the American Protestant congregations were praying for his recovery. Cardinal Rampolla was informed of the contents of the dispatch, which he took immediately to the dying pontiff. The latter instructed Cardinal Rampolla to write that the message had been the greatest consolation to him before his death, as it had proved that his scheme for the reunion of the churches was not a dream.

It had been thought in many quarters that Cardinal Rampolla was the most likely candidate for the papal chair in case of the death of the present pope.

Europe In Africa.

The Africa of today is partitioned off among the following nations: Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Belgium and Spain. Great Britain has the fairer portions, her South African possessions having a fine climate and being in every way perfectly adapted to the white race. The French and Italian possessions along the Mediterranean are also well enough as regards climate, but are lacking along agricultural and other lines. It is exceedingly doubtful if much of German, Belgium and Portuguese Africa will ever become the seats of white civilization.

LISTLESS PLAYING FEATURED HIGH SCHOOL QUINTET'S VICTORY OVER LEAL ATHLETES

Final Score 30 to 18—P. H. S. Always in the Van—Slow Work by Both Sides—Many Easy Shots Missed and Passing Was Poor and Ragged—Usual League Enthusiasm From Gallery Gods Was Missing.

Listless playing featured Plainfield High School's 30 to 18 disposition of the Leal Preparatory School quintet on the Y. M. C. A. court, yesterday afternoon, the affair being the slowest Interscholastic League encounter that has been staged here in several years. Only in the first few minutes did hostilities wax warm and after that period the rival factions started to skid and performed like ten novices. The playing of every man on the floor left much to be desired by the coaches.

Leal's caught P. H. S. in an off-form mood such as would have proven disastrous to the red and blue athletes had it occurred on Saengerbund Hall court last Saturday afternoon. On the other hand the fact that the private school youngsters also failed to put up their best article of the court pastime is probably accountable for the fact that the High School clan managed to cop the decision.

The old time slam-bang fighting spirit, the usual din of the gallery gods and the flashes of brilliancy among the players, so typical of Interscholastic League encounters, were among the missing quantities. Although Plainfield won and by virtue of the win hung up a commanding advantage in the league team records, the victory falls far short of being a creditable one. The battle was fairly enough waged but was gingerless and savored of the essence of indifference.

The fact that but a score of fouls were called on the contending forces fails to indicate that the issue was a clean-cut affair. The offenses were generally committed by the private school youngsters in an effort to ward off aimless shots lodged at the iron rings by the High School boys, and if a majority of the penalties had been inflicted the official would have ran a chance of putting the breaks on the slowly moving issue. Many stops for foul shooting might possibly have resulted in a discontinuance of the struggle altogether.

At half time the Ninth street basketeers led by a 16 to 11 score, a collection of seven field tallies and a brace of fouls being responsible for the lead over Leal's three of double-deckers and five one-point tallies.

In the final chukker the Leal boys scored but a pair of field goals and rung up three more fouls while P. H. S. was collecting a half dozen field goals and two more penalty tosses. Captain Chauncey Stewart, of the losing force, was the one individual who stood out as a player of real merit in yesterday's game. His collection of two field goals and eight fouls proved to be two-thirds of his team's contribution to the afternoon's entertainment. He was the main and only cog in the Front street team's passing machine and time and again worked the ball down the floor in an individual fashion. Rosenson and Chamberlain, as usual, were the best scorers for P. H. S. Rosenson was continually hampered by a guard who sought to play the man instead of the ball and a majority of his tallies were chalked up with his opponent doing a circus ride on his back.

ANNUAL GATHERING FOR HOLY CROSS CLANS TONIGHT

The annual meeting and banquet of the Holy Cross Football Club will be held at the home of Cliff Smith, of Dunellen, tonight at 8 o'clock. The members of the club will meet at Doyle's studio at 7:30 and go in a bunch to their host's home. Smith played tackle on the football eleven this year.

A report from the movie entertainment committee shows that the club realized $20 profit on the recent benefit performance in the Astor Theatre.

It is rumored that Manager "Doc" Doyle will resign his position tonight owing to pressure of business. Norman Ammermann, who has been one of the assistants this past season, is a very likely candidate for the vacancy and he will probably be named as Doyle's successor. Ammermann has had an interest in the club all season and has worked hard to make it a success.

NEW ATHLETIC EVENT.

A new athletic event has been devised on the Pacific coast, where the students of Occidental College included in the interclass meet program a modified broad-high jump. Its value for general purposes is that it has the tendency to make the broad jumpers go up in the air and improve their style for regular broad jumping. In the competition three freshmen and two juniors cleared 4 feet 2 inches. The conditions called for the competitors leaving the ground ten feet away from the high jump standards.

FLASHY FINISH WON FOR N. P. H. S. GIRLS

Trimmed Westfield Quintet by 14 to 11 Score at That Place Yesterday.

In a game replete with thrills and excitement from start to finish, the North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team successfully defeated the girls' team of Westfield High School at Westfield, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 14 to 11. Every members of the borough team played a stellar game, and although the small court and low ceiling were disadvantages to them, they made a big effort in the last two minutes of play and from a tie score gained a lead of two baskets on their opponents, winning the game.

A large number of fouls were called on each side, but only a small per cent. of these were made good, each side missing thirteen chances from the fifteen foot mark.

The score during the first period of play was very even and during this half Westfield scored its only field goals, Miss Sexton making both of them. N. P. H. S. registered one basket and three fouls during the session and the score ended 5 to 4. The scoring was equally as even in the second half, and was tied at three different times. In the last five minutes of play the home team gained a lead of two points on the North Plainfield maidens, but Miss Burtis soon set the large number of local rooters who accompanied the players to cheering, when she tied the tally by making one of the two-point variety from a difficult angle. Then with only two minutes to play she made two more beauties which gave the game to North Plainfield, the home team only being able to make one more point on a free throw.

A lot of credit is due Miss Keller and Miss Debele, who both played fine games at guard, for it was their fine defensive work that kept the Westfield delegation from totalling up any more baskets than they did. Miss Douglas played a good game at centre, easily outjumping her opponent, and it is needless to mention the good work of the two forwards.

Miss Sexton starred for the losers, making all of the eleven points scored by her delegation. Miss Martin and Miss Emery also played good games in the guard positions.

ONE-LEGGED BOY BEATS RIVALS IN A FOOT RACE.

Wallace Weglau, the one-legged phenom of the local Y. M. C. A. Boys' Department, performed a feat in the nine potato race event held Tuesday afternoon, that is truly remarkable. The distance, which is equal to a 220-yard run, was covered by Weglau in 1 minute, 3 4 5 seconds. This is not only a fine mark in itself but he also came only four seconds behind the best time made, which was 59 seconds, registered by Johnson, of the Army team.

Weglau, with one leg, finished twelfth out of a field of eighteen and there were six other boys who have both of their lower limbs who took longer to go the distance than the cripple.

The Ninth street institution's representatives now have two games to their credit, both having been won on the courts of rival teams.

North Plainfield, with a win over Leals and a defeat administered by P. H. S., is second. Leal School occupies its traditional position in the cellar with a brace of reverses charged up.

The next game, to be played on the Plainfield High School court, Lincoln's Birthday, may decide the league championship. A victory for Plainfield over the boroughites will practically assure the local quintet of the gonfalon. If N. P. H. S. comes out in the lead a first place tie will be established.

George Linke was the individual star of the game, getting as many points as his opponents totalled.

The visitors were held to six points in the first half, which ended 18 to 6, but they outscored the home players in the last half by two points. For the Meadowbrooks, Eckert and Runyon starred.

REPAIRING A "BLOW-OUT."

In its department "Short Cuts and Minor Methods," The New York Telephone Review publishes an account of a simple method of vulcanizing tubes with a standard flatiron, used successfully by one of the contributors to the magazine:

The tube is cleaned carefully around the puncture and coated with a cement made of raw rubber and gasoline; the patch is then treated in the same manner, and when the cement is nearly dry, the patch is placed over the puncture. An ordinary flatiron, which has been heated in the meantime, is placed on the tube, which is protected by a piece of newspaper. The iron is heated just hot enough so that it will not burn the paper, and is left on the patch until it has cooled, when it is found that the patch has firmly united with the tube.

Blow-outs two inches long have been successfully repaired in this manner.

CHELSEA'S NAME.

Inquiring into the derivation of the names of the telephone exchanges, The New York Telephone Review sketches the history of "Chelsea" which was named for old Chelsea Village. The village was called after the first house built in this section of the New York Colony. Captain John Clarke, a veteran of the French and Indian Wars, built his mansion on a hill between Greenwich and Haarlem, calling it "Chelsea" after the place in Old England where many soldiers passed their last days. The house was subsequently purchased by the father of Clement C. Moore the author of the familiar old Christmas poem "'Twas the Night Before Christmas." Chelsea, then, was undoubtedly the first place where the pattering hoofs of "eight tiny reindeer" were ever heard galloping across the roof!

LITTLE BITS OF SPORTING CHAT

Contract Saves Jim Thorpe's Job With Giants.

HE WILL STICK FIVE YEARS

Indian Athlete Made a Good Bargain When McGraw Wanted to Hire Him. Other Giants Are Also Glad They Cast Anchor to the Windward—Enviable Record Made by the Athletics.

It develops that the only reason Jim Thorpe, the Sac and Fox Indian, happens to be in the major league is because of his contract. The all round athlete had uncommonly good advice when McGraw went to Carlisle, Pa., to sign him.

He put his signature to a contract that couldn't be broken with one of the kaiser's forty-two centimeter guns. The parchment called for five years of service at a big salary, with the ten day clause deleted, as the censors say.

Under the terms of the parchment Thorpe can't be farmed out or even slapped on the wrist for violating any of McGraw's rules. The only power reserved by the Giants is to pay him his salary; otherwise they haven't a word to say.

Of course Thorpe has never made good. To be brutally blunt, he hasn't even pastimed like a class A man, but McGraw has to keep him just the same, although he would have let him out long ago had it not been for the contract.

The little Napoleon strove hard to pass this red elephant to another manager, including Pat Moran, but hasn't been able. Everybody is wise to the contract.

Red Murray is also drawing good money under similar conditions. McGraw would like to tie a big can to him, but can't because of Red's contract. He also tried to shove him on the Phils, but failed. It is no wonder that President Hempstead refuses to offer any more long term contracts to his players.

The Philadelphia team of the American league established a record in 1914 that is without a parallel in baseball. Not a single player was ejected from a ball game during the entire season. Not even a coacher was ordered to the bench for conduct that failed to meet with the approval of the umpire. Just think of it—the team that won the pennant in the American league, the team that was in the heat of a bitter struggle up until Aug. 1, when it loomed up as the one best bet, did not have a player put out of the game.

The Chalmers trophy commission, having reached the fifth and last season of its existence, has been dissolved. The plan of Hugh Chalmers, baseball fan and motorcar maker of Detroit, was successful in every way and was a diverting side angle of the sport.

At the start Mr. Chalmers gave machines to the batting champions of each league. Then he decided to form a commission and broaden the scope of the award. The commissioners were told to observe all around efficiency and deportment, as well as skill alone.

Under the new plan of award the first players selected were Schulte of the Cubs and Cobb of Detroit. This was in 1911. In 1912 the chosen players were Speaker of the Red Sox and Doyle of the Giants. In 1913 Walter Johnson of Washington and Jake Daubert of Brooklyn were picked. Last season Eddie Collins of the Athletics and Johnny Evers of the Braves won the cars.

The work of the commission is now at an end, but it always has been a pleasant task, and the donor of the cars is entitled to the thanks of baseball.

A comparison of the averages for 1914 and 1913 shows that most of the major league players who jumped to the Federal league last winter or spring improved their hitting in the independent league over the figures earned while with the organized baseball leagues. This is not true of all the players, several of whom entered a slump soon after joining the Federals. The following averages for 1914 as compared with the same player's hitting in the big league in 1913 tell the tale:

ALASKA'S SEAWEED.

Volcanic Eruptions Have a Deadly Effect Upon Kelp Life.

The damage done to seaweed and other forms of marine vegetation is about the last thing that would occur to anybody who had not made a study of the subject as a possible result of a volcanic eruption.

Kelp is one of the most useful forms of seaweed. It used to be found in abundance off various parts of the coast of Alaska, but for several years past the crop has been practically destroyed by volcanic eruptions which have occurred in that vicinity.

This has been a source of great loss to the natives of Alaska, who have made use of kelp in a variety of ways. As it grows only in shallow water, it has proved a valuable aid to navigation in waters where there are practically no aids except such as nature has provided. Then, too, the natives used it to fertilize their gardens.

There are various theories as to just how the action of volcanoes interrupts or entirely stops the growth of kelp. One is that the hot blasts and poisonous gases which pour out of the craters during eruptions are fatal to plant life.

Another more probable explanation of the damage done to kelp is that it is due to the enormous masses of pumice from the volcanoes.

This pumice, it is thought, covers the rocks so that the kelp and other marine plants find it impossible to cling to them, or it may be that it is the grinding effect produced on this great mass of rough stone by the constant movement of the tides and waves which crushes out the water's vegetable life.—New York American.

BRAZIL NUT TREES.

They Do Not Bear Fruit Until They Are Fifty Years Old.

In this country Brazil nuts are almost as well known as walnuts, yet few know the manner of their growth and the steps taken in their collection and marketing. The tree itself is the most majestic in the valley of the Amazon, where it attains a height ranging from fifty to a hundred feet. Generally several hundred trees are found in a group. The control of the best producing districts long ago passed to private individuals; hence the natives are not free to pick and sell the nuts at will.

The Brazil nut tree does not begin to bear fruit until it attains the age of fifty years or thereabouts and continues to produce crops intermittently almost forever. At least trees known to be hundreds of years old have produced crops. The pods in which the nuts are contained drop in November and December.

These pods are very hard and weigh several pounds, consequently the trees are studiously avoided during the period in which the pods are dropping since it would be extremely hazardous for the gatherers to expose themselves to the danger of having the pods fall on them from such a great height. Each pod is at least seven inches in diameter and is full of nuts. The pod is usually opened with a machete.—Argonaut.

Ruskin's Roast Beef.

During a visit to Matlock in 1871 Ruskin was seized with an attack of internal inflammation, which nearly carried him off. Mrs. Arthur Severn, who nursed him, records that at the crisis of this illness "he hungered, to our horror, for a slice of cold roast beef. It was late at night, there was none in the hotel, and Albert Goodwin went off to get some anywhere he could. At last at an eating house in the town he discovered some and came back triumphant with it wrapped in paper. Mr. Ruskin enjoyed his late supper thoroughly. Though we anxiously waited till morning for a result, it had done no harm, and to everybody's surprise he recovered."—London Spectator.

An Observant Boy.

"I wish you boys would be more observant," said a young schoolmaster. "When I was a boy I was always on the lookout, and what I did not see was not worth seeing. I was famous for that. I remember once I was told by a man I met that I was all eyes. What do you suppose he meant by that?"

"Probably he was referring to your conversation," replied one boy, and the other boys looked out of the window as they tried to keep their faces sober.

This shows that ordinary boys have eyes and ears both.—Philippine Education.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray. Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding that a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

PLAINFIELD NEWS.

There is no better way to keep out-of-town friends informed as to Plainfield news than to mail to them from time to time a copy of The Press after you have finished with it, sometimes marking an article of special interest.

Better yet, you might send some one out-of-town a subscription to receive The Daily Press every day at the rate of 10 cents a week or $5.00 a year.

CHAPTER XX.

Four Years Old.

SMOKE wrote the document wherein Wild Water agreed to take every egg delivered to him at $10 per egg, provided that the two dozen advanced to him brought about a reconciliation with Lucille Arral.

Wild Water paused with uplifted pen as he was about to sign. "Hold on," he said. "When I buy eggs I buy good eggs. If I find one bad egg you've got to come back with the $10 I paid for it."

"That's all right," Smoke placated. "It's only fair."

Smoke inserted the word "good" in the contract, and Wild Water sullenly signed, received the trial two dozen in a tin pail, pulled on his mittens and opened the door.

"Goodby, you robbers," he growled back at them and slammed the door.

Smoke was a witness to the play next morning at Slavovitch's. He sat, as Wild Water's guest, at the table adjoining Lucille Arral's. Almost to the letter, as she had forecast it, did the scene come off.

"Haven't you found any eggs yet?" she murmured plaintively to the waiter.

"No, ma'am," came the answer. "They say somebody's cornered every egg in Dawson. Mr. Slavovitch is trying to buy a few just especially for you. But the fellow that's got the corner won't let loose."

It was at this juncture that Wild Water beckoned the proprietor to him, and, with one hand on his shoulder, drew his head down. "Look here, Slavovitch," Wild Water whispered hoarsely, "I turned over a couple of dozen eggs to you last night. Where are they?"

"In the safe, all but that six I have all thawed and ready for you any time you sing out."

"I don't want 'em for myself," Wild Water breathed in a still lower voice. "Shirr 'em up and present 'em to Miss Arral there."

"I'll attend to it personally myself," Slavovitch assured him.

"An' don't forget—compliments of me," Wild Water concluded, relaxing his detaining clutch on the proprietor's shoulder.

Pretty Lucille Arral was gazing forlornly at the strip of breakfast bacon and the tinned mashed potatoes on her plate when Slavovitch placed before her two shirred eggs.

"Compliments of Mr. Wild Water," they at the next table heard him say.

Smoke acknowledged to himself that it was a fine bit of acting—the quick, joyous flash in the face of her, the impulsive turn of the head, the spontaneous forerunner of a smile that was only checked by a superb self control which resolutely drew her face back so that she could say something to the restaurant proprietor.

Smoke felt the kick of Wild Water's moccasined foot under the table.

"Will she eat 'em—that's the question—will she eat 'em?" the latter whispered agonizingly.

And with sidelong glances they saw Lucille Arral hesitate, almost push the dish from her, then surrender to its lure.

"I'll take them eggs," Wild Water said to Smoke. "The contract holds. Did you see her? Did you see her? She almost smiled. I know her. It's all fixed. Two more eggs tomorrow an' she'll forgive an' make up. If she wasn't here I'd shake hands, Smoke, I'm that grateful. You ain't a robber; you're a philanthropist."

Smoke returned jubilantly up the hill to the cabin only to find Shorty in black despair.

"It's all off with the big Swede," he groaned. "The corner's busted. What d'ye think I run into? A geezer with three thousan' eggs—d'ye get me?—three thousan' an' just freighted in from Forty Mile."

"Gautereaux's his name, a whackin' big, blue eyed French Canadian husky. It was our cornerin' eggs that got him started. He knowed about them three thousan' at Forty Mile an' just went an' got 'em. 'Show 'em to me,' I says. An' he did. There was his dog teams an' a couple of Indian drivers restin' down the bank where they'd just pulled in from Forty Mile. An' on the sleds was soap boxes—teeny wooden soap boxes.

"We took one out behind a ice jam in the middle of the river an' busted it open. Eggs—full of 'em, all packed in sawdust. Smoke, you an' me lost. We've been gamblin'. D'ye know what he had the gall to say to me? That they was all ourn at $10 a egg. D'ye know what he was doin' when I left his cabin? Drawin' a sign of eggs for sale. Said he'd give us first choice at ten a throw till 2 p. m., and after that if we didn't come across he'd bust the market higher 'n a kite."

"It's all right," Smoke said cheerfully. "Quick action and team play is all that's needed. I'll get Wild Water here at 2 o'clock to take delivery of eggs. You buy that Gautereaux's eggs. Even if you pay $10 apiece for them, Wild Water will take them off our hands at the same price. If you can get them cheaper—why, we make a profit as well. Have them here by not later than 2 o'clock. Borrow Colonel Bowie's dogs and take our team."

Smoke found Wild Water at the M. & M., and a stormy half hour ensued.

"I warn you we've picked up some more eggs," Smoke said after Wild Water had agreed to bring his dust t the cabin at 2 o'clock and pay on delivery.

"You're luckier at finding eggs than me," Wild Flower admitted. "Now, how many eggs have you got now—an' how much dust do I tote up the hill?"

Smoke consulted his notebook. "As it stands now, according to Shorty's figures, we've 3,962 eggs. Multiply by ten"—

"Forty thousand dollars!" Wild Water bellowed. "You said there was only something like 900 eggs. It's a stick up. I won't stand for it!"

Smoke drew the contract from his pocket and pointed to the pay on delivery. "No mention is made of the number of eggs to be delivered. You agreed to pay $10 for every egg we delivered to you. Well, we've got the eggs, and a signed contract is a signed contract. Honestly, though, Wild Water, we didn't know about those other eggs until afterward. Then we had to buy them in order to make our corner good."

For five long minutes, in choking silence, Wild Water fought a battle with himself, then reluctantly gave in.

"I'm in bad," he said brokenly. "I'll be there at 2 o'clock. But $40,000!"

At 1:30 Shorty arrived with Gautereaux's eggs. "We pretty near double our winnings," Shorty told Smoke as they piled the soap boxes inside the cabin. "I holds 'em down to $8, and after he cussed loco in French he falls for it. Now, that's $2 clear profit to us for each egg."

Promptly at 2 o'clock Shorty, peeping, saw Wild Water coming up the hill. When he entered he was brisk and businesslike.

"Bring on them eggs, you pirates," he commenced. "An' after this day, if you know what's good for you, never mention eggs to me again."

They began on the miscellaneous assortment of the original corner, all three men counting. When 200 had been reached Wild Water suddenly cracked an egg on the edge of the table and opened it deftly with his thumbs.

"Hey, hold on!" Shorty objected.

"It's my egg, ain't it?" Wild Water snarled. "I'm payin' $10 for it, ain't I? But I ain't buyin' no pig in a poke. When I cough up ten bucks an egg I want to know what I'm gettin'."

Wild Water looked and smiled. "That's a good egg. Gimme a pail. I'm goin' to eat it myself for supper."

Thrice again Wild Water cracked good eggs experimentally and put them in the pail beside him.

"Two more than you figured, Shorty," he said at the end of the count. "Nine hundred an' sixty-four, not sixty-two."

"My mistake," Shorty acknowledged handsomely. "We'll throw 'em in for good measure."

"Guess you can afford to," Wild Water accepted grimly. "Pass the batch—$9,620. I'll pay for it now. Write a receipt, Smoke."

Going to his fur coat, from each of the side pockets he drew forth two sacks of dust, so rotund and long that they resembled bologna sausages. When the first batch had been paid for there remained in the gold sacks not more than several hundred dollars.

A soap box was carried to the table, and the count of the $3,000 began. At the end of 100 Wild Water struck an egg sharply against the edge of the table. The resultant sound was like that of the striking of a sphere of solid marble.

"Frozen solid," he remarked.

"Huh!" said Shorty. "It ought to be solid, seein' it has just been freighted up from Forty Mile. It'll take a ax to bust it."

Smoke brought the ax and Wild Water split the egg cleanly in half. The appearance of the egg's interior was anything but satisfactory. Smoke felt a premonitory chill. Shorty was more valiant. He held one of the halves to his nose.

"Smells all right," he said.

"But it looks all wrong," Wild Water contended. "An' how can it smell when the smell's frozen along with the rest of it? Wait a minute."

He put the two halves into a frying pan and placed the latter on the front lid of the hot stove. Then the three men, with distended, questing nostrils, waited in silence. Slowly an unmistakable odor began to drift through the room.

"Throw it out!" Smoke cried, gasping.

"What's the good?" asked Wild Water. "We've got to sample the rest."

"Not in this cabin." Smoke coughed and conquered a qualm. "Chop them open, and we can test by looking at them. Throw it out, Shorty! Throw it out! And leave the door open!"

Box after box was opened; egg after egg, chosen at random, was chopped in two, and every egg carried the same message of hopeless, irremediable decay.

"I won't ask you to eat 'em, Shorty," Wild Water jeered, "an', if you don't mind, I can't get outa here too quick. My contract called for good eggs. If you'll loan me a sled an' team I'll haul them good ones away before they get contaminated."

Smoke helped in loading the sled.

"Say, how long you been holdin' that corner?" was Wild Water's parting gibe.

Smoke made no reply, and, with one glance at his partner, proceeded to fling the soap boxes out into the snow.

"Say, Shorty, how much did you say you paid for that three thousand?" Smoke queried gently.

"Eight dollars. Don't talk to me. I can figger as well as you. We lose seventeen thousan' on the flutter, if anybody should ride up on a dog sled an' ask you. I figgered that out while waitin' for the first egg to smell."

Smoke pondered a few minutes, then again broke silence. "Say, Shorty, $40,000 gold weighs 200 pounds. Wild Water borrowed our sled and team to haul away his eggs. He came up the hill without a sled. Those two sacks of dust in his coat pockets weighed about twenty pounds each. The understanding was cash on delivery. He brought enough dust to pay for the good eggs. He never expected to pay for those three thousand. He knew they were bad. Now, how did he know they were bad? What do you make of it anyway?"

"Huh! That ain't nothin'. A child could answer it. We lose seventeen thousan'. Wild Water wins seventeen thousan'. Them eggs of Gautereaux's was Wild Water's all the time. Anything else you're curious to know?"

"Yes. Why in the name of common sense didn't you find out whether those eggs were good before you paid for them?"

"Just as easy as the first question. Wild Water swung the bunko game timed to seconds. I hadn't no time to examine them eggs. I had to hustle to get 'em here for delivery. An' now, Smoke, lemme ask you one civil question. What did you say was the party's name that put this egg corner idea into your head?"

Smoke was casting about to begin the preparation for supper when Colonel Bowie knocked at the door, handed Smoke a letter and went on to his own cabin.

"Did you see his face?" Shorty raved. "He was almost bustin' to keep it straight. It's the big ha-ha for you an' me, Smoke. We won't never dast show our faces again in Dawson."

The letter was from Wild Water, and Smoke read it aloud:

"Dear Smoke and Shorty—I write to ask, with compliments of the season, your presence at a supper tonight at Slavovitch's joint. Miss Arral will be there and so will Gautereaux. Him and me was pardners down at Circle five years ago. He is all right and is going to be best man. About them eggs. They come into the country four years back. They was all bad when they come in. They was bad when they left California. They always was bad. They stopped at Carluk one winter, and one winter at Nutlik, and last winter at Forty Mile, where they was sold for storage. And this winter I guess they stop at Dawson. Don't keep them in a hot room. Lucille says to say you and her and me has sure made some excitement in Dawson. And I say the drinks is on you, and that goes.

"Respectfully your friend, W. W."

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Jefferson City, Mo.—The knotty question of the minimum wage for women is just now engaging Missouri legislators. The Missouri Wage Commission estimates 60,000 as the number of women workers, exclusive of servants, in the State, 10,000 of these living away from home. According to the Commission, it costs $8.53 a week to live in St. Louis, $8.50 in Kansas City and $8 in St. Joseph. Thousands of women are receiving only $4.50 and $5 a week. The investigation revealed the startling fact that some had never been to a park or theatre in their lives. Many employers are showing a sympathetic interest and are co-operating in the efforts being made for women workers.

Cleveland, O.—For the sake of his bride-elect, Miss Dorothy Rudd, of this city, Harry D. Sims is to resign as private secretary to John D. Rockefeller and become a grocery clerk in her father's store. Miss Rudd is a niece of the oil magnate.

Louisville, Ky.—One of the few American women at the front in the European war just now is Lady Ross, wife of Sir Charles Ross, of Quebec, formerly Miss Patty Ellison, of this city, and very popular in local society prior to her marriage to Sir Charles eight years ago. Lady Ross is providing four motor ambulances and a motor kitchen, as well as orderlies and a physician, to the cause of the allies, and giving besides her personal supervision to the outfit.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Minneapolis school teachers will be asked to join a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The idea of the federation is to take in all teachers and workers in other lines not affiliated with any specific union, and to organize them into a body to be called the Federal Union, which will give them a chance to ally themselves with the general labor movement. The project has already been launched in Chicago and Cleveland.

Princeton, Ind.—Mrs. Ella Bird, of Francisco, is one of the rare women mining experts in the country. Following the death of her husband, who owned the Francisco mine, Mrs. Bird continued to operate it. When the State law created a county mining inspection board to pass on the qualification of miners for their work, she was made a member of the Gibson county Commissioners and has since served with distinction, recently receiving a re-appointment.

Boston, Mass.—American women interested in the development of women of the Orient will learn with interest that a college for women is to be opened in Madras, India, in July. Miss Eleanor MacDougal, M. A., president-elect of the college, who has taken academic honors in England and Germany, is spending some weeks in America studying women's colleges, and is at present investigating methods of Radcliffe, Wellesley Simmons and other New England colleges for women.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mrs. Wong Sun Yue, formerly Miss Clemmon and a sister of Mrs. Howard Gould cherishes the ambition of making the Celestials better known and appreciated by the American people. Her husband is a prominent San Francisco merchant. She dresses in Chinese garb and her home is an exact copy of a luxurious Chinese dwelling, filled with Oriental art objects. She declares that guides show only the morbid side of Chinatown, while there is in reality an immense amount of progress going on there.

LITERARY

In the February American Magazine appears a remarkable article by Cleveland Moffett, telling the story of a wonderful young American who persuaded the Pope to appear in motion pictures. He spent eighteen months at the job, and displayed uncanny shrewdness, ingenuity and determination. The story of how he overcome the obstacles that appeared before him is not only highly entertaining, but genuinely inspiring.

In the same number Ida M. Tarbell goes on with her new series of business articles entitled "The Golden Rule in Business." This month she writes about wages, and illustrates her points with the inside stories of many interesting businesses. Will Irwin, special war correspondent for The American Magazine, contributes a news article about England. Stewart Edward White, writing under the title, "Four Lions at Once," describes a personal experience he had hunting lions in South Africa that is both thrilling an instructive.

Fiction is contributed by David Grayson, Maravene Thompson, Harry C. Carr and Thomas Crawford Galbreath. George Fitch writes another piece about life in a small town, entitled "Homeburg's Worst Enemy," in which he shows how the cities take the young people away from the small places, and James Montgomery Flagg contributes an amusing piece in words and pictures entitled "The High Cost of Friends."

The Interesting People department contains five short illustrated articles, and the Interpreter's House contains an open letter to the Czar of Russia, which is both amusing and pointed. The prize-winning letters in two contests—"What is America's Greatest Asset?" and "What Our Country Will Gain from This War," complete a lively and important number.

GRAY-BLUE TULLE.

A very girlish evening frock is this, consisting mainly of ruffles which form back of blouse and skirt. One of these ruffles is adjusted in bertha effect about the corsage line and caught low with artificial roses which are draped in garland effect from thence to the back of the skirt where they are held by a huge bow of pink satin ribbon. This bow is the termination of a sash which is draped about the skirt. The latter consists of three ruffles of tulle finished as was the bertha with narrow gilt passementerie.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Does Mr. Lippincott really mean that the sovereign State of New Jersey is powerless to jail a drunken autoist for three months? It is incredible that the "influence" of a man fortunate enough to possess a touring car should be manifest to the extent that an auto driver, sodden with drink, a peril to the life and limb of all pedestrians and a terrible menace to other vehicular traffic, must be treated like the dog of the adage—entitled to one bite.

As the motor vehicle commissioner truly says, however, it has been difficult to get convictions for this particular offense, through the reluctance of magistrates to invoke the statute that makes a jail penalty mandatory. But in the same breath he weakens his case by saying that this law is vague, owing to the enactment of amendments without specific repealers.

The remedy is not a fine, even of $200, for a first offense, but to clear away the underbrush of statute that seemingly conflicts with the mandatory imprisonment, and then to hold the magistrates up to their sworn duty, backed by powerful public sentiment and the ability of the department to prefer against them charges of misdemeanor in office. To the type of man who gets drunk and goes careening around for the first offense is no deterrment. Like the unmuzzled dog—he'll take his first bite!

The commissioner's contention however, that in the open country the speed limit might properly be increased from twenty-five to thirty miles an hour does not appear unreasonable, as the autoist has ample time to slow down when meeting or passing other vehicles. Similarly in less congested urban or suburban districts a speed of fifteen miles, as against the present twelve, does not seem excessive. There should be reason in all things, and in none more than the regulation of automobile traffic. Fairminded men—and they predominate among the drivers of autos—are only too glad to comply with fair restrictions for the public weal; but vexed and harassed by arbitrary hedgings about, they are sometimes almost taunted against their better judgment into temporary violations of the speed limit.

In urging the adoption of uniform Statewide traffic regulations and the abolition of local ordinances, Mr. Lippincott is on firm ground. Differences in local methods of handling traffic have caused many needless and frequently unjust arrests. Some of the other recommendations in the annual report of the commissioner are equally as sound as this. —Newark Evening News.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

Mother McGrew and Philander Peacock

Philander Peacock was a pompous young bird
(You'd better have someone explain that long word).
He was pleasant enough, but it must be allowed
That Philander Peacock was terribly proud.

Wherever he went he would show without fail
The feathers he had in his beautiful tail.
And the more 'twas admired, the prouder he got,
So that Mother McGrew had to scold him a lot.

She said, "Now, Philander, your tail's very nice,
But if you're a wise bird you'll take my advice.
Don't give yourself airs, for you'll find if you do
That no one will like you," said Mother McGrew.

But Philander Peacock was a silly young bird,
So he never so much as let on that he heard,
But strutted away and said to the Owl:
"Aren't you sorry you're such a plain-looking fowl?"

Then Mother McGrew said, "I'll give you a shock
That will teach you some sense, young Philander Peacock!"
And when she had said this she reached out real quick
And gave him a touch with her magical stick.

Philander was frightened and started to talk,
But discovered his voice had been turned to a squawk.
The ugliest sound that he ever had heard
Came out of the throat of that pompous young bird.

The next time you're walking and meet a peacock,
I want you to notice his horrible squawk,
And tell him for me that he needn't complain,
It serves him just right for being so vain.

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Oh, Dick," called Nell, too full of her good news to wait for him to get in the house. "Here's a letter from Aunt Ellen, who lives near Fairhaven, and she wants us to come over and visit her for a wedding trip. They have a lovely farm home and it would be a real rest after the excitement. What do you think?"

"We'll go," agreed Dick enthusiastically.

"I'll write to her then and tell her to expect us Friday morning. Can you go out to the cottage this afternoon to help hang the curtains?"

Richard nodded gaily.

"All right, I have the bundle all ready and we'll get my wraps on at once.

* * * * *

"Let's hide their suit cases," suggested Jack Farnsby, Dick's roommate, who was to be best man at the wedding.

"I don't know about that; we mgiht make them miss the boat, and as Nell's aunt has to make a trip from the country to meet them that would be carrying a joke too far. Besides, Nell does not enjoy joking," said Olive Dunn.

"So far as Nell goes, she will have to get used to jokes if she lives with Dick with any comfort. He is full of them. We can produce the suit cases in time to catch the boat, after we have kept them hunting awhile. Now the whole bunch must be on the pier, so that when they come down late to get on the boat there will be enough rice and old shoes to announce that it is a bridal couple to all on board," and Jack hurried away.

A dozen of them were waiting anxiously on the landing that evening and only a few minutes remained before leaving time.

"I am afraid they are not coming in time. There goes the whistle and they are taking up the gangplank," exclaimed Olive in dismay.

Just as the boat moved away from its pier a taxi drove up and four people sprang out and raced for the wharf. It was too late. The water was churned to a suds by the wheels.

"Want to get that boat?" called a man standing near.

"I'll give you a fiver if you put 'em aboard," whispered Jack in his ear.

"Come with me," he called.

In a flash they were running down the pier, stumbling over boards and ropes in the dim light. At last they came to a tug moored at the end of the long wooden structure and literally fell aboard. He put on all possible steam and signalled the lake boat to stop. It was overtaken at the mouth of the river and as the tug came alongside the rail was packed with passengers.

As Dick and Nell were helped aboard the rice and old shoes were pressed into service, and everyone knew that a bridal couple was approaching.

The passengers lined up on deck and poor Nell, who had been so anxious that no one should suspect that it was their wedding journey, was taken down the long line in this impromptu reception and introduced as Mrs. Morton. She stood the ordeal well and everybody was in love with the pretty bride.

It was a great relief, however, to climb into the comfortable carriage behind Uncle William and know that there would be no more teasing or annoyance for two long weeks.

(Note—The further adventures of Nell and Dick will be related from time to time in subsequent issues.)

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

Precaution Against Blood Poisoning—Physicians tell us that cases of blood poisoning are becoming more numerous because of carelessness in using needles in opening eruptions of various kinds. Before use, hold needle in a flame for a second, then thrust it into a piece of antiseptic cotton which has had one or two drops of carbolic acid poured on it. Do not touch the point of the needle before using.

When Baking Loaf Cake or fruit cake that takes one hour or more, try placing one pan into another pan of the same size and see how nice and brown it is. There is space enough between the two pans to keep it from burning.

CLOTHING ON CREDIT AT CASH PRICES
$1 WEEKLY TO ALL

An Absence

of the usual unpleasant features of credit-giving concerns is a noticeable feature of our store.

Rude questions, impertinent investigation and all the rest of the annoying experiences one meets with elsewhere are not a part of our policy.

We find that politeness pays—that good treatment is appreciated.

CLOTHING, SHOES, HATS

J. A. LAURIE & CO.
304 West Front Street.

A SLAVE TO CUSTOM

It is the most natural thing in the world for a man of property to name his friend or a business associate executor of his will and even trustee of his estate. This has been done for generations, in the absence of better facilities. The habit still continues after the need for it has completely disappeared.

TRUST COMPANY SERVICE IS MUCH MORE EFFICIENT

This company has specialized experience and ability which fit it to handle all phases of trusteeship in an economical way. It is familiar with investments; is equipped to handle real estate; to wind up a business; to collect and remit income. No individual could be expected to render as highly specialized a service, and no individual can be depended upon to serve. He may die, move away, become overburdened with cares of his own. This company is a permanent organization of trained men, always accessible, unaffected by the hazards of individual life.

Since nearly three-quarters of your life is spent in your shoes—why not get all the comfort out of them that science provides. If you suffer from broken down arches, pains in the ankles or legs, or "foot rheumatism" you need a pair of

"RESTO" Comfort Shoes

Their especial features are:

1. A flexible shank which exercises and re-sets misplaced foot muscles without the use of stiff metal arch supports.

2. A Broad Heel, to support the weight of the body and re-set misplaced arch bones.

ANNUAL REPORTS FOR C. O. S. WORK

Encouraging Resume of Activities Conducted During the Year 1914.

$5,000 WAS EXPENDED

Favorable Comparison With the Work Done the Year Previous—Nursing Bureau Also Makes Report—Advertising Lauded.

An unusually gratifying resume of the work accomplished by the local Charity Organization Society is given in the eighth annual report, recently published. Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, the executive secretary, who has maintained a close affiliation with all of the organization's activities, has compiled an exhaustive report presenting numerous statistics and facts of the routine work. During 1913-14 a decided increase in the bulk of business was noted, the number of families dealt with having increased from 444 to 706 and 1,200 more calls from applicants. On the other hand there have been 200 fewer consultatives; but 600 more visits have been made and the amount of mail matter from the office has about doubled.

The society has given or found employment for 133 persons against seventy last year, and 100 persons were placed in institutions, as against eighty-one in 1913. It cost the society $5,000 to supply shelter, food and clothing for an average of sixty families a month last year, this money being raised from various sources and $2,000 coming from outside of the society. Doctors' treatment, in office or clinic, has been secured for 110 persons, eighteen fewer than last year, and the Nursing Bureau has aided in thirty-five cases. The local society has investigated forty-four cases for societies in other cities and in ten months 200 cases from Muhlenberg Hospital have been referred to this organization for investigation.

Tuberculosis alone cost the society $1,100 in 1914. A fund of $5,000 must be secured for relief work next year and in the report Miss Phillips states that unless this amount is dispensed and followed up by trained service it will not pay for one-tenth of the need.

The legal committee cites three types of cases that have come under its observation and comments on the loss of two of its active members, the Rev. McCoy and the Rev. Ward, the former having accepted a new charge and the latter having died.

The treasurer of the relief committee has reported that a total of $4,763 was expended for material aid covering a variety of items, from medical supplies, board and rent, to provisions and coal. Of this amount $2,940 was contributed for special classes. The appeal through the local papers at Christmas time brought $467. A tuberculosis survey, entailing an expenditure of $268.70, made by Miss Udetta D. Brown, was reported by the housing and sanitation committee. One hundred new members have been added to the society during the year.

Part of the printing committee's report follows:

"Just before Christmas, 1913, a series of articles was written appealing for funds for four special cases. One of these appeared each day for about ten days in the 'Daily Press,' and 100 marked copies of the first issue were mailed to a selected list. The sum realized from this small campaign was about $400, which would seem an evidence of the value of the 'Daily Press' as an advertising medium. The committee deeply appreciates their interest and help in this matter. Several small contributions came from new names."

Receipts totalling $8,363.42 have been turned over to J. Albert Lane, the treasurer, during the year, and disbursements aggregating $8,861.72 were reported. This leaves a deficit of $498.30.

Miss Elsie Burke, the secretary of the Nursing Bureau, reports that the disbursements during 1914 totaled $3,133.58, and the city has been reimbursed exactly $33 for the care of city patients. Four nurses have been employed in the work, the chief nurse and her assistant, the school nurse and the anti-tuberculosis nurse. The milk station was kept open for three months during the past summer and was patronized by twenty-nine babies. Miss Helen Lovell, treasurer of the Nursing Bureau, reports disbursements of $3,133.58, receipts of $3,162.96, and a balance of $29.38.

PLEADED NON-VULT.

Elizabeth, Jan. 29.—Carman Ritzo, of Plainfield, pleaded non-vult in the Court of Quarter Sessions yesterday afternoon to serious charges on which he was indicted by the October grand jury. He will not be sentenced until February 11, so that an investigation of his mental condition may be made.

INSTALLATION OF ARCANUM OFFICERS

Deputy Grand Regent and Staff Visit Plainfield Council.

The new officers of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, were installed into office last night by Deputy Grand Regent D. H. Stults, of South Orange Council, and Grand Guide Swenarton, of Unique Council, of Jersey City. The meeting was well attended and considerable important business was transacted.

The officers are: E. A. Marsh, past regent; R. A. Pruden, regent, L. C. Smith, Jr., orator; L. V. P. Wilson, secretary; E. T. Van Winkle, collector; Daniel W. Littell, treasurer; Thomas B. Titsworth, chaplain; Abram Devine, warden, and E. LeR. Pruden, sentry.

The members of the council were grieved to learn of the death of Robert H. Alberts, of Hoboken, who has been grand secretary of the Royal Arcanum of the State for the past twenty-five years. He died yesterday at his home. Regent Pruden appointed a committee of three, E. T. Van Winkle, L. V. P. Wilson and D. W. Littell, to attend the funeral, which will be held Monday morning. The secretary was authorized to send under seal of the council a letter of condolence to the widow of the deceased officer.

The members enjoyed a banquet following the installation. Addresses were made by Grand Guide Swenarton, who complimented the council upon the good work which has been accomplished during the past year, and by D. H. Stults, who spoke on the welfare of the order.

Orator Smith announced that at the next meeting of the council, February 11, a special program will be provided for the entertainment of the members. He urged all to be present.

FIND A FAKE NOTE FROM G. B. CLADEK

Rahway, Jan. 28.—A bottle was picked up yesterday by George Nagel, of 20 Lewis street, in the Rahway River, near East Hazelwood and Leesville avenues, containing what was supposed to be a note from School Commissioner George B. Cladek, who more than a month ago left on a hunting trip and has not been heard from since. The note was as follows:

"I have gone to Bermuda on the Bermudian to open a livery stable.

"GEORGE B. CLADEK."

Mrs. Cladek said the note was not in Mr. Cladek's handwriting.

The throwing of the bottle in the river is supposed to be the work of some practical joker.

J. O. OSGOOD, JR., WEDS MISS JENIPHER BURGESS

Miss Jenipher Davies Burgess, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas N. Burgess, of Hazelton, Pa., and Joseph Otis Osgood, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O. Osgood, of North Plainfield, were married on Saturday in the Methodist church, Hazelton, by the pastor, Rev. James E. Skillington. There were no attendants, and the ceremony was witnessed by only the immediate relatives.

The affair was a quiet one owing to a recent death in the bride's family. Mr. and Mrs. Osgood are now enjoying a honeymoon, and upon their return will reside in the Netherwood section, where the bridegroom is building a home. Mr. Osgood is conected with the Review of Reviews Company, of New York. His father is the chief engineer for the New Jersey Central.

ENJOYED STRAWRIDE.

The members of the Non-Quit Club, of this city, enjoyed a strawride party to Westfield last night, and upon their arrival had a "feed." There were twenty-two in the party, and on the return trip a stop was made at the home of Miss Curtis, of Scotch Plains, where refreshments were served and a general good time was held.

SAYS SHIP PURCHASE BILL WILL BE PASSED

President's "Scotch Stubbornness" Will Force It Says Miss Janet Richards.

That the ship purchase bill now before Congress will be passed was the assertion made yesterday afternoon by Miss Janet Richards, in her talk on current topics given before a large number of Plainfield women assembled in Hartridge Auditorium. Miss Richards spent much of her time discussing this bill, and based her statement regarding its passage upon the fact that President Wilson's "Scotch stubbornness," which has aided him so much in the past, will play an important part when the matter comes to a test. Miss Richards said that if the President does not succeed in forcing the bill through at the regular session of Congress, he will undoubtedly call a special session to consider it.

In the course of her remarks, Miss

PRESENTATION WAS FEATURE OF DANCE

Thursday Night Club Give Pleasing Affair at Columbus Club.

Under the auspices of the Thursday Night Club an enjoyable dance was given at Columbus Auditorium last night. There were about 175 members and guests, and dancing was the feature until a late hour. Excellent music was furnished by Paroubek's orchestra of four pieces, the program being a popular one.

One of the features was the presentation of a handsome silver loving cup to F. T. Dickerson. The presentation was made by W. H. Armstrong on behalf of the club, it being in the nature of a birthday gift as well as in appreciation of Mr. Dickerson's work for the social organization. Mr. Dickerson's birthday anniversary occurred yesterday. He made an appropriate response.

During the evening there was a grand march and all present were given favors in the form of caps, which furnished much amusement. The committee in charge of the affair comprised F. T. Dickerson, W. H. Armstrong and H. W. Rush.

HOLY CROSS PLAYERS ENJOYED A BANQUET

Guests of "Clif" Smith at His Home in Dunellen Last Night.

W. C. Smith, of Dunellen, was the host of the members of the Holy Cross Football Club last night, and the thirteen present enjoyed a good time. Mrs. Smith served a chicken dinner, after which a business meeting was held. The home was attractively decorated in the club colors, red and white.

Because of the small attendance, nothing definite was done at the meeting, although many points were discussed. The financial deficit caused by the poor season was discussed, and it was decided to put a team on the field next year. After the meeting a general good time was indulged in, singing and card playing featuring. Toasts were given to the host and the manager and assistants of the eleven.

Those who were present were Norman Ammermann, John Doyle, Andrew Stiglitz, Walter Cummings, Joe Green, Louis Harding, George Webster, Kenneth Mair, Bob Hamilton, Bill Coyle, Harold Sharkey, Joe Carty and Cliff Smith.

SPEAKERS FOR BANQUET.

Dr. William L. Saunders and Judge Isaac P. Runyon will be among several speakers at the first annual dinner to be given by Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World, to be given at The Kandy Shope on East Front street, Friday evening, February 12.

ASSESSMENT IS ILLEGAL HE SAYS

Fred Endress Through G. W. V. Moy Starts Suit Against City.

FOR STREET WIDENING

Objects to Being Assessed $2,039 in Excess of Damages for Improving Madison Avenue—Action Will Delay Improvement.

Former Councilman Fred Endress, through his counsel, G. W. V. Moy, today filed papers in the Supreme Court, Trenton, in a suit to set aside an assessment levied on him for the widening of Madison avenue. In his declaration Mr. Endress says that his assessment for benefits in excess of damages is $2,039, and claims that it is unjust and illegal. Justice Bergen allowed a writ of certiorari to review the assessment proceedings.

This latest action on the part of Mr. Endress will serve to still further delay the proposed improvement of widening Madison avenue, between Front street and the railroad. The report of the commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages recently completed their report, and in December the Common Council confirmed the report after amending it to the extent of increasing the allowance for damages to the estate of Samuel Dreier. Up to that time the estate was the principal objector to the improvement because of the alleged heavy damages which would result to its property at West Front street and Madison avenue. There were a few other minor objections on the part of some of the small property owners. These differences, it was believed, had been adjusted, so that nothing remained to further delay the work.

The commissioners, in making their assessments, included property on West Second street, a distance of nearly a block on either side of Madison avenue, and the same on West Front street, the First M. E. church, as well as Trinity Reformed church, being assessed for benefits, but no public protest has been heard on this account. The Common Council evidently thought that everything was about ready to widen Madison avenue, and was preparing to start the work. The suit started today by Mr. Endress may delay the improvement for some time.

The commissioners, in making their assessments, allowed Mr. Endress $7,442.75 as damages, and then assessed him $9,482.25 for benefits. According to the plans for the widening Mr. Endress would lose eight feet six inches for a distance of 227 feet, which will narrow the sidewalk considerably in front of his property on Madison avenue, and he believes that the assessment is not only unjust, but illegal.

WEATHER WISEACRES SAY COLD SNAP WILL REMAIN

Although several hours overdue the cold wave promised by the weather seers arrived here late last night, and the city was gripped by a penetrating blast of freezing weather. The mercury hovered around the twenty mark all night, and the lowest temperature recorded was fifteen degrees at 7 o'clock this morning. It was only a little warmer at noon, and indications point to another drop later this afternoon.

The wiseacres tell us the general cold wave which is prevalent over the entire northeastern part of the country will continue tomorrow, when the mercury may drop to the zero mark.

—Is there anything that appeals to you more on these cold mornings than a breakfast in which Smalley's famous sausage plays an important part? We are continuing to make it in quantities large enough to supply all our Plainfield customers, although at times we are not able to supply the out of town demand. The fame of this sausage has created a demand for it in Washington, New York, Philadelphia and other cities, but our Plainfield patrons come first. We are also making much of our own special rendering of lard, and are able to provide our patrons with strictly fresh eggs from the nearby country. Guinea hens are attractive in the poultry line just now, and we also can offer the usual splendid line of choice cuts of all kind of meat. TURKEY SUPPER AT TRINITY A SUCCESS

Annual Affair is Given by the Ladies' Christian Work Society.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, the annual turkey supper was given in the Sunday-school rooms of the church last night. The affair was generously patronized, there being a total of 271 suppers served during the evening. There were eight tables with a corps of young women in attendance at each one.

During the evening the Dutch Arms orchestra gave a popular program which added to the enjoyment of the occasion. Mrs. Edward T. Van Winkle is the general chairman of the supper and she is being assisted by a large committee. The supper will be continued tonight. The committees are as follows:

INTERESTING TALK IN P. H. S. AUDITORIUM

Arthur K. Peck Gave Account of the Heroes of the Great Northwest.

An audience that comfortably filled the auditorium in the Plainfield High School listened last night, to an unusually interesting lecture on the coast guard service of the United States, given by Arthur K. Peck. This was the sixth of the free entertainments which the Board of Education is offering to the public this winter, and proved well up to the high standard of excellence which the public has learned to expect from this lecture course.

The lecturer told in a graphic and interesting way something of the difficulties and dangers endured by the men who watch the dangerous points on our coast-line and brought vividly before the audience the dangers of the winter sea, against which the coast service so constantly battles.

The stereopticon views with which the lecture was illustrated were unusually well selected, and included some remarkable pictures of the Atlantic fleet during any storm at sea.

RACE WARMING UP FOR DUNELLEN PLUM

Two Have Cast Their Hats Into the Ring for the Postmastership.

The term of Henry S. Garretson as postmaster of Dunellen is nearing completion and already numerous candidates are appearing from the Democratic ranks. The two most prominently mentioned are Charles E. Tinsman and G. Sumner Smith, both of whom have considerable influential backing. It is quite possible one of the two will be recommended by Congressman Scully, although, as in the recent and well remembered Plainfield contest, a couple of dark horses are clamping their bits in the background.

Tinsman and Smith have both been steadfast workers in the Democratic ranks of the borough and their friends are doing their best to land the plums for them.

The Dunellen office is one of the best of its class in the State, much of its progressiveness being due to the efforts of Mr. Garretson, who has made an excellent official in every way. He succeeded the late Dr. Peter W. Brakeley and beside securing increased mail facilities for the citizens, placed the office in a modern and convenient location.

TAXI DRIVER HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

George Gaskill, Accident Victim, Dies in Muhlenberg Hospital of Hurts.

After lingering in a state of semi-consciousness for five days George Gaskill, of Dunellen, died in Muhlenberg Hospital this morning. Gaskill was hit by an automobile driven by John Currin and owned by Harry Huff, at Park avenue and West Sixth street, Saturday night.

Currin, who has been at liberty under $200 bail pending the result of the victim's injuries, was rearrested this morning and pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter when arraigned before Judge De Meza. The city magistrate had no power to receive bail for this offense, and he remanded Currin to the Union county jail to await the action of the grand jury. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., counsel for Currin, went to Elizabeth this afternoon and will appear before Judge Connolly to ask that bail be fixed at once. A bondsman has already been secured, and it is probable that he will be released by nightfall.

Gaskill was hit during a heavy fog Saturday night and sustained a fractured skull and other hurts. Witnesses say that the mishap was of an unavoidable nature, and hold Currin blameless. Nevertheless, the usual formalities provided by the law in such cases will have to be gone through, and Currin will have to answer the manslaughter charge. The accused man is known to be a careful driver, and when arraigned this morning he was in an extremely nervous state.

The victim leaves a wife and four children living in this city. He was a tailor by trade, but recently had been unable to get this work and had been doing odd jobs of various natures. He was well known here.

The body was removed from the hospital to Cole's undertaking parlors at the direction of County Physician Westcott, but later taken to J. J. and C. A. Higgins' parlors on West Fourth street at the request of the family.

PENNILESS MAN ARRESTED FOR STEALING TWO PAPERS

Thomas Peterson, 432 East Fourth street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, charged by Patrolman Tobias Nolan with stealing two New York papers from the newsstand of Frank Wagner on North avenue at 7 o'clock this morning. The man proved to the court that he was penniless but yearned to read the news of the day and had stolen the papers solely for the purpose of reading them. He was allowed to go on a suspended sentence.

While being brought to headquarters Peterson slipped away from Patrolman Nolan in the railroad station tunnel and gave the officer a merry chase down the Central Railroad tracks.

LABORER REFUSED WORK, THEN HE BEAT FOREMAN

John Ferris, of 633 South Second street, a foreman employed at the Potter Printing Press shop in this city, appeared at police headquarters this morning, with his head covered with bandages. He said that Thomas Dominic, of 963 West Third street, a laborer, had applied to him for work and being told that there was none to be had, became abusive. An argument developed and Ferris alleges that Dominic pulled a hickory stick from underneath his clothes and started to use it vigorously on Ferris' head.

Owing to the fact that the stick was not a heavy one and the interference of other employes, Ferris was not seriously injured, although he sustained cuts and bruises that necessitated medical attention from City Physician Norman W. Currie. Dominic made his get-away during the excitement and it is thought that he fled to Philadelphia. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

MRS. ELIZA BAMFORTH.

Joseph H. Bamforth, of this city, received a cablegram yesterday informing him of the death of his mother, Mrs. Eliza Bamforth, at her home in Dorsetshire, England, in her sixty-fourth year. Beside a husband, two other sons, William and Fred Bamforth, also of England, survives. Mr. Bamforth is foreman of the Trembath Press and is president of the local Typographical Union.

RUSSIAN ARMIES ADVANCE IN WEST

Destroy Railroad Station at Pogegen and Make Gains at Dukla Pass.

ARTILLERY FIRE HOT

French Statement Says That Violent Combats Have Occurred at Ypres and Germans Lost Heavily at Fontaine Madame Wednesday Night.

Petrograd, Jan. 29.—The general staff of the Russian army today issued a report on the progress of the fighting as follows:

"In the country to the north of Tilsit, East Prussia, Russian detachments January 25 took the offensive and drove back the Germans, destroying the railroad station at Pogegen, a few miles north of Tilsit.

"The fighting in the forested country to the north of Pilkalen and Gumbinnen continues, and in certain places we are making progress. Along the rest of the front in East Prussia January 27 passed quietly except in the country to the northeast of Darkehmen.

"Here the Germans attacked our positions, but they were driven back to their trenches.

"On the right bank of the lower Vistula encounters continue between our advance guards and those of the enemy. On the left bank of the Vistula, in the vicinity of Borjimow, Russian troops, aided by sappers, delivered an attack the night of January 27 on the trenches of the enemy, after having the afternoon of that day successfully counter mined these trenches. In this same locality the Germans assumed offensive operations, but without success.

"The artillery duel along the left bank of the Vistula continued January 27. Our efficient shell fire against the position of the enemy silenced several of his batteries and inflicted heavy losses on the Germans in their trenches. This was particularly the case near the village of Jidomitze, where we saw German soldiers carrying numerous dead and wounded from their trenches.

"Galicia.—Along the Carpathian front, from Dukla pass to the railroad running between Stry and Mounkatch, we were engaged January 26 and January 27 with successful results."

A despatch from Tiflis states that numerous Greek villages around Kars in the Caucusus have been destroyed by Turks.

Paris, Jan. 29.—The French War Office gave out the following statement today:

"The day of January 28 was marked only by local actions which were favorable to us. In Belgium in the region of Nieuport our infantry gained a foothold in the Great Dune, to which there was a reference in the communique of January 17. A German flying machine was destroyed by our cannon.

"In the sectors of Ypres, Lens and Arras there were artillery combats, very violent at times, and some infantry attacks were started, but these were rolled back by our fire. In the sectors of Soissons, Craonne and Rheims there is nothing to report.

"Between the Rheims and Argonne there were artillery combats of no great intensity. It is now known that the attack repulsed by us at Fontaine Madame on night of January 27-28 caused great loss to the Germans.

"On the heights of the Meuse and in the Woevre region the day was calm. In the Vosges there were artillery combats. Our guns at many points silenced the fire of the German mitrailleuses. We fortified at all points our positions on the ground taken January 27."

London, Jan. 29.—A battle of extreme violence is raging between La Bassee and Bethune. The Germans are striving to cut the Allies' communications and at the same time penetrate their line in the region of Gheinvelt and Passachendael, and by rushing reinforcements through, capture Ypres.

This revival of desperate fighting synchronizes with a spell of very cold but dry weather, which has made the ground firmer every day this week, lending increased mobility to both infantry and artillery and filling the men with more of the exhiliration of hand-to-hand fighting.

After establishing their positions, the British broke fresh ground, and part of a regiment in the forward movement had to go across a level space. On their right was what appeared to be a deserted haystack, but as they came in line with the stack, a deadly Maxim fire was poured from it.

The haystack and its occupants immediately became a target for the watching British artillery, but the infantry nevertheless suffered severe-

Mr. Churchill was much better last evening.

MISS EDNA DE HART ENGAGED.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeHart, of New Brunswick, former residents of the borough, announce the engagement of their daughter, Edna S. DeHart, to Sandford R. Snyder, of Bound Brook. There has been no date set for the wedding as yet.

Attractive placards have been placed about town advertising the turkey supper to be held in the chapel of the Presbyterian church on the evening of Lincoln's Birthday, under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the church.

Mary Tallamy, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Tallamy, of North avenue, was taken ill with pneumonia yesterday.

While the condition of J. Newton Apgar showed no improvement throughout the night, he was holding the ground that he has gained in the past two days.

BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY.

Miss Katherine Maier, daughter of Joseph Maier, of North avenue, celebrated her fifteenth birthday yesterday. The young lady entertained her cousins, Agnes and Margaret Ronayne, at supper and in the evening the party attended the theatre at Plainfield.

BITTEN BY A DOG.

Daniel Grantz, of Dunellen avenue, was bitten severely yesterday afternoon, while endeavoring to stop a dog fight on North avenue. The animals were having it out hammer and tongs in front of Schenck's grocery store and Grantz grabbed hold of one of the animals, whereupon the other animal turned upon him, sinking its teeth into one of his thumbs and almost tearing the end of the member off. Wrapping a handkerchief around it Grantz hurried around to the office of Dr. Cooley, where several stitches were taken. The two animals are tied up and under observation.

POSTPONE THE FAIR.

The monthly meeting of Defender Fire Company was held in the Borough Hall, last evening. Out of respect to Chief J. Newton Apgar, who is ill, the fair, which was to have been held sometime during the month of March, has been indefinitely postponed. A motion made to send Chief Apgar a handsome bouquet of flowers was seconded and unanimously carried. Additional business other than routine was the election of Clarence T. Voorhees as a member of the company.

'Plains & Fanwood.

At the next meeting of the board of trustees of the Fanwood Public Library the question as to the advisability of having the library open to the public on one or more evenings a week will be brought up for discussion. At the present time the hours are from 3 to 4 in the afternoons and working people are unable to derive the benefits to be obtained from it. Those in charge of the Scotch Plains library have already seen this need. The young people are taking out instructive books in order to improve their education and fully twenty are attending the night school in the Plainfield High School and it seems likely that in another year a night course of instruction will be inaugurated at the local school.

Robert Thrane, violin-celio player in the Philharmonic Society of New York, will, assisted by Mrs. Thrane on the piano, and Miss Hannah Knagenhjelm, a soprano soloist of note, give a "musical evening" in the Fanwood firehouse this evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. Among the selections will be a solo by Miss Knagenhjelm composed by Mr. Thrane.

The young people of the Plains will hold their weekly social in the Sunday-school room of the Baptist church this evening.

The members of the Sunshine Weavers held their first meeting since organizing in the Sunday-school room of the Baptist church last evening, and spent a profitable time sewing.

Dr. Carroll will have charge of the prayer meeting in the Methodist church this evening.

The local students who were graduated from School No. 1 last June are already taking an active part in the activities at Westfield High School. Several of the boys are out for the athletic teams and nearly all belong to one or another of the numerous clubs. Miss Eva LaFlue is a member of the cast that will present "Bubbul" in the Westfield Playhouse the forepart of February.

Mrs. W. K. Woodbridge, of Paterson road, will leave sometime next week for Florida, where she will spend the remainder of the winter.

The graduating class of School No. 1 has voted to hold meetings the first and third Friday of every month. The next one will be next Friday afternoon.

The regular meeting of the Belgian Society, yesterday afternoon, was attended by about forty of the women from Scotch Plains and the borough that are members, and considerable was accomplished on garments to be sent to the Belgian sufferers.

The local Boy Scouts will undergo another examination the forepart of February and in the meantime are studying. The basketball team will play another game in a short time and expect to have better luck than last time.

The Altar Guild is scheduled to meet in the Episcopal church tomorrow morning.

DUMPED ASHES IN STREET AND HAD TO PAY $7 FINE

Charged with violating a borough ordinance by dumping ashes in the middle of the street on Manning avenue, Henry Redd, colored, of 141 West Fourth street, was arraigned before Recorder Hand in the borough court this morning and fined $7, which he liquidated.

The arrest culminated an investigation conducted by Chief Marshal Weiss. Residents of Manning avenue entered a complaint against the nuisance and furnished a license to the chief which happened to be that of Walter Ford. The latter was apprehended, but proved to the satisfaction of the police that he was not the man. Further search directed the finger of suspicion at Redd, who was arrested yesterday.

FREIGHT STEAMER AFIRE; BEACHED AT BEDLOES

New York, Jan. 29.—The Norwegian freight steamer Preston, outward bound from this port for Bergen, Norway, has been beached near Bedloes Island, with a fire raging in her forward holds. Several fireboats are on the scene endeavoring to save the vessel, which is said to be seriously imperiled.

SPEAKER GAVE A VIVID DESCRIPTION OF ISLAND

Rev. Charles H. Kues gave an interesting illustrated lecture before a large audience in the parish house of the Holy Cross church, last night, his topic being "Ward's Island." The subject was a very interesting one in itself and the slides which the speaker used added all the more in making the talk clearer and gave the listeners a more vivid picture of the subject. Mr. Kues has for some years been connected with the New York City Missions and has visited Ward's Island, which is near Blackwell's Island, in the East River. It is known as the hospital for the insane and there are about 6,000 patients there.

The speaker had about sixty slides and explained the treatments of those mentally affected and also explained the side of the life that the inmates live.

BOROUGH MAN NAMED.

William H. Williams, of Rockview avenue, the borough, was elected a director of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company at a meeting held today to fill a vacancy. He is vice president of the Delaware and Hudson Company.

"MA" SUNDAY TO SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Will Address Mass Meeting for Women in First Baptist Church.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Louis Mattlack, teacher of a large Bible class of women at the First Baptist church, arrangements have been made to bring "Ma" Sunday, the wife of "Billy" Sunday to Plainfield to address a mass meeting of young girls and women. She will come here on a Sunday afternoon the latter part of February.

In preparation for her visit, special meetings will be held every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the First Baptist church, the services being for women only. Mrs. Mattlack is being assisted by a committee of women from her class in arranging the details for the series of meetings as well as the big service to be held in February.

ONE DEAD; SEVERAL INJURED IN BIG FIRE AT NEWARK

Newark, Jan. 29.—One man was burned to death and three other men and a girl were badly injured in a fire here this morning which destroyed the chemical plant of J. B. Grumans, causing a loss of $200,000.

More than 200 employes had been at work but a few minutes when the fire was discovered at 7:52 a. m. The blaze started in the basement, quickly ate its way to the first floor near the main stairway and cut off the escape by the stairs of most of the employes on the upper floors.

Charles K. Brown, fifty-six years old, an employe, jumped from a third story window and sustained injuries from which he died on the way to a hospital.

By that time the fire department arrived, and scores of employes who filled the upper windows were restrained from jumping.

Ladders were run up, and several men who had been partially overcome were carried down the ladders.

A number of men were burned in trying to escape over the burning stairs. One of these was removed to the hospital, where it was said he could not recover.

Four alarms were turned in and practically every piece of fire apparatus in Newark responded.

MAY SHIFT CARGO OF DACIA TO AVOID TROUBLE

New York, Jan. 27.—Edward N. Breiting is negotiating with the Ward Line for the purchase of the passenger steamer Seguranca. It is believed that Mr. Breitung plans to transfer the cotton now on the Dacia to the Seguranca for shipment to Bremen. If the cotton were shipped on the Seguranca, which has always been an American vessel, complications would be avoided.

HAMMOND TESTIFIES.

New York, Jan. 29.—John Hays Hammond, before the Industrial Commission today, advocated a managing director to keep the other directors of a corporation in close touch, by personal visits to the property, of labor conditions there. Regarding labor generally, Mr. Hammond said:

"If we are to build up responsible citizenship in this country we can not lower the standards of living of the wage earner. Unless the great protected industries of this country can pay an adequate wage they should not be accorded the benefits of a protective tariff.

Odd Happenings In the War News.

Sing Sing convicts will knit for the soldiers if yarn and needles are supplied. Warden Osborn is knitting a muffler for the Polish relief committee.

Although 4,000 men have been engaged in burial work, bodies of the dead still litter the plains of Vregny, where losses on both sides were enormous.

When German soldiers celebrated their victory at Soissons, General von Kluck himself brewed the punch and toasted the soldiers of the enemy as well as his own.

Ice breakers have been unable to keep open the port of Archangel, the only port of European Russia open for overseas commerce during the war, and sixteen steamships have already been frozen in.

Great Britain is astonished that the Krupp firm of Germany has applied in London for patents on a gun mounting and a projectile fuse, and patent agents suggest a hidden motive in thus revealing secrets of the great plant to a hostile government.

MODEL TENEMENTS TO SHELTER 1,000 PERSONS.

Mrs. Wilson Memorial Embraces Approved Ideas of Settlement Work.

The most approved ideas of social settlement work are to be provided in the block of model tenement houses to be erected in Washington by the women of the country as a memorial to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

According to the plans and specifications furnished by the women architects, Misses Anna Pendleton Schenck and Marie Meade of New York, there will be 125 of these little houses, providing for 250 families, or an estimated home for 1,000 persons. These tenements are to be rented at from $7.50 to $17 a month, according to the number of rooms, the yard room and the more desirable location in the block. There are also to be a number of little stores to rent at $5, $6 and $12 a month.

The philanthropic section of the memorial will contain the most interesting provisions for real social settlement work, embracing all the features that appealed to Mrs. Wilson.

In the main building there will be a day nursery opening out into the playground, which is to be provided with four shelters and two stands. In the day nursery it is proposed to take charge of the children on the memorial block while their parents are at work. On the second floor provision is made for an emergency hospital.

There are arrangements for two wards of four beds each, one for men and the other for women. There is also provided a large amusement hall, so that the people of the settlement can hold their lodge meetings and arrange for theatricals, lectures and other entertainments.

On the third floor there will be two clubrooms. The library will have a stack room for books, besides cloak rooms and toilets. Throughout the entire plant is the best sanitary plumbing, with plenty of closet rooms.

CAKES AND TARTS TABOO.

Germans Exhorted to Blush With Shame if Tempted to Eat Them.

The London Daily Chronicle says:

"Baron von Schorlemer, Prussian minister for agriculture, has issued a rescript giving official countenance to the movement for economizing supplies of meat. He tells the people plainly that should the war be of long duration they must be prepared for heavy sacrifices. He does not think that agriculturists will fail in supplying the markets, but the supplies will have to be very carefully treated.

"He is really concerned about pork, and in most serious language appeals to municipalities and communal authorities, as well as to individual families, to do all in their power to lay in a stock of smoked and preserved pork. All kinds of food, he mentions, may be manufactured from pork, and in carrying out the wishes of the ministry, he tells the nation, the people will all be performing a patriotic duty second only to the work carried on at the front.

"No less serious is an exhortation addressed to the nation by Dr. Harms, professor of state sciences at the university of Kiel. It is a very fervid appeal. Here is a specimen:

"'Do not let a crumb of bread, this gift of God, be wasted. Eat only war bread. Regard the potato as a vegetable which will assist you in holding out. Blush with shame if your desire for delicacies tempts you to eat cakes and tarts. Look with contempt upon those who are so immoral as to eat cakes and by their greed diminish our supplies of flour.'"

Kaiser Was Alarmed.

A German soldier writes that the kaiser recently visited the trenches and made a speech, in which he said that at Argonne, after inspecting a cave and drinking wine with an artillery officer, he emerged to see a company of French soldiers, but as he instinctively drew back in amazement he was told the Frenchmen were only prisoners.

WAR NEWS

ly.

H. F. Baldwin, correspondent of the Central News at Galoniki, writes that if reports there are to be credited all Constantinople is one simmering cauldron. The Turks realize that ruin is inevitable and certain. Executions are frequent. Turkey's declaration of war was the signal for an outbreak of mob violence. The Turkish authorities in Constantinople are generally perturbed.

Berlin, Jan. 29.—The German war statement issued today is as follows:

"In the western theatre of the war during a night expedition one of our squadrons of aeroplanes attacked and dropped many bombs upon an English provision establishment.

"An attack by the enemy in the Dunes northeast of Nieuport yesterday was repulsed. Part of the enemy's forces which had penetrated at one place as far as our own trenches was repulsed by a night bayonet attack.

"South of La Bassee Canal English troops attempted to recapture the positions we had taken. Their attacks were easily repulsed.

"Nothing of importance occurred on the remainder of the front.

"In the eastern theatre, Russian attacks in the region of Kussen, northeast of Gumbinnen, failed with heavy losses to the Russians. There was no change in northern Poland. Northeast of Polimow, and east of Lowicz the enemy was driven from his outpost and his main position penetrated. We retained and adapted for our own use the captured trenches with the exception of some small portions, notwithstanding a fierce night counter attack."

Amsterdam, Jan. 29.—More than a million of the population of Belgium are now absent from within its borders, according to an estimate here. Refugees have fled into France across the channel to England and across the border into Holland.

According to the Neue Weiner Tageblatt the resignation of Dr. Leon Ritter Von Bilinski, the Austro-Hungarian minister of finance, will be announced at an early date.

McKINLEY DAY IN OHIO.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL MAY FAIL IN CONGRESS

Washington, Jan. 29.—Because of the demand of President Wilson and Secretary McAdoo for greater economy in governmental and legislative expenditures in the next fiscal year, rumors have begun to spread through the capital that the river and harbor bill, which carries a total of about $35,000,000 will fail of enactment.

OBREGON IN MEXICO CITY; HEAR VILLA IS WOUNDED

Washington, Jan. 29.—General Obregon at the head of a force of Carranzistas entered Mexico City today. The State Department was so informed in an official despatch. The entrance of Obregon was not opposed.

A rumor that General Villa has been seriously wounded in the battle near Aguas Calientes has been circulated in Mexico City. Consul Silliman telegraphed the State Department that the rumor is confined entirely to the capital. Officials of the State Department are inclined to doubt the report, as Consul Carrothers is in close touch with Villa and has failed to confirm the report.

TO GIVE "TEMPLE OF FAME" ON MARCH 12

The plans for the "Temple of Fame," an entertainment to be held March 12 in Saengerbund Hall under the auspices of North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association, are progressing rapidly, and all of the teachers are training their representatives each day. CARNATION DAY IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Jan. 29.—Pink carnations adorning the lapels of senators, representatives, officials and private citizens bespoke the observance today of McKinley's birthday. The carnation was the favorite flower of the late President, and he was hardly ever seen without one of the blossoms in his buttonhole. Many gifts of carnations from his hands are treasured throughout the country.

SCHOOL LUNCHES.

School lunches have become established in Plainfield as a permanent feature, and so popular are they that they are no longer defended on the basis of the needs of the poorer classes. The unquestioned benefits of a well chosen, warm lunch, supplied at the cost of the materials and service, have impressed both teachers and parents, so that even the well-to-do commend and approve this latest innovation in the routine.

In this city the foods are carefully chosen by women who are taking great interest in the work for the work's sake. Not only in Plainfield, but in all the cities where the lunches have been started, the variety of dietary articles which can be offered at one cent a portion is frequently quite impressive.

In New York, the School Lunch Committee, in co-operation with the Bureau of Welfare of School Children of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, for example, has maintained a service available to over 24,000 children in seventeen public schools situated in districts in which the need of such service is pressing. The registration has run as high as 2,353. In addition to this noon warm lunch service, the committee has operated a special 3-cent warm lunch of milk and crackers at 10 a. m. for anemic, ungraded and crippled classes.

The school lunch movement has engendered certain features which promise to contribute to the general welfare in a direction almost as important as that of the proper nourishment of the body. Educational and social possibilities, at first unforseen, are being brought to notice. The children of the well-to-do parents and the children of the poor have learned "to sit quietly as one family, to talk pleasantly with each other, to eat their food properly; and many acts of courtesy and generosity have been encouraged."

The appeal which the school lunches have made has not infrequently been manifested by mothers who have had their interest in respect to special foods and dietary procedures aroused. Thus as the Journal of the American Medical Association points out the school lunch scheme has fostered educational and social as well as economic purposes.

Plainfielder's have done much to aid the Belgian relief work, but the demands being made upon the United States clearly indicate that we must do more if the needs of that suffering country are properly cared for. That the magnitude of the help given in the disaster by the people of the United States will set a new world's record for philanthropy is already assured, but there is still much to be done. The spirit of generosity has been so universally shown that one section of the country cannot be praised without remembering that another section is entitled to just as hearty mention. The Daily Press has taken much pleasure in acknowledging many contributions by people of the city, and we will be pleased to receive more and see that they are forwarded to the proper authorities to be used for the women and children who are in want and facing starvation.

The fire committee is certainly justified in showing its displeasure over the failure of the Nott Engine Company to deliver the new automobile apparatus, which was originally promised for two or three months ago. Now that the alarm whistle has been done away with, and the call men dropped from the department, the apparatus is more seriously needed than at any other time in the city's history. The Nott people may have a reasonable excuse, from their point of view, but that does not help them in the eyes of the general public. Certainly if there should be any future dealings with this company or any other, the city should see to it that a forfeit is provided for failure to complete delivery within the time agreed when the contract is made.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has prepared the editorial for tomorrow's Daily Press. Last November, shortly after he was elected, we asked him to write for us, and he sent an editorial entitled "Women and the Ballot." Between the time it was written and the day set for its publication, another matter of greater moment came up, and the Mayor-elect prepared a second editorial on the Graves amendment to the Tyler zone ordinance. That left the votes for women editorial in our possession, and we will take great pleasure in printing it tomorrow night for the benefit of our readers.

It seems to us that the police should get after some of the taxicab drivers. The rate of speed at which these men go shooting about town is a positive detriment to life and limb, and it is a wonder there have not been more accidents. They are entitled to no more consideration than any other drivers of cars, and it is time a stop was put to the speeding.

The celebration of the Kaiser's birthday, now that all the returns are in, does not seem to have resulted in half the slaughter of the enemy that he and his friends would have liked to have seen, although the Germans lost 20,000.

SAYS BILL WILL BE PASSED

Richards said that the situation in Congress just now was one dealing mainly with matters which have come up as a result of the war in Europe, the ship purchase bill being the principal one, and the immigration act, which the President vetoed yesterday, being the other. She explained that President Wilson was not the only chief executive who has favored a closer relation between the shipping interests and the government, as several had openly declared for a subsidy. She said that the reason other nations have such large fleets of merchants' vessels is because they are handled by cheaper labor and subsidized. In the course of her remarks she spoke about the enormous ocean freight rates which have been put into force since the war broke out, and which have increased in some cases 1,100 per cent.

President Wilson's plan for the shipping bill is to form a commission of five men to administer the details of the purchase plan, the finances being provided by an appropriation of $20,000,000 by the government and by selling $30,000,000 worth of Panama Canal bonds. In the formation of the Commission she said no new idea would be promulgated, as there are already interstate commerce and trade commissions, the Federal Reserve Board, the Industrial Relations Commission, and others which showed that President Wilson is not the only executive who has favored this method of handling government affairs.

That the United States Steel Corporation discriminates against the Government was declared to be the case, because they are selling armor plate to Russia and other foreign countries at a price which is only about one-third of the rate charged this country.

Miss Richards took up Secretary Bryan's answers to the twenty questions put to him by a group of German-Americans, who claimed that this country was not neutral in the war abroad, but favored the Allies. She said that in Washington the actual preparation of the answer was credited to Robert Lansing, the councilor of the State Department, whom she declared to be a very bright man, and that the argument that it would be unneutral for us not to send articles which have been declared to be contraband of war, originated with him. Miss Richards also touched briefly on the Mexican situation, saying that it was hard to keep track of affairs there because of the frequent changes in the President. She illustrated this part of her talk with a humorous cartoon, drawn by a Washington newspaper man.

BAPTIST CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS ACTIVE

Many Events Are Planned by the Young People's Society.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church held its monthly business session at the church last night followed by a social hour and the serving of refreshments. There was a large attendance of members.

Following a communication from the New Jersey Endeavor Union, an appropriation was voted for the annual budget. A representative of the society of Trinity Reformed church explained the working of its budget, with the result that it was voted to adopt a similar system in the Baptist society. The principal feature of the system will be the pledge envelope.

The soociety decided to give a social and basket supper the latter part of February for the emmbers and their friends and will be in the nature of a St. Valentine's party. Miss Rae Harris is the chairman of the committee of arrangements. The young women will furnish the basket supper for the young men, who will be expected to bid in proportion to the attractiveness of the basket wares. The affair will probably be held February 19.

Christian Endeavor Week, beginning Sunday, February 7, will be observed by the society and the Wednesday following the members will have a prominent part in the mid-week prayer meeting. On Thursday night, February 11, there will be an Endeavor mass meeting with a banner contest for the largest attendance. The society decided to organize a quartet and elected two regular pianists, Miss Alice Drake and Miss Emily Pilger.

FRANKLIN COUNCIL GIVES AMERICAN FLAG TO SCHOOL

Simple exercises marked the presentation of a large American flag to the Leland Avenue School by Franklin Council representatives, this morning, the program being given in the school which convenes in the Netherwood Reformed church. The presentation speech was made by Robert Schreiner on behalf of the council, and Miss Flora Griffen, principal of the Lincoln School, accepted it.

The two grades in the institution attended the affair and the boys of the school hoisted the flag to the top of the pole in the front yard. The exercises, held in the open air, were brief owing to the coldness. The Rev. Edward S. Ralston, of the Netherwood Reformed church, delivered a short talk.

The train was tied up at Lorraine, near the scene of the accident, for more than an hour, and did not arrive here until 9:05, when it was met by the ambulance and the victim was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

For a time it was feared that his skull had been fractured, but soon after arriving at the institution he regained consciousness and his hurts were found to be of a minor nature. He will leave the institution today.

LOCAL CHAUFFEUR WANTED BY JERSEY CITY POLICE

Motorcycle Patrolman Dolan, of the Hudson County Boulevard police, came to Plainfield today armed with a warrant for the arrest of Jack Hegeman, colored, chauffeur for Howard A. Colby. According to the Jersey City officer Hegeman drove his car in excess of the speed limit in that city January 5 last, and when told to stop he put on extra speed and made a sharp swerve that knocked the cop and his motorcycle to the road. The opliceman says that he was ruffled up but not seriously hurt and that Hegeman continued on his way.

When sought by the police Hegeman was found to be sick in bed and the matter was postponed. According to Mr. Colby the Jersey City officer was the one at fault in the matter as he ran into the side of the machine. The owner of the car says that his man did not stop because it was thbught that the policeman was not hurt.

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by LOUIS P. HANSEN.

Philadelphia will send a number of lads to the interscholastic aquatic championships at Princeton on February 13, and they promise to figure prominently in several of the events. Besides Robert Dippy and Gilbert Tomlinson, likely candidates for the 100 and 220-yard titles, there are at least four entrants considered possible scorers—Green, Dasker, Uhl and Kistler, of West Philadelphia High School. All are reported to be covering 50 yards around 26 seconds and 100 yards close to one minute. Last year these events were won in 26 1-5 and 61 4-5 seconds, respectively. Kistler is also diving in very good form.

The sensational performance of Duke Kahanamoku, of Honolulu, in swimming 100 yards straightaway in 53 3-5 seconds at Sydney, New South Wales, proves conclusively that he is still the best of the world's sprinters, and completely disposes of the fear that the dusky South Sea Islander was losing his phenomenal speed. It may be remembered that only a few weeks ago, in reviewing water sports for 1914, a noted Californian swimmer picked Arthur Raithel, of Chicago, as the best 100-yarder of the year. In the light of recent developments the choice appears unwarranted, as most competent judges claimed it to be at the time.

Although notices from San Francisco, printed in the local press, have given the impression that the visit of the swimmers of the University of California to the East was an absolute certainty, a letter since received from Ernest Smith, the team manager, indicates that arrrangements for the trip are by no means complete. While the executive committee of the associated students has signified its willingness to finance the expedition, there remains the all-important question of obtaining leave of absence for the five men selected—Ludy Langer, Ernest Smith, James Resleure, William McElroy and George Lindsay. It will take several weeks to fulfil the engagements tentatively scheudled, and, judging from Smith's communication, there is strong opposition in some quarters to allowing the students to drop their work for such a long period.

The swimming of James Shryock, of the University of Pennsylvania, in the City College meet confirmed the belief that he will rank among the favorites for the 100-yard intercollegiate championship. The City College pool is an inch or two short of 101 feet, so that he actually covered about 101 yards, instead of an even century in 60 3-5 seconds, with two turns. The next best mark of the season, 60 4-5 seconds, by Marr, of Yale, was made in a 75-foot pool, so that it figures out nearly two seconds slower than Shryock's, counting the extra turn.

P. Lichter, of the Chicago A. A., is said to be plunging the length of the home pool, sixty feet, in about 20 seconds. This means that in a bath long enough he should be able to float close to the 80-foot record in the time limit of one minute. The national championship appears to be at his mercy.

After much discussion, Yale and Columbia have agreed upon a mutually satisfactory date for their annual swimming meet, and it will be held on February 6.

PLAINFIELD COUNTRY CLUB LINKS AGAIN OFFERED FOR ONE-DAY TOURNAMENT

By far the most important matter brought up yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, in New York, was that of adopting the Eastern Association's handicap list. Long discussion followed, which ended in the matter being left to the discretion of the handicap committee. To put the case concisely, there is great need of uniformity in the ratings of Eastern players since interplay between New Yorkers, Philadelphians and Bostonians is steadily increasing, while every winter sees more players touring through the South, where it is advisable that they meet on a common basis.

The Eastern ratings, while rather more liberal than those of the three big city districts composing it, which are corrected twice, instead of once a year, give general satisfaction, not being deemed unfair. Two or three details, however, stand in the way of putting through the change. The Eastern Association allowances do not go beyond eighteen strokes, while women wish to play whose rating goes up to thirty strokes or beyond. The obstacle could be overcome, however, by issuing a supplementary district list to the Eastern of high-stroke players.

The understanding was that such discrepancies as now exist between Eastern and metropolitan players up to eighteen strokes will be harmonized by the committee.

One important point was emphasized that semi-annual correction of allowances was enough. There has been a growing tendency to start a cry every time a comparatively unknown player won anything that the axe should forthwith be brought out and her rating dropped down instanter. Then, as a rule, she would not come within a mile of another trophy for years.

It was voted to hold the 1915 championship tournament at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club, the date being left to the executive committee.

These officers were elected: President, Mrs. Lawrence Swift, Knollwood; vice-president, Mrs. F. E. Donohue, Montclair; treasurer, Mrs. J. E. Davis, Nassau; secretary, Miss Marion Hollins, Westbrook; executive committee, Mrs. A. B. Holden, Essex county; Mrs. J. A. Moore, Sleepy Hollow; Miss Lillian Hyde, Westbrook.

Because of the irregular, lumpy character of last year's schedule it was decided to hold one-day tournaments only once in two weeks. These clubs extended their courses for one-day fixtures: Siwanoy, Apawamis, Plainfield, Arcola, Westfield, Essex County, Richmond County, Montclair and Hollywood.

Mrs. M. D. Paterson, Englewood, retiring president, received a special vote of thanks for her faithful services.

These New Jersey delegates were present: Mrs. H. R. Stockton, Plainfield C. C.; Arcola, Mrs. W. D. Moffat, Miss Griggs; Deal, Mrs. F. J. Ahrend, Mrs. James T. Smith; Englewood, Mrs. M. D. Paterson, Miss Grace Farrelly; Westfield, Mrs. D. C. Arnold, Mrs. R. J. McIntosh; Essex county, Mrs. E. P. Loomis, Mrs. R. A. Macy.

Robin pinners, of the Columbus Club bowling tournament, tightened their hold on first place, last night, by taking three games from the Quail aggregation. The Robins are now six games ahead of their nearest rival, the Sparrow team, which has been running hard to catch up for first place honors. Although the Quail rank far down the list they made their opponents go their best in the first two games, but went completely to pieces in the last roll and were behind an even one hundred points at the finish of the game.

The first was by far the best of the match, the Robins winning by a lone pin, the scores being 783 to 782. The leaders rolled below their regular form exhibited in past matches and just barely nosed out their opponents. Kennedy's 174 and Sullivan's 172 were the best scores made by the Robins and helped to get the much needed point to win. For the Quail, Cannon went up to 178, while Doyle hit the pins for high score of the game, 182. In the next game the Quail began to lose ground and a low score of 113 by Cannon pulled the total down considerable. Lynch registered a 187 for the Quail. Meaney hit the highest for the winners, with a 182. There was a difference of 19 pins at the close of this game, the scores being 760 to 741.

Greene startled his teammates and opponents in the final roll by making a 209 and Sullivan scored 187. All of the members of the losing team pinned poorly in the last game and the team scores were 880 to 780. This triple defeat puts the Quail down to next to last place.

The scores follow:

Woolston's team, which has been tied with Stout's five with four victories and no defeats, dropped both of its games last night and went down to second position. The Waldorf aggregation cleaned up with two victories, and L. H. Van Buren and his men won and lost one.

The Van Buren tribe took Woolston's team into camp in the first roll of the night, the scores being 777 to 696. Van Buren then played Waldorf and lost by sixty-five points. P. H. S. AT MORRISTOWN.

The Plainfield High School basketball team will go to Morristown tonight by automobile and play the High School team of that place. The entire squad of eight players will take the trip and will be accompanied by Coach Patch and Manager Zelmas. Last year Morristown went down to defeat twice before the locals, and the Ninth street team expects a victory.

ANOTHER MAJOR LEAGUE.

There were some decidedly interesting developments for the baseball fans yesterday, especially those on the International League circuit. President Edward Grant Barrow, of the International League, comes out with a statement that the clubs on his circuit have been admitted to the company of the American and National League clubs as "big leaguers."

MOULTON IN FINALS.

Harry Moulton defeated Bell in the semi-final round of the Y. M. C. A. handicap pool tournament last night by a score of 55 to 50. Bell was handicapped fifteen points. This places Moulton in the final round to meet Henry Welle for the association title. Both will receive prizes, and the match will be played next week.

Entries have not been restricted to members of the club and dogs from suburbs within a radius of eight miles of Plainfield are eligible.

An additional fee will be charged for post entries. The committee has made a request that all exhibitors have their dogs at the show before 2:30 o'clock as the judging will begin promptly at 3 o'clock. Among the entries received to date are those of the following fanciers:

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Plainfield—North Plainfield Union.

Plainfield and North Plainfield act just like a couple of wilful young people whose respective parents plan to have them marry. Every effort of the older people is resented. The youngsters can see no advantage in the proposed match and they manifest such persistent opposition that the old folks swallow their hopes and abandon their plan. And then the youngsters, left to themselves, fall in love with each other and the engagement is announced. For twenty years or more the old folks—that is, the Legislature and the fussy politicians, have been trying to force the consolidation of North Plainfield and Plainfield. The proposition was rejected several times, point blank. Then an act was passed enabling them to consolidate if they wanted to, or to remain separate if that suited them better. Last Sptember, North Plainfield voted to consolidate. Plainfield is now hunting for an engagement ring to cost $2,000; and a special election may be called one of these days to solemnize the union. No cards. All are invited to the reception. The home of the couple will be in Union county.—Newark Evening News.

WILL LECTURE ON JAPAN AND CHINA

Dr. Robert M. McElroy, of Princeton, Will Speak at the High School.

Dr. Robert M. McElroy, who is to speak here under the auspices of the Princeton Club at the High School on February 9, is professor of American history in Princeton University. His lecture here, which is to be free to the public, will deal with the historical backgrounds of the European war, and with his own experiences during the mobilization in Germany.

Dr. McElroy has been granted a leave of absence from the university for the next academic year, in order to be able to accept an appointment to deliver a series of public addresses in Japan and China, upon the development of constitutional liberty. He will sail from the Pacific coast late in June, and will spend six weeks lecturing in the chief centres of Japan. He will then go to Peking, where he will deliver sixteen public addresses, followed by conferences upon the subject of the history of constitutional government in Europe and America. Following this he will make a lecture tour of China, speaking in the principal cities, during a period of six months.

The opportunity to hear this fine speaker in Plainfield is one that should not be missed. A large crowd is expected at the High School to hear him on February 9.

WOMEN PLAN FOR ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

In the Interest of the Palmer-Owen Child Labor Bill.

An active campaign for the passage of the Palmer-Owen federal child labor bill by the present Congress has been inaugurated by the National Child Labor Committee. "Leading senators and representatives told us at the National Child Labor Conference, recently held in Washington," said Owen R. Lovejoy, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, "that the only thing needed for the passage of this bill was insistent public demand. We were so much encouraged by this news that we are redoubling our efforts to bring the bill before the public in the short time that is left before the adjournment of Congress on March 4.

"If the bill does not pass, it means that the thousands of children under fourteen who are still at work in factories, and the 50,000 or more children under sixteen who may legally be employed at night, and the still more appalling number of over 100,000 under sixteen who may legally work nine, ten and eleven hours a day, will continue to labor under these conditions. State regulation would reach them some time as it has already reached thousands of children in the past, but the National Child Labor Committee has been trying for ten years to bring the States throughout the country up to the standards contained in the Palmer-Owen bill. Today all the States but two have adopted one or more of its four provisions, but only nine have adopted them all.

"State regulation has its place," continued Mr. Lovejoy, "but this question of child labor in the factories and mines that ship goods in interstate commerce is another matter. The regulation of child labor in stores, hotels, laundries and street trades, for instance, must be left to the States, but Congress can and should protect the thousands of children who manufacture goods for interstate commerce. It is the quickest way to free them from premature employment, and it is the only way in which the manufacturer in States where the employment of children is carefully regulated, can be protected from the unfair competition of States with lower standards. We believe in 'State's rights' and we believe that they include the right of the manufacturer to equal competition, the right of the consumer to protection from child-made goods, and the right of the future citizens to a normal childhood and a chance for education."

CHAPTER XXI.

Captured by Indians.

SMOKE, sitting on the edge of a sleeping robe, examined the feet of a dog he had rolled, snarling, on its back in the snow.

"We've got to rest over tomorrow and make moccasins," he vouchsafed "That little crust is playing the devil with their feet."

"We oughta keep goin' somehow," Shorty objected. "We ain't got grub enough to turn back with, and we gotta strike that run of caribou or them white Indians almighty soon or we'll be eatin' the dogs, sofe feet an' all. Now, who ever seen them white Indians anyway? Nothin' but hearsay. An' how can a Indian be white? Smoke, we just gotta travel tomorrow."

"They'll travel all the better with a day's rest for their feet and moccasins all around," Smoke counseled. "If you get a chance at any low divide take a peep over the country beyond. We're likely to strike open rolling country any time now. That's what La Perle told us to look for."

"Huh! By his own story it was ten years ago that La Perle come through this section, an' he was that loco from hunger he couldn't know what he did see. An' he said himself he never seen any white Indians. That was Anton's yarn. An' Anton kicked the bucket two years before you an' me come to Alaska. But I'll take a look tomorrow. An' mebbe I might pick up a moose."

Smoke spent the morning in camp sewing dog moccasins. At noon he cooked a meal for two and began to look for Shorty's return. An hour later he strapped on his snowshoes and went out on his partner's trail.

The way led up the bed of the stream through a narrow gorge that widened suddenly into a moose pasture. But no moose had been there since the first snow of the preceding fall. The tracks of Shorty's snowshoes crossed the pasture and went up the easy slope of a low divide. At the crest Smoke halted. The tracks continued down the other slope. The first spruce trees, in the creek bed, were a mile away, and it was evident that Shorty had passed through them and gone on. Smoke looked at his watch, remembered the oncoming darkness, the dogs and the camp and reluctantly decided against going farther.

Until midnight Smoke maintained a huge fire for the guidance of Shorty. And in the morning, waiting with camp broken and dogs harnessed for the first break of light, Smoke took up the pursuit. In the narrow pass of the canyon his lead dog pricked up his ears and whined. Then Smoke came upon the Indians,-six of them, coming toward him. They were traveling light, without dogs, and on each man's back was the smallest of outfits.

Surrounding Smoke, they immediately gave him several matters for surprise. That they were looking for him was clear. That they talked no Indian tongue of which he knew a word was also quickly made clear. They were not white Indians, though they were taller and heavier than the Indians of the Yukon basin. Five of them carried the old fashioned, long barreled Hudson Bay company musket, and in the hands of the sixth was a Winchester rifle which Smoke knew to be Shorty's.

Nor did they waste time in making him a prisoner. Unarmed himself, Smoke could only submit. The contents of the sled were distributed among their own packs, and he was given a pack composed of his and Shorty's sleeping furs. The dogs were unharnessed, and when Smoke protested one of the Indians by signs indicated a trail too rough for sled travel. Smoke bowed to the inevitable, cached the sled end on in the snow on the bank above the stream and trudged on with his captors.

The first night was spent in a camp which had been occupied for several days. Here was cached a quantity of dried salmon and a sort of pemmican, which the Indians added to their packs. From this camp a trail of many snowshoes led off—Shorty's captors, was Smoke's conclusion—and before darkness fell he succeeded in making out the tracks Shorty's narrower snowshoes had left.

Always in the days that followed they pointed north, and always the trail, turning and twisting through a jumble of upstanding peaks, trended north.

In six days they gained and crossed the central pass, low in comparison with the mountains it threaded, yet formidable in itself and not possible for loaded sleds. Five days more of tortuous winding, from lower altitude to lower altitude, brought them to the open, rolling and merely hilly country La Perle had found ten years before.

Smoke knew it with the first glimpse. Far as he could see rolled the open country. High in the east the Rockies still thrust their snowy ramparts heavenward. To the south and west extended the broken ranges of the projecting spur system they had crossed. And in this vast pocket lay the country La Perle had traversed—snow blanketed, but assuredly fat with game at some time in the year and in the summer a smiling, forested and flowered land.

Before midday, traveling down a broad stream, they came upon the site of a large camp, recently abandoned. Glancing as he went by it, Smoke estimated 400 or 500 fires and guessed the population to be in the thousands. So fresh was the trail and so well packed by the multitude that Smoke and his captors took off their snowshoes and in their moccasins struck a swifter pace.

In the long twilight no sign was manifested of making camp. They held steadily on through a deepening gloom that vanished under a sky of light—great glittering stars, half veiled by a greenish vapor of pulsing aurora borealis. His dogs first caught the noises of the camp, pricking their ears and whining in low eagerness. Then it came to the ears of the humans—a murmur dim with distance.

The men about him quickened. The legs that had lifted through a dozen strenuous hours lifted in a still swifter pace that was half a run and mostly a running jog. Through a dark spruce flat they burst upon an abrupt glare of light from many fires and upon an abrupt increase of sound. The great camp lay before them.

And as they entered and threaded the irregular runways of the hunting camp a vast tumult as in a wave rose to meet them and rolled on with them—cries, greetings, questions and answers, jokes and jokes thrust back again, the snapping snarl of wolf dogs, the scolding of squaws, laughter, the whimpering of children and wailing of infants, all the pandemonium of a camp of nerveless, primitive wilderness folk.

They halted in the trampled snow by an open fire, where Shorty and two young Indians, squatted on their hams, were broiling strips of caribou meat. Three other young Indians, lying in furs on a mat of spruce bows, sat up. Shorty looked across the fire at his partner, but with a sternly impassive face, like those of his companions, made no sign and went on broiling the meat.

"What's the matter?" Smoke demanded, half in irritation. "Lost your speech?"

The old familiar grin twisted on Shorty's face. "Nope," he answered. "I'm a Indian. I'm learnin' not to show surprise. When did they catch you?"

"Next day after you left."

"Hum! Well, I'm doin' fine, thank you most to death. This is the bachelors' camp. An' these are the bachelors. They're glad to meet you, Smoke. Set down an' dry your moccasins, an' I'll cook up some grub. You'll have to come to it, for looks as if we'll be with these folks a long time. They's another white man here. Got caught six years ago. Danny McCan is what he goes by. He's settled down with a squaw. Got two kids already, but he'll skin out if ever the chance opens up."

Apparently this was Smoke's appointed domicile, for his captors left him and his dogs and went on deeper into the big camp. While he devoured strips of hot meat Shorty talked.

"This is a sure peach of a pickle, Smoke. An' we got to go some to get out. These is the real, blowed-in-the glass wild Indians. They ain't white, but their chief is. He talks like a mouthful of hot mush, an' if he ain't full blooded Scotch they ain't no such thing as Scotch in the world. He's the hi-yu, skookum, top chief of the whole caboodle. What he says goes. You want to get that from the start off.

"Danny McCan's been tryin' to get away from him for six years. Danny's all right, but he ain't got go in him. He knows a way out—learned it on huntin' trips—to the west of the way you an' me came. He ain't had the nerve to tackle it by his lonely. But we can pull it off, the three of us. Whiskers is the real goods, but he's mostly loco, just the same."

"Who's Whiskers?" Smoke queried.

"Why, he's the top geezer. He's the Scotcher. He's gettin' old, an' he's sure asleep now, but he'll see you tomorrow an' show you clear as print what a measly shrimp you are on his stompin' grounds. These grounds be long to him. You got to get that into your noodle. They ain't never been explored nor nothin', an' they're hisn, an' he won't let you forget it. He's got about 20,000 square miles of huntin' country here all his own. He's the white Indian, him an' the skirt.

"Huh! Don't look at me that way. Wait till you see her. Some looker, an' all white, like her dad—he's Whiskers. An' say, caribou! A hundred thousan' of good runnin' meat in the herd an' ten thousan' wolves an' cats a-followin' an' livin' off the stragglers an' the leavin's. The herd's movin' to the east, an' we'll be followin' 'em any day now."

"Here comes Whiskers, lookin' like he's goin' somewhere," Shorty whispered.

It was morning, and the bachelors were squatting over a breakfast of caribou meat. Smoke glanced up and saw a small and slender man, skin clad like any savage, but unmistakably white, striding in advance of a sled team and a following of a dozen Indians. Bushy whiskers, yellowish gray and stained by camp smoke, concealed most of the face, but failed wholly to conceal the gaunt, almost cadaverous, cheeks.

"How do you do?" the man said, slipping a mitten and holding out his bare hand. "My name is Snass."

"Mine's Bellew," Smoke returned, feeling peculiarly disconcerted as he gazed into the keen, searching black eyes.

"Getting plenty to eat, I see. Rough rations, but we don't starve often. And it's more natural than the hand reared meat of the cities."

"I see you don't like the cities." Smoke laughed in order to be saying something and was immediately startled by the transformation Snass underwent.

Quite like a sensitive plant, the man's entire form seemed to wilt and quiver. Then the recoil, tense and savage, concentered in the eyes, in which appeared a hatred that screamed of immeasurable pain. He turned abruptly away and then, recollecting himself, remarked casually over his shoulder:

"I'll see you later, Mr. Bellew. The caribou are moving east, and I'm going ahead to pick out a location. You'll all come on tomorrow."

Later on in the morning Smoke went for a stroll through the camp, busy with its primitive pursuits. A big body of hunters had just returned, and the men were scattering to their various fires. Women and children were departing with dogs harnessed to empty toboggan sleds, and women and children and dogs were hauling sleds heavy with meat fresh from the killing and already frozen. Furs and soft tanned leather clad all alike. Boys passed with bows in their hands and quivers of bone barbed arrows, and many a skinning knife of bone or stone Smoke saw in belts or neck hanging sheaths.

Segregated in the heart of the camp, Smoke came upon what was evidently Snass' fire. Though temporary in every detail, it was solidly constructed and was on a large scale. A great heap of bales of skins and outfit was piled on a scaffold out of reach of the dogs. A large canvas fly, almost half tent, sheltered the sleeping and living quarters.

To one side was a silk tent—the sort favored by explorers and wealthy big game hunters. Smoke had never seen such a tent and stepped closer. As he stood looking the flaps parted and a young woman came out. So quickly did she move, so abruptly did she appear, that the effect on Smoke was as that of an apparition. He seemed to have the same effect on her, and for a long moment they gazed at each other.

She was dressed entirely in skins, but such skins and such magnificently beautiful fur work Smoke had never dreamed of. Her parka, the hood thrown back, was of some strange fur of palest silver. The mukluks, with walrus hide soles, were composed of the silver padded feet of many lynxes. The long gauntleted mittens, the tassels at the knees, all the varied furs of the costume, were pale silver that shimmered in the frosty light, and out of this shimmering silver, poised on a slender, delicate neck, lifted her head the rosy face blond as the eyes were blue, the ears like two pink shells, the light chestnut hair touched with frost dust and coruscating frost glints.

All this and more, as in a dream, Smoke saw; then, recollecting himself, his hand fumbled for his cap. At the same moment the wonder stare in the girl's eyes passed into a smile, and she slipped a mitten and extended her hand.

"How do you do?" she murmured gravely, with a queer, delightful accent, her voice as silvery as the furs she wore.

Smoke could only mumble phrases that were awkwardly reminiscent of his best society manner.

"I am glad to see you," she went on slowly and gropingly, her face a ripple of smiles. "My English you will please excuse. It is not good. I am English like you," she gravely assured him. "My father he is Scotch. My mother she is dead. She was French and English and a little Indian too. Her father was a great man in the Hudson Bay company. B-r-r-r! It is cold. Let us go to the fire and talk. My name is Labiskwee. What is your name?"

And so Smoke came to know Labiskwee, the daughter of Snass, whom Snass called Margaret.

"Snass is not my father's name," she informed Smoke. "Snass is only an Indian name."

Much Smoke learned that day and in the days that followed. These were real wild Indians, the ones Anton had encountered and escaped from long years before. But strive as he would Smoke could get no clew to Snass' history in the days before he came to live in the northern wilds. Educated he was, yet in all the intervening years what had happened in the world he knew not. Nor did he show desire to know.

Nor could Labiskwee help Smoke with earlier information. She had been born on the hunting grounds. Her mother had lived for six years after. Her mother had been very beautiful—the only white woman Labiskwee had ever seen. She said this wistfully, and wistfully in a thousand ways she showed that she knew of the great outside world on which her father had closed the door. But this knowledge was secret. She had early learned that mention of it threw her father into a rage.

Anton had told a squaw of her mother and that her mother had been a daughter of a high official in the Hudson Bay company. Later the squaw had told Labiskwee. But her mother's name she had never learned.

A SMART COAT FOR THE SPRING TAILORED GIRL

From her tailored satin hat to her spats of tan cloth, this spring maid is tailor-made—top to toe. Her coat is a particularly smart new model of tan covert cloth with a wide ripple flare at the bottom and a stitched, overlapped trim [illegible] which suggests a bolero overlapping a wide girdle. Revers and cuffs also show the lapped, buttoned effect.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Before you go, will you take this heavy crock to the basement?" asked Mrs. Keats, as her husband kissed her goodby.

"I'm late," he said, "but give it to me," and he scurried down the cellar stairs. An awful thud and crash brought Mrs. Keats to the scene of action.

"Oh, Will, are you hurt?" she cried, running down the stairs. "I never thought that I had slid the clothes bars down there, dear. I meant to go down later and put them away, and I forgot it."

Mr. Keats was slowly and painfully rising. His clothes were all vinegar and green tomatoes from the contents of the broken jar, and his face was badly scratched. He grabbed the clothes bars which had been leaning across the lower steps in such a position as to catch his foot and throw him, and hurl them against the opposite side of the basement.

"That's a deuced careless trick, leaving them there, I must say!" he exclaimed angrily, "and look at the mess I am in, and it's time I was gone this minute," and he limped up the stairs, followed by his wife, who was volubly explaining how the bars happened to be there.

"Don't stop to talk. Great Scott! Get a cloth and wash this dope off my clothes," he commanded.

She flew for a basin of water while he examined his scratched face in the glass. "I look as if I'd been in a fight," he said, glaring at his battered countenance in the glass.

Mrs. Keats in her hurried effort to repair damages bungled things badly.

"Oh, Will," she said, almost ready to cry, "forgive me, I am so sorry."

"Forgive you!" he snapped, "the devil!" and he banged out of the house, waking the baby. After she had been hushed to sleep again, Mrs. Keats set about the morning work, an indignant look on her face. After putting the cozy home in perfect order she dressed the baby and herself, and putting a few necessaries in a suit case, started for her sister's home across the city.

"He'll have to ask my forgiveness and beg me to come home before I'll go back," she thought, nursing her injured feelings.

"I've come to spend the night," she announced on arriving at her destination.

But the next day she made no move to go and seemed nervous and anxiously watched for the postman. It was before the days of universal telephones. Her sister watched her furtively.

"Mabel, there has been some trouble. Tell me what has happened," she finally said.

There was no answer, but a handkerchief appeared to dry the tears that began to creep down Mabel's face. Finally the story was told and the sister said:

"If I had only known last night, I would have sent you home too quick. You poor, foolish girl, trifling with your happiness in this fashion."

"He had no business to be cross with me. I was so sorry he was hurt," sobbed the miserable wife. "He never spoke to me like that before."

"And when he was jarred from a fall, and his clothes in a mess, and late for work, because he was impatient, you went off and left him to come to an empty house, and spend an evening alone, perhaps in pain. He may have hurt himself more than you know," rejoined the artful sister.

"Oh! do you think that?" cried the fugitive in alarm. "I never thought of that. I'll go right back," and she began cramming things into the suit case.

"Now, don't insist on a scene," counseled the sister. "Men hate scenes. Just be cheerful and loving."

Will Keats saw lights in the cottage with a big sense of relief, and came bounding in prepared to do his part in a permanent peace. As he clasped his wife in his arms, he said, "If I ever forget myself again, for heaven's sake trust me enough to know it's only surface irritation and do not fly the track."

"I have had my lesson," she answered.

Animal Jingles

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

BY ALICE CREW GALL

Mother McGrew and Susanna Snail

I wonder how many of you know the tale
That I'm going to tell you of Susanna Snail.
She lived in a shell, as snails always do,
And was one of the children of Mother McGrew.

Her manners were good and her temper was mild.
And in most ways she was an obedient child.
But she had one fault, which brought her to grief—
How she hated to run errands passes belief!

She always was willing and ready to play
And scampered about in the liveliest way.
But if she was asked to do errands at all,
She never went fast; she simply would crawl.

Sometimes when they sent her for bread to the store,
She wouldn't get back for a good hour or more.
But when she went out with her young friends to play,
She always could run a lot faster than they.

And Mother McGrew said, "It seems very queer
That you can't RUN errands, you're lazy I fear."
Then Sue tossed her head and said, "Oh, very well,
But work always gives me a pain in my shell."

That was such a perfectly silly excuse
That Mother McGrew said, "There's really no use
In talking to you—if you won't mend your ways
You can just travel slowly the rest of your days."

With her magical stick she tapped Susan's shell,
And right from that minute, or so I've heard tell,
A snail never yet has been able at all
To go any faster than just a slow crawl.

The next time you see a young snail going by,
I wish you would look at him closely and try
To think how you'd feel in his place, and then run
As fast as you can and get your errands done.

Household Hints

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Liver Roll With Cracknels—Now that leaf lard is plentiful and not very expensive many thrifty housewives are frying out lard for future use. Not all know how to use up the cracknels, so none gets wasted. Following is a good recipe: (Boil two pounds liver till tender; when cold skin and grate it fine. Add pound cracknels; roll ten crackers fine and add; moisten with liquor liver was boiled in, season with salt and paprika, form in roll, set in cold place a few hours, when it can be sliced. Fine for lunch or sandwiches.

Galourish—Place layer of raw potatoes in large pan, then cover with layer of cooked beans. Season with salt and pepper and anything else you may like. Put bacon or ham on top and bake about 2½ hours.

Oyster Canapes—For six people cut two dozen oysters in small pieces. Put two level tablespoons butter in sauce pan, when melted add generous cup cream. Let come to a scald, add oysters and one tablespoon grated bread crumbs, with salt and pepper to taste. Have ready oblong pieces of bread cut one-fourth inch thick and fried brown in butter. Place in bottom of a dish and pour oyster mixture over them.

Rice Tomatoes—One cup rice, one-half can tomatoes (large half), one green pepper, salt to taste. Cleanse rice thoroughly, cover with boiling water, boil slowly until tender. Add tomatoes, salt and mix. Slice pepper and scald (removing seeds first), then add to rice and tomatoes; bake 20 minutes.

French Potato Pie—Use one pint fresh mashed potatoes; brown one onion in lump of butter size of an egg, add to mashed potatoes, also one cup cream and salt to taste; beat very light and put in pie pan with very rich pie dough with top like ordinary pie. Bake until crust is done. Serve while hot with chicken or any rich gravy.

Rice Pie Crust—Put one-fourth cup rice into one cup water and cook till soft. It is best to use double boiler. Press boiled rice into shape of an under crust in piepan and let stand till it jellies. Make lemon or cream filling, put it in rice crust, cover with usual meringue and brown lightly in oven. If cut when cool, the rice will hold its shape. Fine for children and people who cannot digest ordinary pie crust.

Whole Wheat Muffins—One egg, one pint sweet milk, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two teaspoons sugar, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, four cups whole wheat flour.

Cream of Tartar Biscuit—One quart flour, one teaspoon salt, two level teaspoons cream of tartar sifted with flour, level teaspoon soda, large tablespoon lard, scant cup milk or water. Mix lard with flour, salt and cream of tartar, add milk in which soda has been dissolved; do not knead, and handle as little as possible.

FOR THE HOME SEAMSTRESS

In small apartments it is sometimes necessary to keep sewing machine in bedroom. A practical way of eliminating the unsightliness is the following: Make a dressing table by fastening to the wall a board as long and as wide as your machine. Cover this with lined dotted swiss or other material to match furnishings of the room. Gather or pleat the material around the two ends and front, allowing it to touch the floor. Hang mirror on wall above table. The machine slides under the curtains in space allowed for it and may be drawn out ready for use at any time.

A Stitch That Saves Much Time—After inserting tape in boys' waists or other garments, always tack the tape in the center of the back or front, according to the way in which the garment opens. This will prevent tape from slipping back into casing out of reach.

From garments that have been laid aside, cut off the strip containing buttonholes, leaving enough material to turn under. These strips may often be used as a "fly" to sew to new garments, thereby saving both time and labor.

Buttonholes in the neckbands of shirts often become torn and stretched. Repair by sewing a piece of tape flat along each edge of the buttonhole, bring it together at the ends and fasten securely. Tape should be just wide enough to extend to each side of band, where it is again secure.

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The coming of the Al. G. Field minstrels has a place in boy-land—and girl-land too—right alongside the big holidays and festivals of one year. The highly colored posters on the billboard announcing these minstrels causes the same rejoicing among the kiddies, big and little, as that created by the approach of an official "big time" day. In fact, such a permanent institution for fun has the Al. G. Field minstrels become with these patrons, that the brilliant colors of the posters are superfluous. Just the name and date, with the word "Coming," would be sufficient. And then, when the minstrel parade begins! Is the jubilation confined to the boys and girls and young? Hardly, for it takes no keen observer to see that traffic in any direction other than that of the parade is positively stopped! The name and the parade of the Al. G. Field minstrels have a meaning with the masses—entertainment! It's always the same old name, but never the same old show—always something new, in advance of the year before. That's why the announcement of the name and date doesn't really require the accompaniment of vivid, startling colors on the billboards to attract the people to the theatre. They know the name, and when they know the date, they come. Al. G. Field and his company will be at the Plainfield Theatre, Wednesday, February 3, afternoon and evening.

Mother, sweetheart or country, to which do you owe the greatest loyalty? That's the theme of Gus Hill's big production of William Anthony McGuire's play called "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," coming to the Plainfield Theatre next Friday, February 5. It is entirely different from anything you have ever seen on the stage. It's a distinct revelation in modern stagecraft. It's as gripping as the song which inspired it, with thrilling pictures of war seasoned with heroic love and sweet songs.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

A rare and novel treat was afforded Proctor Theatre patrons at the performances yesterday, when "The Rose and the Butterfly," a novel scenic production, with special electrical effects that met with popular approval, was presented for the first time with the opening of the new change of vaudeville for the latter portion of this week. Not only do the scenic and electrical effects impress those who behold this unique act at the Front street house, but the vocal and instrumental selections as rendered bring forth volumes of applause following the drop of the curtain. Camile Personi and Company, with James G. Reaney, in a love playlet, with a Japanese setting, also met with the approval of the audiences, and appealed to the fancy of local theatre visitors. The balance of the bill for today and tomorrow include Jewell Sisters, with a number of catchy character songs; Sullivan, Pasquelina and Company, in a back stage comedy skit, and Gus Leonard, well known as "Prof. Herman, the Second," in a burlesque on the slight of hand artists of the day. The feature photo-play for this afternoon and tonight is the fourth episode of "The Exploits of Elaine," while the motion picture production of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," will be thrown upon the screen at all performances of Monday and Tuesday of next week. Other feature pictures, as well as Keystone comedies, are scheduled for next week, and will be announced later.

New Providence.

Mrs. E. H. Alpaugh and family returned yesterday after spending a week with relatives in Middle Valley.

Mrs. Louis E. Wilcox, who is in South Orange, is ill with typhoid fever.

Miss May Krayer, of Fairview road, West End, returned this afternoon after spending several days with Miss Marjory Latimer in Nutley.

Councilman Lyman B. Coddington is confined to his bed with the grip.

A coffee party will be given tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Conrad Siebert at her home in Division avenue.

BANQUET RAYMOND ROBINS.

Louisville, Ky., Jan 29.—At a banquet tonight, Raymond Robins, millionaire social economist, who gave up his fashionable home in Chicago to live in the slums, will be introduced to the old friends of his youth. He will tell the old home folk his experiences in the underworld and what he has done and hopes to do for mankind. Raymond Robins was a cash boy in a department store in Louisville. He had a poor beginning, but after hustling around the West stumbled onto some valuable claims, sold out, went to Chicago and married an heiress. Mr. Robins visit is occasioned by the attempt of the Men's Federation to arouse Louisville people to conditions that should be remedied.

Samuel Hoppler, who recently purchased sixty acres of land from the P. S. Herder farm, near Whitehouse Station, will build in the spring.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney troubles, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.—Adv.

NOTES FROM LABOR FIELD

French labor unions have earned the highest respect of the French government by their support of the war.

A movement is on foot in New Jersey to give the labor element a seat on the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The eyes of the labor world are turned on the New York hearings of the Federal investigators on industrial conditions.

Women laundry workers in Kansas City have succeeded in getting a wage scale of from $7 to $9 a week.

Reports from industrial centers show another great increase in business this week, and the taking on of many thousands of workers.

Canadian enginemen have asked the Ottawa Commission to limit their continuous service to 14 hours. They claim they are now required to do 24 hour stretches.

A strike on blankets for European armies in Philadelphia, was caused by the use of shoddy, which was so difficult to handle that the operatives lost 75 cents a day.

The Jones & McLaughlin and Illinois steel plants reduced the number of accidents by 71 per cent., and the Inland Steel Company claims a reduction of 55 per cent.

The New Jersey strike shooting has caused no little public interest. When public opinion gets busy there will be none of these bloody interferences with disputes.

Workmen's compensation is before many Legislatures this spring. Reports from most of these are bright for the adoption of the measure and some States are broadening their previous statutes.

Out of the mine troubles in Arkansas and the conviction of the labor leaders, comes the silver cloud. The afflicted mine has been bought by labor men and will be worked for the benefit of the men who swing the pick.

The Federal Employment Bureau is opposed by labor men in some sections, mostly because the scheme is little understood. The government will heed no snap judgment, for the plan is the result of careful thought and broad experience.

If labor unionists had spent half of their energy in trying to wrest political power that they have spent in industrial warfare, their advance would have been marvelous and sure, says a prominent thinker.

Statistics show that less than half as many workmen are injured during the first hour in the morning as in the hour before lunch and less than half as many are hurt in the first hour after lunch as in the last hour of the working day.

A SLAVE TO CUSTOM

It is the most natural thing in the world for a man of property to name his friend or a business associate executor of his will and even trustee of his estate. This has been done for generations, in the absence of better facilities. The habit still continues after the need for it has completely disappeared.

TRUST COMPANY SERVICE IS MUCH MORE EFFICIENT

This company has specialized experience and ability which fit it to handle all phases of trusteeship in an economical way. It is familiar with investments; is equipped to handle real estate; to wind up a business; to collect and remit income. No individual could be expected to render as highly specialized a service, and no individual can be depended upon to serve. He may die, move away, become overburdened with cares of his own. This company is a permanent organization of trained men, always accessible, unaffected by the hazards of individual life.

JONES GETS A FIVE MONTHS' JAIL SENTENCE

Elizabeth, Jan. 30.—Five months in the county jail was the punishment imposed on Simon Jones, a mulatto, in the court of Quarter Sessions yesterday afternoon when he was arraigned for the theft of jewelry valued at $110 from the house of Edward K. Morse, of Plainfield. The fact that it was his first offense and also that his mother who is ill in East Orange had interceded for him, saved him from a State prison term, Judge Connolly told him. None of the jewelry has been recovered. Among the articles stolen were pearl opera glasses, gold studs, links, necklace, pins, jewel basket, chain and rings.

STRONGLY OPPOSES THE LITERACY TEST

Rev. Dr. W. T. Stuchell is Against Restriction in Immigration Bill.

Rev. Dr. W. T. Stuchell gave the last of his series of three lectures in Columbus Auditorium, last night, under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society, of the First Presbyterian church. The lecture was enjoyed by a small but appreciative audience. Dr. Stuchell displayed a large number of exceptionally fine stereopticon pictures of Buenos Ayres and then gave an interesting and instructive talk explaining the views.

The remarkable progress made in the large South American city was illustrated and explained by the lecturer, and one would have thought that they were in an American city judging by the many fine buildings of every description as well as the evidence of modern ideas shown in the architecture and fine broad avenues. This was especially true in the pictures of the schools, where children were shown at work in the manual training and domestic science departments.

Dr. Stuchell carried with him a personal letter from Secretary of State Bryan while traveling through South America and as a result he was extended every courtesy by the officials. During the course of his lecture Dr. Stuchell took occasion to criticise the immigration bill in which is incorporated the widely-known literacy test.

He strongly indicated that he was opposed to the literacy test, believing that this country should be open to receive immigrants who are physically strong and who come here with the intention of helping to build up the country. Thousands of immigrants come here who cannot read, said Dr. Stuchell, but they make good citizens.

SMALL BOYS DEFENDANTS BEFORE THE CITY JUDGE

Charged with cutting the compressed air hose that operates the signal system of the Central Railroad six small Italian boys were arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, and after having severe reprimands administered were allowed to go suspended.

They gave their names as Joe Riverizi, Dominic Sundale, Tony Focero, Joe Granczonni, Edward Craft and Joe Mango. The police have been experiencing considerable trouble as the result of this maliciousness lately and efforts are being made to break up the practice.

ADELBERG GOODS WILL NOT BE SOLD AT A FIRE SALE

Hyman Adelberg, whose place of business in East Front street was gutted by a $10,000 fire Saturday night, is planning to reopen in the near future with an entire new stock, maintaining temporary headquarters until that time in the second floor of the burned building. Contrary to the usual custom followed by merchants who experience losses of this nature, Mr. Adelberg intends to sacrifice fire sale salvage and has disposed of the entire stock that was in the place at the time the conflagration occurred. He stated this morning that there would positively be no fire sale conducted as an aftermath of the blaze, but that business would be resumed at the old stand in about two weeks.

In the meantime he is busily engaged restocking the store with a bigger and better line of goods than have ever been offered for sale before in his store. The Adelberg store is one of the oldest established clothing houses in the city and in keeping with his previous reputation Mr. Adelberg has elected to shoulder a $9,000 loss rather than to sell inferior or damaged goods.

PASSED RESOLUTION ON ROOSEVELT STRIKE RIOT

Members of the Building Trades Council held a short meeting in the local headquarters, last night, and among other things passed a resolution condemning the attitude assumed by "detectives" employed at the Williams & Clark and Liebig Fertilizer plants, in Roosevelt. The recent insurrection among the employes of this concern came in for much discussion during the meeting and the concensus of opinion favored the employes' side.

Routine matters occupied the attention of the members during the remainder of the evening, several union matters coming up for discussion and subsequent disposition.

MANY FIND WORK IN THE WOODYARD

Surplus of 600 Barrels of Kindling is Offered for Sale.

If anyone in Plainfield wants ocular proof that the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed and the Charity Organization Society, between them, have provided a lot of relief employment since the middle of December, all he need do is to visit the woodyard which was opened on Front street as the first expedient.

Although a good deal of the wood cut has been sold, there has accumulated a surplus of about 600 barrels of kindling wood which is still to be disposed of. In response to a recent appeal, Joseph W. Sandford has given the Commission the use of his barn for storing this wood, so that the space in the yard itself may be free for the men to work in.

In order to lessen the expense of double transportation, into storage and out again to the final purchaser, the Commission is most anxious to sell as much of it as possible at once. Most of it is not quite thoroughly dried, but if kept in a cellar for two or three month it should be in perfect condition. In view of this fact and as a special inducement for quick sale, the price set is 8 barrels for a dollar, much less than the ordinary figure.

If you have room to store this wood for three months, you can help the Commission appreciably by placing an order now, and at the same time secure a bargain. Office, 323 Babcock building, telephone 103. There is also fire wood for sale at $8 a cord.

Up to and including January 25 the following contributions, not previously acknowledged, have been received by the finance committee, a total of $148: L. M. Sydenham, "C. L.," "M. C. E.," "A Friend," Rev. Edward G. Read, E. J. Patterson, Sydney T. Perrin, "A Friend," I. W. Rushmore, Mrs. W. H. Freeman, Mrs. H. G. Murray, Mrs. C. O. Peacock. Total to date, $2,800.63

MEN'S FEDERATION RE-ELECTS OFFICERS

Annual Meeting Held at the Y. M. C. A. Last Evening.

Officers were elected and plans for the coming year were discussed at the annual meeting of the Federation of Men's Church Clubs and Religious Organizations, held at the Y. M. C. A. last night. There was a good attendance of officers and members and much interest was evidenced in the business of the evening.

The work of the past year was reviewed in an interesting way by W. H. P. Veysey, the president, and everything was shown to be in a satisfactory condition. The report of the treasurer, Charles A. Rice, showed that all bills are paid and there is a small balance on hand. There was nothing else of any importance taken up, the other business being of a routine nature. These officers were elected for the year:

President, W. H. P. Veysey; first vice-president, Samuel T. Carter, Jr.; second vice-president, A. B. Cole; third vice-president, W. T. Banks; secretary, George B. Zimmer; treasurer, Charles A. Rice. The federation comprises the clubs in the following churches: Crescent Avenue Presbyterian, Congregational, Grace P. E., Grace M. E., Hope chapel, Heavenly Rest, Netherwood Reformed, Seventh-Day Baptist, Trinity Reformed churches and Warren chapel.

After their return from a short trip, Dr. and Mrs. Hedges will reside at 703 Watchung avenue.

NOTT AGENT SAYS HE HAD TO 'DIG'

Robert C. Woodhouse Claims New Improvement Cost Him $500

OFFERS EXPLANATION

Again Claims the New Apparatus is on its Way, But Councilmen Say "They're Still From Missouri and Will Have to Be Shown."

Failure to secure plausible reasons for the long-drawn out delay in the arrival of the city's new Nott fire engine from the company's representative in this city prompted an article in this paper Thursday afternoon which resulted in the following reply being submitted by Robert C. Woodhouse:

"In answer to an article appearing in your issue of the 28th inst., I beg to state that you have evidently been misinformed as to the facts in the case regarding the delay in the delivery of the new Nott Motor Pumping Engine. Having had no interview with your representatives for some time I am at a loss to understand where your information came from.

"In order that you may be acquainted with the facts I take pleasure in giving to you the following information.

"At the time the proposal of the Nott Fire Engine Co. for building an engine for Plainfield was made, the factory was working on a number of improvements of great importance. It took the Council some time to act upon the proposal of the various companies bidding and when the contract was finally awarded to the Nott Company they had in the meantime perfected and brought out their new silent six motor pronounced by experts a wonderful advance in motor construction. The writer upon hearing of the success of the new motor persuaded the company to install it in the Plainfield engine after having obtained the consent of the fire committee. Changes of this character require time. Since then several new improvements have been brought out which have been added to the Plainfield engine so that instead of being, as intimated in your article, behind the times it is strictly up to the minute and represents the highest type of perfected construction.

"These improvements have entailed an additional personal expense to the writer of over $500 over and above what was called for in the contract. This he has gladly paid in order that Plainfield might have the best.

"The record of the present engine in service is one to be proud of. In nearly a year of service it has never failed to answer an alarm immediately nor to pump as long as required and is in perfect condition at the present time to do any duty it is called upon to perform. This is in marked contrast to the experience of some other cities that have purchased apparatus of other makes.

"The engine is now completed and on the way here and should reach Plainfield in a few days. I may add that the contract price of the present engine is $8,000 and that the Nott Fire Engine Co. is not taking any contracts at the present time for less than $9,000, so that Plainfield is being well reimbursed for the delay in delivery.

"Your reputation in the past for fairness leads me to believe that you would not wish any injustice done either to me or to the Nott Fire Engine Co."

Interviews with Councilmen Chas. C. Graves and John H. Cose, of the councilmanic fire committee, this morning failed to reveal substantiation for Mr. Woodhouse's explanation. Both stated that the Nott engine was due to arrive in this city on or before October 15 in accordance with the terms of the contract and they are at a loss to understand the three months' delay. The matter of requesting authorization from the committee for the installation of the new motor in the machine was presented two weeks after the contract had been signed, according to Mr. Cose, and was acted upon immediately. It was stated at that time that the improvement would entail an extra expenditure of $500, but nothing was said about the bearing of the expense by Mr. Woodhouse personally.

"Even if this additional feature was to be made," said Mr. Cose, "there is no reason for the three months' delay and persistent inquiry on the part of the councilmen and others interested has failed to bring out any plausible excuses."

Mr. Woodhouse states in his letter that the engine is now completed and on its way here, an intimation that has been made on several previous occasions.

They were allowed to go on suspended sentences with a warning.

ANNUAL EXHIBITION SUCCESSFUL EVENT

Many Saw Y. W. C. A. Members Do Class Work Last Night.

Under the supervision of Miss Elizabeth Wetherell, the local Y. W. C. A. members, last night, presented their annual exhibition in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, the affair being largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed. This event is yearly one of the most unique entertainments given in Plainfield and always attracts a record sized audience to the association rendezvous, the Y. W. C. A. gym not being large enough to accommodate the spectators. Calisthenics, recreative games and marching featured the program, all of which was personally directed by Miss Wetherell.

The girls in the various classes gave excellent demonstrations of fancy dancing and figure marching and their work savored of the thorough coaching they have been subjected to under the physical instructor's care. The work presented, last night, was a direct example of that done in the regular classes and gave the parents and friends of the members an opportunity to ascertain just what is being done for girls in the Y. W. C. A. A basketball game, the complete account of which will be found on another page, culminated the program. The recreative indoor games played by the smaller members of the gym classes exemplified the entertainmnt provided the youngsters at each class meeting and these added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

The dances were executed in a clever and finished style and not a single hitch occured to mar the excellence of the presentations. Miss Margaret Hawkins played the piano accompaniments.

The program follows: Marching, willow and drill; "La Cachuca," Spanish dance; "The Crested Hen," Danish Folk dance; "The Hussar," Hungarian dance representing the gar air of a soldier on a holiday; "Reaping the Flax," Swedish Folk dance, the figures representing the picking of flax, placing it on the loom, the spinning wheel and finally the shuttle weaving the cloth; game, German bat ball; club swinging; Allegretto; game, relay race.

RECKLESS DRIVING COST TAXICAB CHAFFEUR $10

Admitting his culpability in knocking down a bicycle rider, and continuing on his way, George Moore, driver of a taxicab, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, and ordered to pay a fine of $10 or spend forty days in the county jail. He liquidated the ten spot.

Moore drove a car that hit August Meyer on East Front street, near Washington, during the early part of the week. Meyer was uninjured but his wheel was wrecked in the crash.

DRIVER OF TAXI FREED TO AWAIT JURY ACTION

Bail to the amount of $1,500 was furnished in the Union County Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday afternoon, by Mrs. Mary Higgins, aunt of John Currin, the local taxicab driver whose machine struck and fatally injured George Gaskill in Park avenue last Saturday night. The boy was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court yesterday, and pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter, through his counsel, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr. When arraigned before Judge James C. Connolly in Elizabeth, after being remanded to the county court by the local magistrate, the youth made a similar plea and he will be at liberty pending the consideration of his case by the Union County Grand Jury.

There are two witnesses in the case, both of whom exonerate the driver from all blame in the accident and it is thought that the Grand Jury will fail to return an indictment on the charge. Gaskill died yesterday morning, as the result of injuries received.

PILLKALLEN NOW HELD BY RUSSIANS

Shelling Causes Germans to Retire—Czar's Troops Close In on Insterburg.

BOMBS STRIKE OSTEND

English Aeroplane Fleet Reported to Have Shelled That City and Zeebrugge — Germans Chased Three of Them Out to Sea.

London, Jan. 30.—A news agency despatch from Petrograd says that the Russians occupied Pillkallen after a day's shelling. The garrison suffered heavily before retiring. Of the population of 6,000, only 300 women and children and aged persons remained.

The Germans have strong defenses northward of the Mazurian lakes region to Insterburg along the Angerapp River, but they are comparatively weak farther northward to Tilsit.

Another despatch from Petrograd says that the Russians are steadily closing in on Insterburg (East Prussia) from the north, east and southeast. Tilsit is virtually surrounded and the Russians there are in a position to threaten the left wing of the Germans defending the line of Pillkallen-Lasdehnen.

In the Carpathians matters are going entirely in favor of the Russians. An official government messenger reports serious disturbances in Hungary's wing, owing to a scarcity of provisions.

The Times' Petrograd correspondent, referring to the fact that Tilsit, East Prussia, is mentioned for the first time in connection with the Russian operations, says he considers that important operations are imminent.

The correspondent says he believes the Niemen river is sufficiently frozen to admit of the passage of troops and artillery, which alone would suffice to explain the movement north of Tilsit.

On the other hand, the Koenigsberg garrison is probably so depleted by drafts for the front west of the Vistula River that the Germans seriously menace the Russian right flank.

The Russian design, the correspondent continues, clearly is to outflank the Germans posted in the Mazurian lake region and thus to overrun East Prussia. The latest Russian moves are intended as a counter to the Austro-German concentration in the Carpathians.

Wireless advices from Berlin say that of seven English aeroplanes which bombarded Ostend and Zeebrugge, three failed to return. German aircraft surrounded these three and chased them into the open sea.

The news of the new Russian success over the Turks in Persia is not fully confirmed here, but it is generally credited that Tabriz has been reoccupied. In view of the fact that it was known the Russians were advancing on that city and had already defeated the Turks at Sofian within 15 miles of Tabriz.

Paris, Jan. 30.—The French War Office gave out the following statement at 3 p. m. today:

"The day of the 29th was calm all over the battle front. In Belgium artillery combats have taken place. Before Kuinchy, near La Bassee, the British troops repulsed the attacks of three German battalions, the enemy suffering heavy losses. To the north of Arras, near Neuvilles Vaast, our heavy artillery got the range of the German batteries and blew up an ammunition wagon.

"In the sector of Albert, of Roye, of Soissons, of Craonne, of Rheims and of Perthes there have been some artillery combats, often very violent.

"In the Woevre region, near Flirey, the Germans have blown up a mine intended to destroy our trenches, but have failed and the German trenches were destroyed by the explosion. There is nothing to report on the rest of the front."

Amsterdam, Jan. 30.—A femaine exists in Charleroi, where the inhabitants since the beginning of January have been living on an allowance of 130 grammes of bread each day.

Athens, Jan. 30.—Turkish troops operating along the Suez Canal were shelled by a British cruiser. The Turks were attempting an attack on Bir Helefi, southeast of El Kantarah, and were forced to retire.

Washington, Dec. 30.—Despatches from the United States cruiser Tennesee to the Navy Department today told of the vessel's arrival at Alexandria, Egypt, with 1,200 refugees, most of them from Jaffa, Syria. This contingent brings the number of refugees rescued by the cruiser up to approximately 2,500.

GEORGE MILLER'S LIFE SAVED BY PEAK OF CAP

George H. Miller, of New Market road, a trainman on the Philadelphia and Reading train which leaves Jersey City at 7:12 in the evening, was not injured Thursday evening in the manner stated. Reports throughout the day had it that Miller stuck his head out of the door of the baggage car as it was passing through Lorraine and was struck by a mail catcher. The facts are that a knuckle of the coupling of one of the trains broke at Lorraine. The train was stopped to detach the car and after it had been detached Miller was given an order to pull the bellrope of the train to signal the engineer to test his brakes. As he was mounting the iron ladder-like steps of a blind baggage car to do this an iron mail catcher, which had not been fastened properly swung down and struck him on the forehead, crumpling him to the ground in a heap. It is said that the peak of Miller's cap was the only thing that saved him from being instantly killed. After a vain attempt to restore Miller to consciousness the crew lifted him aboard the train and he was taken to Plainfield where an ambulance was awaiting his arrival. Upon his arrival at the hospital he was placed on an operating table for a careful examination. He regained consciousness at 10:15.

From that time he recuperated rapidly and was able to leave the hospital with his aunt, Mrs. W. R. Hetfield, around noon.

Last evening, outside of feeling dizzy at time and having a headache, he was little the worse for the occurrence. Mr. Miller's wife, who is visiting his father at Waldron, N. Y., does not know of the accident as yet.

Haight Harry Tomlinson and William Pidlington, wore sprays of sweet peas As to the suppers, suffice it to say that the women of New Market sustained their past reputation. Prior to the floor being cleared for dancing the retiring president of the department, Abram G. Nelson, was presented with a handsome silver loving cup The presentation speech was made by Albert Herlich. Paul Meyers, the new president of the department, was called upon for a speech and he responded ably. The music was furnished by Paroubek's Plainfield orchestra.

ENGAGED COUPLE MARRY BY PROXY

Brooklynite Represents Bridegroom Located In Java.

HOLD CEREMONY IN DENVER

Similar Service In Semarang—War Prevented Marriage In Holland Last July—Queen Grants Dispensation. Dutch Law Ironclad Regarding Landing of Nonmarried Women.

Through a special dispensation by Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, Miss Eugenia Campbell of Colorado Springs was married in Denver, Colo., by proxy to John Pieter Scholten, a young Hollander located in Semarang, Java. The ceremony was performed in a parlor at the Brown Palace hotel in Denver, and a similar ceremony was performed simultaneously in Semarang, 10,000 miles away.

Harvey V. Deuell, a Brooklyn young man, now engaged in newspaper work in Denver, was the proxy bridegroom in Denver; in Java some girl, unknown to Miss Campbell, stood beside Scholten. At the Denver ceremony Miss Elanor McFall was maid of honor and Russell Chellgard best man. A sister of Miss Campbell and another young girl, in Dutch costume, were bridesmaids.

The Rev. David L. Fouse of the First Reformed church, Denver, performed the ceremony. The conventional wedding service was slightly altered to make it clear that Deuell was acting solely as proxy for Scholten.

A large group of local society folk witnessed the ceremony, and after it was over the bridal party went to the theater. The bride was given in marriage by Colonel Gideon B. McFall of Denver, and her mother, Mrs. Charles Campbell, also attended her.

The bride left for San Francisco to sail for Java. Immediately after her arrival a second wedding ceremony will be performed, with the bride and bridegroom standing side by side. Military splendor and a lengthy church service will mark the event.

Miss Campbell and Scholten met in Cripple Creek in December, 1913. She was there on a visit with her mother. He was a health seeker and member of a tourist party from California. While serving as manager of a coffee plantation in Sumatra, Scholten's health broke down, and he came to the United States to rest and recuperate.

Engagement Announced.

In July, after being acquainted with Miss Campbell for a scant seven months, Scholten asked her to marry him. She consented, and her mother gave them her blessing.

The wedding date was fixed for December at the home of the bridegroom's parents in Holland. Scholten sailed from San Francisco Sept. 3 for his post in Java. Miss Campbell made plans for her journey to Holland.

But mined seas and the perils of ocean travel, results of the European war, caused her to abandon her trip; also Scholten, an honorary officer of the Dutch army, was put under military orders and held in reserve by the home government. It was then that the proxy wedding was arranged.

Dutch law relating to the landing of unmarried women in its colonies is ironclad. All such who arrive in its colonies are held for sixty days, virtually in quarantine. They are under constant observation of government officials during that time, and at the end of the probation period, if the officials are satisfied, the newcomers are permitted to travel at will through the country.

But there is another law—that of proxy marriage—by which the rigid immigration regulations may be circumvented. Scholten had the matter presented to Queen Wilhelmina. Credentials for Miss Campbell proving satisfactory, the queen gave her consent to the marriage, and the Dutch minister at Washington was authorized to issue the necessary papers.

Miss Campbell, granddaughter of Alexander Campbell, founder of the Campbellites, and daughter of the late Charles Campbell, who was a prominent and wealthy business man of Colorado Springs, is a fine type of the wholesome American girl. She was born in Clinton, Mo., twenty years ago and received her education chiefly at a private school for young ladies in Lexington, Mo. Four years ago the family moved to Colorado Springs.

REAPING BENEFIT.

From the Experience of Plainfield People.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of Plainfield residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

Mrs. William E. Gardner, 322 East Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I suffered a great deal from rheumatic pains across my back. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action. I was in a miserable condition for months. Nothing I tried seemed to give me any relief until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Randolph's Drug Store. They seemed to take hold at once, banishing the rheumatic pains and regulating the action of my kidneys. They improved my condition so much that I soon felt like a different woman. I will always endorse Doan's Kidney Pills."

THE PLAINFIELD THEATRE

The program of events at the Plainfield Theatre for next week include three legitimate attractions, in addition to the feature photo-plays scheduled for the other nights. Al. G. Field's Greater Minstrels will make their annual appearance Wednesday afternoon and night, and Gus Hill's newest production, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," will hold the boards Friday night, and the rollicking musical comedy, "The Little Cafe," is booked for Saturday afternoon and night. The picture portion of the week's calendar will start off Monday and Tuesday with Robert Hilliard in his greatest dramatic success, "A Fool There Was." This play ran for an entire season in New York and drew capacity houses for many weeks in Chicago, Philadelphia and all the large cities of the country. Thursday's picture offering will be another of those films that have made the Plainfield Theatre the city's most popular amusement place. It is entitled "When Broadway Was a Trail," and those who know the Broadway of today will find much to wonder and marvel at in this wonderful motion production.

"Everybody listens to the band," is a truism which A. G. Field, the foremost minstrel producer, says he has had emphasized for him by the countless opportunities to observe that everybody does, and almost under any conceivable situation or condition. Recognizing the unrivalled popularity of the band, Mr. Field has arranged to make band concerts an exceptionally prominent feature of his tour this season. For this purpose the A. G. Field Minstrels will be accompanied by the Billy Busch Banner Band, which Mr. Field has engaged for the full forty weeks. It will give two free public concerts each day, one at 11:45 a. m., and one at 7:00 p. m. In each of the concerts, Mr. Busch will be heard in his famous solo renditions. Billy Busch's Banner Band is one of the most successful in the country, and has a reputation equal to many like musical organizations which are relied upon as the sole attraction to furnish an evening's entertainment. Although of commanding merit, the concerts by this band are but an extra and free feature acting as an index to the high quality of the other entertainment offered by the Al. G. Field Minstrels, which appears here Wednesday afternoon and evening, February 3.

"It's a Long Way to Tipperary" is the popular title of Gus Hill's new big production fashioned for the amusement of the masses. The book is by William Anthony McGuire, and the production by Gus Hill. Some startling scenes of war are promised. A realistic panorama of troops in the trenches swept by the deadly rattling guns. It will stir the patriotic sentiment of all nationalities yet offend none. It's coming to the Plainfield Theatre, Friday evening, February 5.

Not a home in this city but has its quota of discarded furniture, rugs, stoves perhaps, a wheelbarrow maybe.

A few cents for a Press want ad and some one who needs the very article that lies rotting in your garret will call and pay you for it.

You are better off—new owner is pleased—and the article itself is contributing to the reduction of the high cost of living.

Al G. Fields, in Al G. Fields Minstrels, at Plainfield Theatre, next Wednesday, Matin and Night.

ADAMS AND CANAUGHTON HEADQUARTER CHAMPIONS

A "500" tourney, which has been in progress among the men at fire headquarters for the past month, was decided last night, by what is considered to be a record game. It took place between Paul Adams and Martin Connaughton on one side and Harry Wierenga and James McDonough on the other. The time required was from 6:40 until 11:10 and a total of fifty-seven hands were dealt. Adams and Conaughton finally executed some scientific plays, and won out by a narrow margin. The victory also brought them the championship of the tourney.

Several remarkable records have been hung up in the course of tourneys at headquarters in the course of the past few years, but the match of last night stands without a par. Adams and Connaughton are now out with a challenge to all comers.

VETERANS MAN OREGON ON PANAMA CANAL TRIP.

Sailors on Famous Voyage of 1898 Will Be Permitted to Enlist.

When the battleship Oregon goes to Panama to participate in the formal opening of the canal she will not only convey Rear Admiral Charles E. Clark, retired, but members of the original crew who served on the ship during the war with Spain.

Secretary Daniels announced that he had authorized the commanding officer of the Oregon to enlist on board honorably discharged men who made the famous trip around South America on the Oregon in 1898 to form part of her crew on the trip through the canal. While these men will have to enlist for a four year term, arrangements will be made to discharge those who desire it on the return of the ship to the west coast.

These men will be required to present themselves on board the Oregon at Puget sound navy yard, at San Francisco or at San Diego and show their discharge papers. They will be required to pay their own traveling expenses to and from the ship, but this is only because there is no authority by which the navy can pay such expenses.

Rear Admiral Clark, who commanded the Oregon on her famous voyage, will not command the ship on her trip through the canal, but will be on deck as the honored guest of the nation. The Oregon was selected to lead the naval procession through the canal to illustrate the value of the canal as shortening the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific. She broke the record making the trip from San Francisco to Jupiter inlet, Florida, in sixty-six days, of which fifty-three were devoted to steaming and thirteen were spent in port for coaling.

Today the battleship New York could make the trip under forced draft by way of the canal from San Francisco to Jupiter inlet in twelve days.

"Compare this," said Secretary Daniels, "with the sixty-six days required by the Oregon. The canal will not, as a former president said, 'double the power of the navy,' but it greatly increases its power to defend both coasts."

PEACE MEETING.

There will be a mass meeting in the interest of the "peace movement" at the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue, Sunday afternoon, February 7, at 3:15 o'clock. There will be an address by J. Augustus Cadwallader, executive secretary of the Pennsylvanian Peace Society. The public is cordially invited.

WOMEN AND THE BALLOT.

The arguments for and against universal suffrage are usually arguments for and against equal rights; and are often unavailing, whichever side of the question is being maintained, because of a failure to define in advance what we mean by "equal."

Professor William James once gave the following illustration of the necessity of defining terms before starting an argument. Four college professors were in camp one summer when a squirrel appeared on the trunk of a big tree. One of them took up his gun, but the squirrel started around the tree before he could fire, so he followed after, but the squirrel always kept just ahead of him, and finally he arrived at his starting point without ever having had a chance to shoot. He had certainly gone around the tree but he and his associates could never agree as to whether he had gone around the squirrel. Two of them were sure he had and two were sure he hadn't. It never occurred to them to define what they meant by "around."

By equal rights for women do we mean rights identical with those which men enjoy, or do we mean a fair balance of equality after taking into considerations other rights and obligations which spring from sex alone? I suppose no one will contend that all the rights and obligations of men and women are identical, or should be!

Thus we dispose immediately of the well-worn argument that if women vote they must also be soldiers, police the streets at night, serve on juries; and be permitted to become governors and presidents. There is a sound distinction between equality of right and identity of function; and the public law as well as the private law must recognize the inherently distinctive spheres of activity for men and for women. Equality means justice. It may be unjust that laws which seriously affect women should be made without their consent; but there is no injustice in having the public service officered by men in some departments and by women in others—or even not at all.

It would seem more exact to call voting a duty rather than a right or privilege; that is, the price paid for our right to share in the benefits of laws made by all of us for the protection of all of us, rather than the consideration received for political duties performed.

On the suffrage question most men scrambled up on the fence long ago; and most of them are still there, and apparently intend to stay a while. There is no phenomenon in the spectacle; any more than in the spectacle of women clamoring for the vote while men still have to be fairly hauled out of their houses and marched up to the polls. Some men are unconvinced that women want to vote, and are sure that if they do want to vote it is chiefly because they can't. I have no statistics for proof, but I have myself always doubted whether women as a class will ever show as consistent an interest as men in routine government; or in politics as a game. And there is a good deal of the game element even in sound, healthy politics. The thing must always appeal more to men than to women, and yet it is precisely in the indifference of men in their public affairs that democracy breaks down.

On the other hand women should be more easily aroused by any well defined issue of great moral or social import; and it is incontestable that the voting of women has always helped on moral issues. One of the very first things which the legislature did in Colorado, after women acquired the vote, was to make fathers and mothers joint guardians of their children, with equal powers. In other equal suffrage states we observe the beneficient effect on legislation in laws relating to the morals, health and industrial and economic welfare of women and children. The Juvenile Court in Denver owed its existence to women who held the balance of power over the machine. Indirectly good results follow, in the higher grade of personal character of men who go before the people for election in states where women vote.

The argument that woman suffrage would increase the illiterate vote is no argument against the right, or the duty, of women as a class to vote. Yet many of us would prefer, were it possible, first to eliminate half the men who now vote but don't know how! Perhaps some day we may be able to devise some qualification test, applicable alike to men and women, which shall require of all who register that they be reasonably posted in their public affairs. When that day arrives, by all means let us have a hard and fast rule that all who pass the examination and fail thereafter to register and vote shall be barred from voting at the next succeeding election.

Many observers have predicted for a restricted suffrage, open to men and women alike, an improvement not only in the legal status of women but in their social position as the equals and companions of men, once they share with them the ordinary responsibilities of citizenship. The notion that woman's sphere is bounded by natural laws which lie far below the surface of political laws is, as Mills pointed out long ago, the same old argument which from time immemorial has justified all kinds of oppression. So also the plea that women on the whole are not the intellectual equals of men. Their intellectual inferiority, so far as ever it has existed, has been solely a matter of education and opportunity, accounted for by the evolution of human activities. I think it was Goldsmith who said that the careful matron and prudent wife are more serviceable in life than petticoated philosophers or blustering heroines. But while his view was that women should be held within the limits of domesticity, he forgot that all women are not within the domain of domesticity. I have not the figures from the last national census, but in 1900 there were nearly 5,000,000 women breadwinners over sixteen years of age in this country, or one in every five women, against 23,000,000 men bread-winners. In profesional work there were half as many women as men.

Year by year we witness woman's entire capacity for almost any undertaking, as new openings are made for her. If she has been slow in attaining the highest rank in most forms of human endeavor, this has largely been due to the disabilities imposed upon her. If there have been no women to compare with Homer or Roosevelt, it does not follow that there never will be!

It may be doubted whether the voting woman will necessarily find herself a strap-hanger in our crowded trolleys. Men are not at bottom so different from what they were in the days of chivalry. There will be gentlemen wherever there are gentlewomen. The woman who elbows herself rudely into line at the primaries will be accorded the usual privileges of men in the line; but I fancy that all women who are really entitled to the prerogatives of their sex, will have them despite their interest or participation in matters of public concern. We may need to readjust our way of looking at things; but nature will not easily be overthrown. Alas for the political bosses who may hereafter find themselves arrayed against some charming female opponent! This is perhaps the soundest argument against the participation of women in politics; for disaster will overwhelm us when government is run on sentiment or sentimentality;

It seems clear that women have a right to vote if they want, but if it is only a right there is some excuse for the reluctance on the part of men to force it upon them. If on the other hand it is their duty, what difference does it make whether they want to vote or not?

In any event, we men are at least in accord with Dryden:

"As for women, though we seem to scorn and flout 'em
We may live with, but cannot live without em."

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY "A DAY AT SCHOOL"

"A Day at School," being typical of the old-fashioned country school, was given at Grace M. E. church last night under the auspices of the Epworth League. Members of the league took the part of children, while Ben Schuck represented the schoolmaster. An amusing program followed. Games were played before "school went in" and then there was the usual fun of a country school room.

The schoolmaster on several occasions was forced to reprimand the "bad boys" for their violations of the rules. Then the "children" presented a program of recitations and songs, a singing class being a feature. At recess each one was given a piece of apple pie topped off with ice cream and coffee. Those who had charge of the affair comprised Miss Stella Vermeule, Miss Mary Steiner, Ben Schuck and Raymond Miller.

EAGLES' GAME POSTPONED.

The Eagles' League bowling match scheduled for last night between the Progress and Newark teams, at the White Palace alleys, Newark, was postponed and will be rolled Wednesday night, February 3.

PATERSON IS OUSTED FROM FIRST PLACE

Harry Taylor Still Leads the Individual List of Pinners.

Although the Paterson team has been ousted from first place in the Senior B. P. O. Elks' Bowling League, by the New Brunswick crew, Harry Taylor, of the former team, still clings to his position at the top of the individual list with an average of 195.15. This is a small drop from last week as Taylor rolled one of his poorest matches during the past week. Coyne, of New Brunswick, and Corydon, of Jersey City, are both hot on the leaders' trail, having marks of 193.22 and 193.4 respectively.

After leading his men all the time since the beginning of the league, Captain "Bill" Nash, of the Plainfield team, dropped down to fourth place among the locals, from 182.5 to 179.30. In the game with Newark Thursday night, Nash rolled one of his poorest games. Johnny Campbell now leads the locals with an average of 180.24, while Vail is next to him, four pins in the rear. Chief Kiely is Plainfield's third man in the standings with an average of 180.2. Roth's high score mark of 267 remained during the week and the highest mark made was far from it. SIXTH STRAIGHT FOR RED AND BLUE FIVE Thrilling Contest Played on Morristown Y. M. C. A. Court Last Night.

In a very rough and exciting basketball game at Morristown, last night, the Plainfield High School boys' basketball team captured its sixth straight victory by defeating the team of Morristown High School by the score of 29 to 22. The first half of the game was very close, although rather clow, because it took the local boys the entire first half to get warmed up after their long cold ride in the automobiles. The second half was rougher and much faster, with Plainfield having the edge on their opponents all the way. In the middle of this period Butera and Peacock collided while running to get the ball and Butera was knocked out for several minutes. He came back in the game and seemed none the worse for his collision. By clean, fast passing and accurate shooting Plainfield drew away from its opponents and had gained a comfortable lead when the whistle blew for the end of the game Plainfield led at the end of the first half by the score of 11 to 10.

With the beginning of the second half the local boys started to increase their score and slowly drew away from their opponents. Five minutes before the end of the game Ryder replaced Peacock at guard and promptly added two points to the Plainfield score.

The score follows:

INDIVIDUALISM AGAIN INJECTED INTO SPORT

Return of the Misses Hummel to Basketball Signal for Y. W. C. A. Win.

The girls' basketball team of the Plainfield High School was given a severe beating by the team of the Y. W. C. A. in the Y. M. C. A. gym last night. The final score was 35 to 5. The first half was played under the regular girls' rules, with lines, but the second half of the contest the teams played the boys' rules. In the initial period of the contest a foul goal by Miss Crane was the only score that the High School girls could register, while their opponents ran up a tally of fifteen points. The foul shooting of Miss Helen Hummel was the feature of the game. In the first half she caged eleven fouls out of the fifteen points scored by her team. During the first period the guarding of both teams was very close, Miss Ida Hummel caging the only two field goals made.

The playing in the second half was more open and many more field goals were made.

Sassy Busher Will Get Real Chance to Show His Goods.

W. P. Rehg, known when he broke into the big league first as the "sassiest" kid the game had known, has been turned over to the New York American league team by the Boston Red Sox. Rehg played in eighty-four games last year and acquired a batting average of .218. He played forty-two games in the outfield, during which he made forty-five outs and had four assists and one error. This made him rank third in fielding.

joined the Pittsburgh Pirates a couple of years ago he was called on as a pinch hitter. The umpire asked him his name, and Rehg told him. The umpire did not clearly understand, so he said, "How do you spell it?" "I don't spell it," replied the busher; "I whistle it." "Who are you batting for?" asked the umpire. "Well, old top," replied Rehg. "I thought I would make a hit for myself."

And he did. However, the Pirates at the time were well fixed with outfielders, and Rehg was sent back to the minors for further seasoning. The Boston Red Sox got him last year, and his showing is such that he gets another chance with a team that has no stars and where he will not be subjected to the hardest competition.

BILLY SUNDAY, REVIVALIST.

Former Player Is Holding Successful Meetings In Philadelphia.

Billy Sunday, once a baseball player, is now a revivalist, which partially answers the question as to what becomes of old players. For some weeks he has been conducting services in Philadelphia and has been unusually successful. He is planning an assault on New York if the proper arrangements can be made.

Sunday recently took sides in the baseball war and advised players to stick to organized ball. He declared his belief that the Federal league was likely to be harmful to players, and he does not think that the demoralization the new league has caused can have other than a harmful effect on the game.

When he was a player Sunday was regarded as a pious sort of chap, and his presence had a softening effect on the other players. He did not lecture them, but it was known that he did not like bad language, and as a rule his teammates were careful of their words when he was around.

Bundle Day---Thursday

FEBRUARY 4th

Come Join This Worthy Movement

Help the Needy Unemployed of Greater New York

Mayor Mitchell has appointed a committee consisting of Mrs. James Speyer, Chairman, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Willard Straight, Mrs. Cooper-Hewitt, Mrs. J. Cabot Ward, Mrs. Vincent Astor, and Mrs. Francis Kellor. This committee will go into the byways and hedges of distress, and do their best to relieve the situation by finding work for as many of the 265,000 unemployed people who are this very minute in Greater New York.

But there are many who cannot wait. We must act immediately, so while the work of investigation is being done the situation is going to be relieved by the efforts of every one of us.

You may begin at once. Rummage through your wardrobe, your closets. Pick out the best clothes you can afford to do without; overcoats, wraps, suits, dresses, skirts, shirt wasits, shirts, underwear, collars, hats, stockings, sweaters, shawls, shoes; wrap them in a strong paper bundle—send the bundle by your children to your own church, or mail it by parcel post to Bundle Day Headquarters, 210 Fifth Avenue, New York.

You good people who live in the Suburbs of New York, but who go to New York to seek pleasure and to do your shopping know little of the great need that presently exists. Perhaps the men in your family who go to town to business see more of it and will be glad to lend a willing hand towards relieving such a pitiable need so close to home.

Among these 265,000 people there are some in dire distress. Most are hungry—except when charity feeds them. Most are cold with barely sufficient clothing to hide their nakedness. Others (not yet in the last stages) have not fit clothing in which to apply for work. It is sad but nevertheless true that a man or woman who is down at the heel and raggedly dressed fails to get a position. So get your bundles ready and help them.

Go into any lodging house, the immigration quarters, or Ellis Island. Go into the soup houses, tenement houses, along the walks, through the alleys, into the congested river districts where humanity swarms. Ask this man to take off his threadbare coat and put on a warm one, and a shirt, for probably you will find he has no shirt under his tattered coat. Ask that woman with a child in her arms to unwrap her shawl. More than likely it is the only covering of her shivering shoulders. People, this is not fancy or romance—it is grim tragedy. Get your bundles ready at once.

The Mayor of New York and his committee ask your immediate help. The newspapers were asked to contribute advertising space to this appeal. They have responded gloriously — every newspaper in New York, Brooklyn and your own town.

Be generous; counsel with your own hearts; think of your own children; put yourself in the place of these poor suffering people. Give all you can. If everybody does that the response will be enough to turn despair into hope and hope into salvation. Here is a chance to see what you can do on short notice to relieve a desperate situation.

Cincinnati, a city of only 450,000, collected 204,000 bundles of clothing in one day. We are going to try for one million bundles. Remember, one million! Let yours be one of the million. Get it ready at once and send it to your church where all arrangements have been made to collect it—on Thursday, February 4th. Remember the day—February 4th.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful— all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and further more, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIELD

DETAILS OF NEW BOROUGH SCHOOL

Will Be Two Story Structure With One Hundred and Eight Feet Frontage.

COST ABOUT $27,500

Assembly Room Designed to Meet Social Requirements in Keeping With Modern Ideas—Full Capacity 225.

Bids for the erection of the proposed new school at Harrison avenue and Greenbrook road have been advertised for by the North Plainfield Board of Education and the actual work will be a certainty in the near future. When the structure is completed, it will not only be adequate to care for all the children in that section of the borough for many years to come, but will also provide a social centre for the adult residents. The authorities have so arranged the interior plans that a large assembly room can be utilized for meetings, dances, and entertainments, in keeping with the advanced ideas in the use of educational buildings. The city schools have been used for these purposes for a long time, especially the High and Washington structures. Meetings have been held in the Somerset School, but it can in no wise meet the community's requirements. "Prideville" citizens will now have a gathering place and the Board of Education will aid in providing recreation affairs under the head of social welfare.

The proposed school will be two stories in heighth, with a total frontage of 108 feet and a depth of forty feet. It will be of brick construction with interlocking tile. The exterior trimmings have not been fully decided upon, the extent depending upon the contractor's figures. The interior arrangement calls for five class rooms on the first floor, each with a seating capacity of forty-five pupils. The assembly room on the second floor will seat comfortably about 350 persons. In addition there will be a commodious room for the use of the principal, teachers', retiring room, store room and pupils' cloak rooms. The fireproof idea is to prevail in all material, only a comparatively small amount of wood being called for. The stairways will be of iron and asbestos filling is to be a predominant factor wherever there is the slightest chance of communicating flame.

Special attention has been given the necessary heating and ventilation. The former will be accomplished by a modern radial coil system, which does away with all radiators in the rooms, the air being first heated by steam and then forced into the cold area. An electrically controlled system of fans, will automatically purify the atmosphere whenever necessary. Hygienic safety is also contained in the desk equipment, as only the anti-dust holding styles are to be used.

The architectural plans have been prepared by John N. Pierson and Son, of Perth Amboy, a firm which makes a specialty of school buildings. They estimate the cost of the building described at $27,500. The building committee of the Board of Education at the present time is composed of J. A. Van Mater, chairman; Francis Sill and Charles Holstein, and these men have already given much of their time and ability in planning the structure.

APARTMENT HOUSE FOR FOURTH WARD POSSIBLE

An apartment house with all improvements is to be the outcome of the improvements to the dwelling at 461-463 West Front street, if the present plans of the owners, Liefke and Laing, are carried out. That concern now has plans out for extensive alterations to the present structure, as well as an extension to the front of the building, carrying the front of the house to the fence line. When the alterations have been completed, it will be three stories high, and will be one of the most imposing buildings of the neighborhood. Liefke and Laing are now securing bids on the work, and should the estimated cost of the improvements justify, the work will be started within the course of the near future. It is thought that the work will cost in the vicinity of $7,500.

This is but one of the several apartment houses being planned for this city during the coming season, although the others will be located in other sections of the city. There appears to be apparent lack of modern, up-to-date structures of this kind in the city, and further similar buildings would undoubtedly prove a wise investment.

BOOST IN WEEK'S BUILDING PERMITS

Building Operations Totals $54,585—Mostly in the East End.

Twelve dwellings to be erected by the Berry Building and Construction Company, in the First ward, forms the feature of the building permits as issued by Inspector T. O. Doane, this week. The total expenditure for the structures covered by three permits issued during that time amount to $54,585, as against $10,128 for the remainder of the month. The total expenditures for the month of January now aggregate $64,713.

The houses to be erected by the Berry concern are to be constructed on Leland avenue, accupying the entire block between East Front and East Second streets, and will cost $4,500 each. They will be two and a half stories high. The houses will be of frame construction, will have a frontage of thirty-one feet and a depth of twenty-five feet. The base courses will be concrete, with brick and hollow cement block foundations. The framing work will be of hemlock and spruce, with shingled roofs. Steam heating systems will be installed. William H. Clum is the architect, while the mason contracts have been awarded to Cunniff Brothers. The owners will care for the carpentry work. The decision of the Berry concern to erect these dwellings is in keeping with the steady growth of the East End of town, which has experienced an abnormal development during the course of the past decade. The number of dwellings covered by this permit is more than one-third the number of houses erected in the First ward during the whole of last year.

The other two permits cover small buildings to be erected in the Second ward. Harry Buck is to erect a 10 by 10 foot frame storage shed at 1430 South avenue at a cost of $35. Isaac Farley, of Fanwood, will do the carpenter work. Mrs. Everts Tracey has been granted a permit for the erection of a garden house at 1009 Hillside avenue, the estimated cost of which has been placed at $550. The structure will be a frame affair, and will be hemlock with a shingle roof. The masonry contract has been awarded to Frank McInerney, while the carpenter work will be cared for by Alexander Milne.

ACTIVITY AMONG COUNTY BUILDERS

Much Ado Along the Building Line Just at the Present Time.

Building and construction activities, as well as realty operations, throughout Union county have now passed the low water mark, and are well under way toward the resumption of normal conditions. In another column is found the realty transfers from this end of Union county, the number recorded within the course of the past week or ten days clearly indicating that things are once more nearing a state that gives great encouragement.

During the week ending last Saturday, seven building contracts calling for the expenditure of $9,919 were filed with the county clerk. Of these, one was from this city, being that of John J. Basini with Samuel Titus, of Dunellen, for the alteration work to the building at Prescott place and West Fourth street. The estimated cost of the work is placed at $2,000.

Construction work in other municipalities, as well as this city, are on the upward trend. The Methodists, of Linden, are looking forward to the erection of a new edifice during the course of the next few months, while Roselle Park, only during the past week voted for the erection of a $12,000 Borough Hall. The borough of Kenilworth is considering an addition to its school which will cost in the vicinity of $15,000. Fanwood township, Summit and New Providence are also considering school plans, while the excavation of the cellar for the Evergreen Avenue School in this city was started this week. With the advertising of the bids for the Federal postoffice building in this city scheduled to appear after the first of next month, the construction work in this vicinity holds out a promising season to the contractors.

—It pays to use the advertising columns of The Press.

—Classified advertising does not work miracles—it merely brings logical results. And these are more to be desired than miracles.

ANTICIPATE BOOM IN BOROUGH REALTY

Dunellenites Plan Erection of New Houses and Many Repairs.

Dunellen, that hustling suburb of Plainfield, which naturally anticipates another busy building season during the course of 1915, is now in a position to announce to outsiders that it is not waiting for the opening of spring to start the preparations necessary for such a boom. Already a number of new building, including several modern dwellings, are in the course of construction, while others are being planned by local contractors.

Three tracts of land will probably engage considerable attention from contractors and investors. The Equator Park land, where a large number of dwellings have been erected in the last few years, will again be the center of new construction work. The south side of the Central Railroad tracks will probably come in for a large share of attention this year, with a tract owned by a realty company, of which M. F. Gano, of this city, is head, is to be the center of much building, many lots having been disposed of during the past few months. The Columbia Park tract, owned by the Dunellen Home and Investment Company, has been cleared during the past two weeks, and is now in readiness for the opening of the construction season.

Among the buildings now in the course of construction is the dwelling on Mountain View terrace being erected by L. W. Theichler. Alberne H. Burdick is the contractor. Ground was recently broken for the business structure in North avenue, of which Paul Ratti is the owner. Charles Wrage is the general contractor for the work of this building, while the mason contract has been sub-let to Walter G. Clawson.

A number of repair and alteration jobs are also on, including the residence of Frank Peck, of New Market. Charles Wrage has the carpenter contract, Firman Gise the mason contract, and DeWitt C. Fulton the painting contract. The residence of Contractor J. Newton Apgar will also be repaired. Contractor Raymond Whitford is planning the erection of a dwelling for investment purposes.

Contractor Charles Wrage is erecting a dwelling on Second street, west of Washington avenue, for speculative purposes. Herman B. Eckert anticipates starting the construction of a house on Third street during the course of the next week or ten days. Dr. William J. Nelson has had work started on the rebuilding of the ice houses at New Market. The old houses were demolished in recent storms.

JUST NOTES

With the date of the opening of the bids for the proposed Harrison Avenue School, the borough, set as February 15, and Congressman Tuttle promising that the Federal Government will advertise for bids for the new postoffice building shortly after the first of the month, local craftsmen are now feeling more than hopeful over the prospects of the 1915 building season in this vicinity.

During last year the First and Fourth wards ran nip and tuck throughout the entire season in the matter of securing permits for the construction of dwellings within their respective bounds. The present season opens with the First ward in the lead with a permit for twelve houses before the Fourth ward secures even a permit for one.

With realty deals in this city and the adjacent territory being reported almost daily, it is hard to believe that 1915 will be anything but one of the busiest seasons this section has experienced in recent years. Certainly people are not investing in unimproved real estate without some indefinite incentive for so doing. This city, New Market, Dunellen and South Plainfield all appear to be centres for real estate activities these days.

The painters about the city appear to be the busiest of the building crafts at the present time, with a fair percentage of the men at work, considering the times.

Fanwood township has been resting upon her oars in the realty and building lines for several weeks, and is now about due for a break into the limelight again. The proposed school should come up again shortly.

—Any kind of worth-while property may be sold for what it is worth. There's no "impossible season" in the selling of real estate—if you are a clever classified advertiser.

BUILDING PICKING UP IN NEW YORK

Requirements Developed More Strength During the Past Week.

NO REACTION NOTICED

Money Freerer—Ernest R. Ackerman's Statement—Low Price in Materials is Prominent Now—Brokers Not Crowding Premiums.

New York, Jan. 30.—Building material requirements in the Metropolitan district developed more strength this week. No commodity showed a price reaction for the first time in seven months. Actual building construction work under way in the Metropolitan district, including Union county in the current week, is $13,546,695 as against $9,[illegible],792 in 1914, and $8,155,395 in 1913. Of the current total $5,391,300 is represented in deferred building plans now actually under way, making the net total for January in New York alone at $8,155,395 and for the Metropolitan district at $11,126,300, about 10.7 per cent. of the $50,000,000 in deferred building plans filed since July 31, 1914, is now under way.

Money is freer. More brokers have available building money and are therefore not crowding premiums. Accommodation fees are still exacted however, but they are less stringent. Interest rates are about the same at 5½ to 6 per cent. Loan fees now run at about 2 to 2½ per cent. as against 3 to 5 per cent. in November and December. The slump in the steel stock helped to strengthen the eastern mortgage market. Dodge Reports, Bradstreets and similar commercial agencies expect that January's national building record will show at least a lower per cent. decrease for January. It is significant that the large building material distributing houses are shutting off the customary mid-winter vacations of their sales forces.

Union labor headquarters in the building trades report an improving call for man. Manufacturers have completed their inventories. They found that they have worked off a fair percentage of their reserve supplies and are now desirous of moving quotations up.

This means that those who are desirous of taking advantage of the low price of materials now ruling will have to act quickly or they will find themselves in a rising market. Conditions are ripe for the market to advance slowly but steadily with decided jump at the beginning. Basic materials are no longer waiting upon the street market for this uplift in quotations because of the lethargy of the railroads in placing orders. Conditions are shaping themselves for basic commodities to take the lead in price ascendency for the first time in many years. Common brick, lath, lime, hygraded lime, plaster and wire reinforcements are expected to be the dominant factors in this movement.

Ernest R. Ackerman, president of the Lawrence Portland Cement Company, following a meeting of the board of directors of his company, a Siegfried, this week, analyzed the present situation in this department as follows:

"During the stagnation of general business, now happily passing away the Lehigh district, producing annually twenty-five million barrels of Portland cement, continued to manufacture and ship approximately 30 per cent. of the total production of cement in the United States. The total activity of this district was nearly 95 per cent. of that shown in 1913, and the year 1913 was the banner year for output.

"As the financial situation grows more favorable, investors turn to real estate, and naturally, the most sought for is real estate improved with fireproof structures. Anticipating a heavy demand for cement when spring arrives, we have been running for the past month at our full capacity in the clinker making departments in order to have a large supply of seasoned clinker on hand when the activity of summer building calls for quantity and quick delivery.

"In the Metropolitan district there is a distinct change in financial sentiment and optimism is replacing pessimism in all industrial lines.

"In my opinion the prevailing low prices for building materials of all kinds, such as tile, brick, lumber, etc., will soon have to give way to considerably higher quotations, since the time is close at hand when the inventor, with cash to build, will undoubtedly make his presence felt.

"We have learned by recent experience that all interests are inter-dependent and I, personally, feel very optimistic regarding the near future. There is a strong incentive among business men to pull together, and with all of us pulling there can be but one result, and that result will be commercial success.

"My experience in the cement industry for over a third of a century and the fact that I am able to make first hand comparisons of the use of Portland cement in over one hundred countries, convinces me that in the near future the people in the United States are going to awake to the great possibilities of 'Concrete for Permanence.' The result will be a strong demand for the higher grades of cement that have been on the market for more than ten years and an era of great activity will soon be under way.

"Just think of this, the per capita loss by fire in the United States is $2.51 per year as against only thirty-three cents in the cities of the six leading countries of Europe. This is because their buildings as a whole are of a more substantial fire resisting character.

"The increasing use of automobiles is going to enormously enlarge the demand for Portland cement. Every mile of concrete road built takes 3,000 barrels of cement as a minimum, and as the automobile industry is progressing by leaps and bounds and as motor trucks are being built to carry heavier loads, every locality not having the latest type of roadbed will have to make it anew and the only substantial foundation on which to place the wearing surface is a bed of concrete.

"Inasmuch as concrete road building throughout the country is in its infancy and as during the last year the Portland cement manufacturing plants ran exceeding 80 per cent. of capacity, I should not be surprised to see a shortage in the cement market by the first of August, owing to the increasing demand, among other things, for concrete for road construction."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Love of Labiskwee.

"YOU'RE the first intelligent man we've had," Snass complimented Smoke one night by the fire, "except old Four Eyes. The Indians named him so. He wore glasses and was short-sighted. He was a professor of zoology. My young men picked him up strayed from an expedition on the upper Porcupine.

"He was intelligent, yes; but he was also a fool. That was his weakness—straying. He knew geology, though, and working in metals. Over on the Luskwa, where there's coal, we have several creditable hand forges he made. He repaired our guns and taught the young men how. He died last year, and we really missed him. Strayed—that's how it happened—froze to death within a mile of camp."

It was on the same night that Snass said to Smoke:

"You'd better pick out a wife and have a fire of your own. You will be more comfortable than with those young bucks. The maidens' fires—a sort of feast of the virgins, you know—are not lighted until full summer and the salmon, but I can give orders earlier if you say the word."

Smoke laughed and shook his head.

"Remember," Snass concluded quietly, "Anton is the only one that ever got away. He was lucky, unusually lucky."

Her father had a will of iron, Labiskwee told Smoke. Everybody feared him. He was terrible when angry. There were the Porcupines. It was through them and through the Lusk was that Snass traded his skins at the posts and got his supplies of ammunition and tobacco. He was always fair, but the chief of the Porcupines began to cheat, and after Snass had warned him twice he burned his log village, and over a dozen of the Porcupines were killed in the fight. But there was no more cheating. Once when she was a little girl there was one white man killed while trying to escape. No; her father did not do it, but he gave the order to the young men. No Indian ever disobeyed her father.

And the more Smoke learned from her the more the mystery of Snass deepened.

"And tell me if it is true," the girl was saying, "that there was a man and a woman whose names were Paolo and Francesca and who greatly loved each other?"

Smoke nodded.

"Four Eyes told me all about it," she beamed happily. "And so he didn't make it up, after all. Then there is Tristan and Iseult, two Iseults. It was very sad. But I should like to love that way. Do all the young men and women in the world do that? They don't here. They just get married. They don't seem to have time.

"I am English, and I will never marry an Indian. Would you? That is why I have not lighted my maiden's fire. Some of the young men are bothering father to make me do it. Libash is one of them. He is a great hunter. And Mahkook comes around singing songs. He is funny. Tonight, if you come by my tent after dark, you will hear him singing out in the cold. But father says I can do as I please, and so I shall not light my fire. You see when a girl makes up her mind to get married that is the way she lets young men know. And how do you know when you are in love—like Paolo and Francesca, I mean?"

Smoke was disconcerted by the clear gaze of her blue eyes. "Why, they say," he stammered, "those who are in love say it, that love is dearer than life. When one finds out that he or she likes somebody better than everybody else in the world—why, then, they know they are in love. You just know it; that's all."

* * * * * * *

"Once we hit out we'll sure have some hell runnin'," Shorty said dismally.

"The place is a big trap," Smoke agreed.

From the crest of a bald knob they gazed out over Snass' snowy domain.

"What's eatin' me is Danny McCan," Shorty confided to Smoke. "He's a weak brother on any trail. But he swears he knows the way out to the westward, and so we got to pull up with him or you'll sure get yours. It's a-comin' to you straight down the pike."

"What is?"

"You ain't heard the news? The bachelors told me. They just got the word. Tonight it comes off, though it's months ahead of the calendar."

"I'm waiting to hear."

"Well, Danny's wife just told the bachelors. An' the bachelors told me, of course, that the maidens' fires is due to be lighted tonight. That's all. Now how do you like it?"

"I don't get your drift, Shorty."

"Don't, eh? Why, it's plain open and shut. They's a skirt after you, an' that skirt is goin' to light a fire, an' that skirt's name is Labiskwee. Oh, I've been watchin' her watch you when you ain't lookin'. She ain't never lighted her fire. She said she wouldn't marry a Indian. An' now, when she lights her fire, it's a cinch it's my poor old friend Smoke."

"It sounds like a syllogism," Smoke said with a sinking heart, reviewing Labiskwee's actions of the past several days.

"Cinch is shorter to pronounce," Shorty returned. "An' that's always the way—just as we're workin' up our getaway along comes a skirt to complicate everything. Hey! Listen!"

Three ancient squaws had halted midway between the bachelors' camp and the camp of McCan, and the oldest was declaiming in shrill falsetto:

"Labiskwee, the daughter of Snass, the Rainmaker, the great chief, lights her first maidens' fire tonight. Maka, the daughter of Owits, the Wolf Runner"—

The recital ran through the names of a dozen maidens, and then the three heralds tottered on their way to make announcement at the next fires.

The bachelors, who had sworn youthful oaths to speak to no maiden, were uninterested in the approaching ceremony, and to show their disdain they made preparations for immediate departure on a mission set them by Snass and upon which they had planned to start the following morning. Not satisfied with the old hunters' estimates of the caribou, Snass had decided that the run was split. The task set the bachelors was to scout to the north and west in quest of the second division of the great herd.

Smoke, troubled by Labiskwee's fire lighting, announced that he would accompany the bachelors. But first he talked with Shorty and with McCan.

"You be there on the third day, Smoke," Shorty said. "We'll have the outfit an' the dogs."

"But remember," Smoke cautioned, "if there is any slipup in meeting me you keep on going and get out to the Harsh Tongued, With Bitter, Venomous Eyes, She Cursed Him.

Yukon. That's flat. If you make it you can come back for me in the summer. If I get the chance I'll make it and come back for you."

McCan, standing by his fire, indicated with his eyes a rugged mountain where the high western range outjutted on the open country.

"That's the one," he said, "a small stream on the south side. We go up it. On the third day you meet us. We'll pass by on the third day. Anywhere you tap that stream you'll meet us or our trail."

But the chance did not come to Smoke on the third day. The bachelors had changed the direction of their scout, and while Shorty and McCan plodded up the stream with their dogs Smoke and the bachelors were sixty miles to the northeast picking up the trail of the second caribou herd.

Several days later they came back to the big camp. A squaw ceased from wailing by a fire and darted up to Smoke. Harsh tongued, with bitter, venomous eyes, she cursed him, waving her hands toward a silent, fur wrapped form that still lay on the sled which had hauled it in.

What had happened Smoke could only guess, and as he came to McCan's fire he was prepared for a second cursing. Instead, he saw McCan himself industriously chewing a strip of caribou meat.

"I'm not a fightin' man," he whiningly explained. "But Shorty got away, though they're still after him. He surely put up a fight. He plugged two bucks that'll get around all right. An' he croaked one square through the chest."

"Yes, I know," Smoke answered. "I just met the widow."

"Old Snass'll be wantin' to see you," McCan added. "Them's his orders. Soon as you come in you was to go to his fire. I ain't squealed. You don't know nothin'. Keep that in mind. Shorty went off on his own hook along with me."

At Snass' fire Smoke found Labiskwee. She met him with eyes that shone with such softness and tenderness as to frighten him.

"I'm glad you didn't try to run away," she said. "You see, I"— She hesitated, but her eyes didn't drop. They swam with a light unmistakable. "I lighted my fire, and of course it was for you. It has happened. I like you better than everybody else in the world. Better than my father I love. It is very strange. I love as Francesca loved, as Iseult loved. Old Four Eyes spoke true. Indians do not love this way. But my eyes are blue, and I am white. We are white, you and I."

Smoke had never been proposed to in his life, and he was unable to meet the situation. Worse, it was not even a proposal. His acceptance was taken for granted. So thoroughly was it all arranged in Labiskwee's mind, so warm was the light in her eyes that he was amazed that she did not throw her arms around him and rest her head on his shoulder. Then he realized, despite her candor of love, that she did not know the pretty ways of love. Among the primitive savages such ways did not obtain. She had had no chance to learn.

She prattled on, chanting the happy burden of her love, while he strove to grip himself in the effort somehow to wound her with the truth. And then Snass strode in to the fire through the falling snowflakes, and Smoke's opportunity was lost.

"Good evening," Snass burred gruffly. "Your partner has made a mess of it. I am glad you had better sense."

"You might tell me what's happened," Smoke urged.

The flash of white teeth through the stained beard was not pleasant. "Certainly. I'll tell you. Your partner has killed one of my people. That snivelling shrimp, McCan, deserted at the first shot. He'll never run away again. But my hunters have got your partner in the mountains, and they'll get him. He'll never make the Yukon basin. As for you, from now on you sleep at my fire. And there'll be no more scouting with the young men. I shall have my eye on you."

Smoke's new situation at Snass' fire was embarrassing. He saw more of Labiskwee than ever. In its sweetness and innocence the frankness of her love was terrible. Her glances were love glances. Every look was a caress. A score of times he nerved himself to tell her of Joy Gastell, and a score of times he discovered that he was a coward.

The damnable part of it was that Labiskwee was so delightful. She was good to look upon. Despite the hurt to his self esteem of every moment spent with her, he pleasured in every such moment. For the first time in his life he was really learning woman, and so clear was Labiskwee's soul, so appalling in its innocence and ignorance, that he could not misread a line of it. All the pristine goodness of her sex was in her, uncluttered by the conventionality of knowledge or the deceit of self protection.

And Smoke learned about himself. He remembered back to all he knew of Joy Gastell and he knew that he loved her. Yet he delighted in Labiskwee. And what was this feeling of delight but love? He could demean it by no less a name. Love it was. Love it must be. And he was shocked to the roots of his soul by the discovery of this polygamous strain in his nature.

"There must be many women in the world," she said one day. "And women like men. Many women must have liked you. Tell me."

He did not reply.

"Tell me," she insisted, "is it not so?"

"I have never married," he evaded.

"And there is no one else? No other Iseult out there beyond the mountains?"

Then it was that Smoke knew himself a coward. He lied. Reluctantly he did it, but he lied. He shook his head with a slow, indulgent smile, and in his face was more of fondness than he dreamed as he noted Labiskwee's swift joy transfiguration.

He excused himself to himself. His reasoning was deceitful beyond dispute, and yet he was not Spartan enough to strike this child woman a quivering heart stroke.

Snass, too, was a perturbing factor in the problem. Little escaped his keen black eyes, and he spoke significantly.

"No man cares to see his daughter married," he said to Smoke. "At least, no man of imagination. Just the same in the natural order of life Margaret must marry some time."

A pause fell. There was a burst of chiding and silvery laughter from Labiskwee's tent, where she played with a new caught wolf cub. A spasm of pain twitched Snass' face.

"I can stand it," he muttered grimly. "Margaret must be married, and it is my fortune, and hers, that you are here. I had little hopes of Four Eyes. McCan was so hopeless I turned him over to a squaw who had lighted her fire twenty seasons. If it hadn't been you it would have been an Indian. Libash might have become the father of my grandchildren."

And then Labiskwee came from her tent to the fire, the wolf cub in her arms, drawn, as by a magnet, to gaze upon the man in her eyes the love that art had never taught her to hide.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

We are often told that everything depends upon the "point of view." This is well illustrated in the account given us last Wednesday in The Press, of the Suffrage hearing in Trenton by Mrs. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association.

A representative body of the women of New Jersey Opposed to Woman Suffrage attended that hearing, not with the idea of opposing the proposed amendment, but with the design of presenting to the legislators the many reasons why they should refuse at the polls to force the vote on the vast majority of women in this State, who prefer to retain their present freedom from political entanglements.

It was therefore a litle disconcerting in presenting our side of the case to be asked to dwell on the question of the passage of the amendment only, but such embarrassment was speedily removed when Dr. Shaw took the floor. She quoted from Franklin, she quoted from Jefferson, she informed us that women were human being! (So are babies!) She wandered from the Pacific coast to the Atlantic, cheered all the way by the noisy enthusiasm of her sympathizers. So much for the Suffragists refraining from propoganda!

As to the sarcastic reference to Mr Matthews' sense of honor, it betrays a curious lack of appreciation of the true meaning of words, and reminds me of the story of a bright and clever young woman who announced before company one day that she was thankful for her good command of language. "Excuse me," said her father, "you are quite mistaken, you have not a command of language, but a very good flow of words." Mrs. Feickert, with probably other Suffragists, failed to see Mr. Matthews point. He reminded us that while the convention had pledged itself to certain legislation, it merely favored the passage of the Woman Suffrage resolution, thereby permitting a certain latitude in the action of individuals.

For the benefit of those who are not privileged to know Mr. Matthews it affords me great pleasure to say that both the public and private life of the gentleman in question will stand the most rigid investigation, and that his reputation for integrity and honor is above reproach. It is rather an unfortunate thing that because one holds honest convictions in opposition to Woman Suffrage that it should lay him open to constant derogatory remarks and bitter insinuations. However, this is playing politics, and gives us an idea of the uplifting effect the struggle for the ballot is having on the women seeking it.

Although we have become more or less accustomed to the association of the red flag with the yellow "Votes for Women," it was astounding and almost incredible when the Suffragists introduced as one of their speakers a representative of the Socialist party, a political organization which most of us regard as a menace to the country. He told us that while their advocacy of Woman Suffrage might be a temporary setback to their cause, they were willing to endure it for the sake of principle—like the monkey who was willing to wait for his chestnuts till the cat should pull them out of the fire! This last simile, needless to say, is not his.

Remembering the assurance of Senator Read that voting for the amendment was no expression of sympathy with or opposition to "Votes for Women," we look forward hopefully to the day when this question will be decided according to the will of the majority of those most deeply concerned.

FOR WOOL OR SILK.

This design would be very pretty for a light wool or silk frock. The softly gathered skirt is especially adapted for such material. The old fashion of trimming with bands of silk or velvet has returned with the wide skirt and very pretty it is. A quaint effect is achieved in this by the use of chiffon for sleeves and yoke. This appears also as the shirred vest crossed and held in place by velvet bows and outlined by bead passementerie motifs. The blouse is shirred at the waistline and the shirring held by narrow bands of velvet ribbon. Two graduated rows of this ribbon trim the bottom of the full skirt.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Sabina and Bronner, recognized in vaudeville circles as being one of the most expert dancing teams now before the public, will head the bill at Proctor's Theatre for the first half of next week, opening Monday. This clever pair demonstrate the newest steps as no other exponents can do them, at the same time affording an extremely appreciable entertaining act. They will be seconded on the bill by Raymonde, a "big time" artist, who leaves the audience to guess "Is it a he, or, Is it a she?" The remainder of the offering comprises Laird and Thompson, singing and dancing out of the ordinary, Charles and Ada Latham, comedy variety, and Louis Leo, equilibrist. Continuing the excellent series of feature photoplays, Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson will offer "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" at all of the performances of Monday and Tuesday. This production is in six parts and presents Alice Hagan Rice's lovable story even in a more comprehensive manner than was provided by the book or stage version. So far as is possible, the members of the original cast were secured to interpret the leading roles and none of the action has been lost in transmitting the characters to the "movie" sheet.

Animal Jingles
FOR LITTLE FOLKS
BY ALICE CRAW GALL

Mother McGrew and Gerald Giraffe

A most awkward thing was young Gerald Giraffe;
Just to see him walk 'round made the animals laugh.
He bumped and he stumbled around everywhere,
Till Mother McGrew was almost in despair.

To play games with him was no pleasure at all,
Because he was certain to stumble and fall;
He stepped on his playmates and banged into trees
Till he black-and-blued every last one of his knees.

He stepped on his feet when he went out to play,
And he fell against things in a terrible way.
And all of his trouble was just because he Couldn't learn to watch where he was going, you see.

Till finally Old Mother McGrew said, "I fear
I really will have to do something severe;
If you won't remember to watch where you go,
I think I will just have to make your neck grow."

"With your head up so high, you can't fail to be A whole lot more careful in walking," said she.
She gave him a tap with her wand on the head,
And his neck grew a yard or more, just as she said.

Perhaps in a circus you've seen a Giraffe,
And the length of his neck has, I'm sure, made you laugh.
We would not want one at all like it, I know,
So let's all be careful and watch where we go.

Household Hints..

UP-TO-DATE RECIPES

Escaloped Oysters—Crush and roll several handfuls of Boston crackers. Put a layer in bottom of buttered pudding dish. Wet this with mixture of oyster liquor and milk, slightly warmed. Next a layer of oysters. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, and lay small bits of butter upon them. Another layer of moistened crumbs and so on till dish is full. Let top layer be crumbs thicker than the rest. Beat an egg into milk you pour over them. Put bits of butter thickly over it, cover dish, set in oven, bake half hour. This is for one quart oysters and little more than one pint of milk.

Baked Beans With Pork Sausage—Parboil one quart beans. Put in bean pot, add about six tablespoons tomatoes; stir together with salt. Have about eight small pork sausages. Bake beans about two hours in slow oven, then put sausage on top and bake brown. Looks nice and tastes good.

Meat Balls—One can tomatoes, two onions choped fine, garlic or cayenne to taste. Put over fire to heat. Mix together 1½ pounds hamburg steak, one-half loaf stale bread soaked and drained, one egg, pepper and salt. Roll into balls size of an egg and drop into tomatoes. Cook three-fourths hour.

Raisin Pie—Soak half package seeded raisins in large cup cider over night. Either sweet or hard cider may be used, no sweetening need be added if sweet cider is used, but a little may be added if hard cider is used. Just before putting in crusts add teaspoonful cornstarch, stir well and bake in quick oven. There were a umbenr of good flaky pie crust recipes in recent issues of this pake.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Inexpensive Storm Door — Get enough building paper, cut exactly to fit screen, at 1 cent per foot. Sew on with darning needle and wraping cord to inside of screen, using stitches three inches long. Take three yards of slater's felt (3 cents). Put it on screen and let it project over front edge of screen. Take 1 cent's worth of one-inch strips pink pater and put around door and tack one inch from edge of door. The cost is about 15 cents.

To Clean Gas Globes—Set globes in dish pan filled with cold water (be sure globes are covered with water), put in handful of salsoda and a little soap (use ammonia if soda is not handy); bring to a boil and as soon as cool enough to be handled dry globes quickly one at a time (leave in water till ready to dry). This is a good way ta get that brown off that shows so plainly on the globes. They will not crack if put in cold water. Try doing this to new globes; it will temper them and they last longer.

Use clasp fasteners on cushion covers that are washed frequently; saves time of sewing them every time they are washed, also gives cushion a very neat appearance.

BOXES FOR GOWNS

Gown boxes are shown with all the paraphernalia for upholstering in a few moments, including the pillows. Even steam radiator book shelves and draperies are shown which fit over the coils and look exactly like a bookcase, at the same time covering the radiator. Four coils can be made to look as well as fourteen by having a longer board made with the curtains attached.

Glimpses of Married Life
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Marie Schontz was sitting in a little summer house perched on the side of the Swiss mountains, behind a cottage that occupied the only piece of level ground in sight. The air was very still and the tinkle of the cowbells floated up to her on the soft evening air. A wonderful sunset painted the opposite sky and mountains and was reflected in a lake at their feet. Over the shoulder of a hill in a blue-black sky the moon hung like a great copper shield. Voices floated up from the garden directly under her. Suddenly the mention of her name riveted her attention.

"I tell you, Gustav," said the voice in rising excitement, "if you marry her you fasten a burden to your life. You're a poor boy; she is sickly and would have no liking for housework even if she were strong."

"Mother, she was strong before she went to South America as a governess. That wretched climate undermined her health. I tried to keep her from going, but she would not listen," he added resentfully.

"If she would not listen before marriage, you need not expect her to do it after the ceremony. Marry one of our own Swiss girls who are used to our ways; an outlander will never fit in our home, and this home is all there is for both of us. I have no other place to go. Now mind," she called after him as he walked away. "You will regret it if you do not take my advice."

The girl flushed and paled by turns as she listened. The suddenness of it all had made her unable to move. She sank back on the bench and buried her face in her hands. "Oh, why did I stop here on my way home," shre moaned, "just up from a bed of fever. Yet how could I go home without seeing him, after being gone a year—such a lonely, homesick year, listening to a foreign tongue—that I might earn the money to furnish our home."

A storm of sobs shook her slender frame. "And now Gustav cares so little for me that he had not a word to say in my defense when mother assailed me."

So absorbed was she in her grief that she did not hear approaching footsteps and not until Gustav's hand touched her shoulder did she look up. His face looked white in the half light. He sat down beside her and took her hand, but she pulled it away and sprang to her feet.

"I heard what was said in the garden. I could not help it," she panted. "I am glad I know how you feel about it before it is too late."

"Sit down, Marie. Let us talk it over quietly," he said, pulling her to a seat beside him and putting his arm around the quivering little body. "If you had not gone to South America all this would not have happened," he began tactlessly.

"You know just why I went to South America: because I thought I could help our finances by doing it. You insist on talking as if I had taken a pleasure journey. The only thing I regret is that I did not go straight home, that I stopped here to be slighted and picked to pieces by your mother," said the girl passionately.

"Look here, Marie, we are getting nowhere this way," he began. He stopped and waited for her to get quiet, holding her close in his arms the while. Finally he said: "You must remember that I love you. If you can keep that in mind it may be possible to talk things over without breaking everything beautiful that has come into my life."

"Is it true that we shall all have to live together?" she asked. "I thought you were studying for a profession."

"I shall never ask you to live with my mother. It is as she says: you have been brought up differently and could never understand one another. We are working people and my only fear is that I shall not be able to earn enough to keep you in the style in which you are accustomed to live. These hands can never do hard work," he said, lifting the girl's fever-wasted hand and putting it to his lips.

"I am not afraid of work, and I know how to do all kinds of housework. When I get strong again you must come to Danzig and meet my people, and I will do all of the cooking while you are there," and she laid her head on his shoulder.

"All the hard problems of our future do not have to be settled now," he continued. "I am sure we can work things out, if you are willing to be 'wail's little girl.'"

SUCCESSFUL SERIES OF FRIDAY MORNING MUSICALES

The successful inauguration of the series of "Friday Morning Musicales," at The Biltmore, New York, on Friday, has aroused interest in the forthcoming programs, the next of which is to be given on Thursday morning, February 11, instead of February 12, in the grand ballroom of The Biltmore, at the east end of the hotel on the twenty-second floor. The appearance of Miss Farrar and Messrs. Pablo Casals and Luca Botta established a standard that is to be consistently maintained throughout the series.

Negotiations are now pending between the management of these musicales and three distinguished artists, for their appearance at the next Friday morning musicale. They comprise musicians in both vocal and instrumental fields of the musical art, and when their names are announced they will serve as a further guaranty of the maintenance of the quality of attainment present at the introductory concert.

Since nearly three-quarters of your life is spent in your shoes—why not get all the comfort out of them that science provides. If you suffer from broken down arches, pains in the ankles or legs, or "foot rheumatism" you need a pair of

"RESTO" Comfort Shoes

Their especial features are:

1. A flexible shank which exercises and re-sets misplaced foot muscles without the use of stiff metal arch supports.

2. A Broad Heel, to support the weight of the body and re-set misplaced arch bones.

"IFS"

The Ifs of Life usually relate to failure, not to success. When a man fails, he usually begins to think of what might have been if only he had done this or if he had done the other thing.

The Ifs of Failure should be provided against in the beginning—and with insurance, will be, when placed thru this office.
